JUNIOR PETES BEHAVED WELL IN HARD GOING WITH BOWMANVILLE

Bowmanville's good bunch of coming juniors couldn't stand the pace set by the Petes at Brock Street rink last night and had to go home with the short end of the 8 to 1 score. They were behind all night both as to scoring and the positions they occupied on the ice, as the local lads were superior in speed and were much better stick handlers. The figures at the end of the first period showed 2 to 0 for the homesters and they were extended to 7 to 1 when the teams left the slush and water for the second breathing spell. The weather man was most unkind and it looked like a breach of the "Cruelty to Hockey Players Act" to send the teams away under such wretched playing conditions. The ice surface got the better of Dr. Jerry Laflamme, his nibs the referee, and for several minutes of the opening period the husky dentist from the Queen City amused the crowd by his frantic efforts to secure a firm toehold in the stuff that was supposed to be ice. It was revenge for the crowd, who had been kept waiting till 9 o'clock for the start of the game. The O.H.A. in the instructions to the sturdy dentist neglected to inform him that Peterborough fans were tired of long waits, and, as the arbiter came through on the "local," he could not get to the rink sooner than nine o'clock.

Was Clean Hockey

Despite the disadvantages under which the players performed, the game had its merits. The Bowmanville boys put up a sportsmanlike exhibition, never attempting anything but clean hockey—a point that was not lost sight of by the locals, who voted the visitors a good bunch. They are new to the O.H.A. and the game last night was their first real tryout of the season. The majority of the seven are eligible for another year in junior O.H.A. company and from the experience they will gain this winter, they should be more formidable another season. Every player is a worker and each plays his position, this being particularly true of the defence. The visitors were weak on shooting, only getting one counter in Murray's nets, Williams, a cub, registereding the tally in the second period after he recovered the rubber following the breakup of a raid on the Peterborough nets.

Petes Look Good

The Petes are a tidy looking team with a quartette of fast forwards and a good defence— Montgomery and McIntyre showing fair work in blocking and extra good offensive. In the latter department Montgomery showed up prominently and figured in the scoring, the Petes' first tally being registered by him on a rink-end rush. Little Murray in the nets, whose stature barely reaches the top iron, behaved well for a debutante. True, he had very little to do, but there were a couple of hard close shots turned aside neatly. Freddie Graham, Cherett and Bartley of last season's seven, and McFee, a newcomer, were prominent.

Scoring Summary

Peterborough	Montgomery	5.00
Peterborough	Cherett	2.00

Second Period

Peterborough	Montgomery	4.00
Peterborough	McFee	.30
Peterborough	Graham	4.00
Bowmanville	Williams	5.00
Peterborough	Graham	3.00

Third Period

Peterborough	Montgomery	4.00
Peterborough	Cherett	.30

The teams:—

Shots on the Netting

O. H. A. will please observe the change in the C.P.R. time-table.

The war clubs will swing on the next referee who introduces himself at nine bells.

"Murray" called out referee Laflamme in the Petes' dressing room when inspecting the certificates. "There he is sitting on the orange peel," jocularly remarked Carl Schmuck.

SCOUTS FOR PRO. TEAMS AFTER LOCAL PLAYERS

No Likelihood of 247th Battalion Talent Going to the Professional Ranks.

The fans are becoming disturbed over the rumors to the effect that N. H. A. scouts are making the acquaintanceship of several players on the battalion team with the object of securing their services in the professional game. Adame and Armstrong are mentioned as the constellations under which the "pro." scouts have displayed tempting offers.

The fans may rest assured that the local talent will stick. All are in the ranks of the 247th and will there remain.

CUP DONATED FOR 'CAYGEON CURLERS

BOBCAYGEON, Jan. 10—Maurice Welsh and M. A. First Jewish Major-General

By the promotion of John Monash to the rank of Major-General, a professing Jew for the first time in Anglo-Jewish history attains to that rank. There have been British generals before of Jewish birth, but no Jew has hitherto risen to that rank and at the same time remained a member of the synagogue. Major-General Monash had for some time previously been acting as a Brigadier-General, but otherwise no English Jew had risen above the military rank of Colonel.

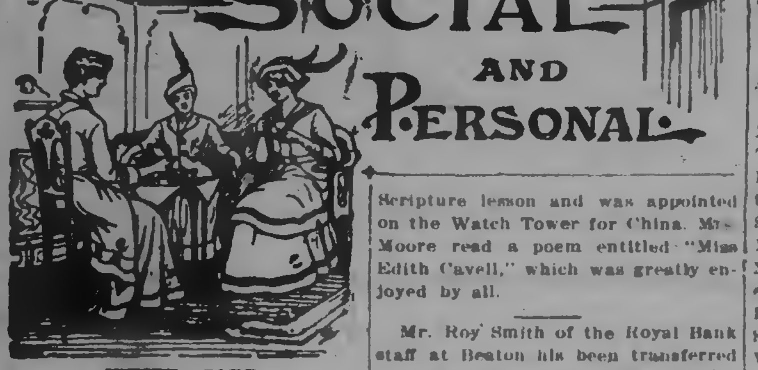
THE BANK OF TORONTO

E. J. M. VANSTON, Manager.



SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WHITE—CARR

Monday morning, Jan. 8, at St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, a pretty wedding was celebrated when Miss Kathleen Carr, daughter of Mrs. H. Carr, Toronto, was united in marriage to Mr. Elrick White, Jr., of Peterborough, manager of Woolworth's store, Port Arthur.

The engagement is announced between the Marquis of Hartington, eldest son of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, and Lady Mary Cecil, second daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury. The Marquis of Hartington, who was incapacitated during the Gallipoli campaign, is at present stationed in Paris, but hopes to return to the front soon.

Mr. C. H. Byers of Oakville has been appointed manager of the Bank of Toronto at Keene.

Miss Annie Festeau, a former resident of Peterborough but now of Ottawa, is in the city, renewing old acquaintances and is the guest of Miss C. Kenneally, Sherbrooke St.

The at home held under the auspices of St. Peter's Ladies' Aid on Monday night in St. Alphonses' Lyceum, was a financial as well as a social success, the amount realised being $63.25, which, in view of the short notice given of the date of the at home, was very gratifying. The gentleman's prize, a silk umbrella, donated by Rev. Fr. Phelan, was won by Mr. J. McDonald, of the Sacred Heart parish, and the ladies' prize, a beautiful piece of handpainted china, donated by Miss M. Lynch, Park St., was won by Miss Marguerite Morrill.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of George St. Church met in the church parlor on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Kendry occupied the chair. Mrs. (Dr.) Harvey read the Scripture lesson and was appointed on the Watch Tower for China. Mrs. Moore read a poem entitled "Miss Edith Cavell," which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Mr. Roy Smith of the Royal Bank staff at Beaton has been transferred to Winnipeg. He is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith, 582 Bolivar Street.

St. Peter's Patriotic Club will hold their weekly tea tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon. The hostesses will be Mrs. Jos. White and Mrs. W. J. O'Brien. All the members of the club are asked to come to work promptly at 2 o'clock and remain till 9, if possible to do so. Everybody in the city is invited to tea, which will be served from 4:30 to 7 o'clock.

Mr. W. Brooks, of Young's Point, was a visitor to the city today.

The at home and musicale held at the home of Mrs. H. O. Fisk, McDonnel St., yesterday afternoon and evening by the Progressive Club was a splendid success. Those who assisted were: Mrs. Walker, who presided at the tea table, Mrs. W. Rogers, Mrs. Birks, the Misses Nora and Margery Hatton, Margaret Eastwood, Seaborne, Hamilton, Celia Dunsford and Georgie Stevenson, and little Helen Fiske at the door. Amongst those who attended were Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Mrs. Goodwill, Miss E. Irwin, Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, the Misses Dixon, Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. R. Yeamen, Miss H. MacLaren, Miss Hazel Eaton, Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. E. Payne, Mrs. Weldon, the Misses Hall, Mrs. Gus Hay, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. T. A. S. Hay, Mrs. Schneider, Miss B. Loucks, Miss Quartermaine and Mrs. Fred White. The musical numbers, contributed by Mrs. Cameron Wilson, Miss A. Logan, Miss Helen MacLaren and Miss Gladman were very much enjoyed.

Mrs. A. Rogers Collins, who has been the guest of Mrs. Walter Rogers, Park Street, returned this morning to her home in Mount Forest.

Mr. H. McElwain, Winnipeg, and Mrs. John Mulverhill, Toronto, were in the city to attend the funeral of the late Mr. McElwain.

BIRTH

BULLIED —On Wednesday, Jan. 10, 1917, to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Bullied, 473 Romaine Street, a daughter.

"MOTHER LOVE" AT THE GRAND

A girl of sixteen fell a victim to the wiles of the deceiver and to hide her shame buried herself among strangers. The boy born to her was raised by another and kept in ignorance of his parentage, the mother working to support herself and her child. She marries her wealthy employer and for twenty-three years keeps her secret as only a woman can, helping her son through college in the meantime. When he graduates she uses her influence to secure him the position of secretary to her husband in order to have him near her.

The young man complicates matters by falling in love with his half sister and owing to the natural opposition of the mother the young couple decide to elope. The frenzied mother pursues them and stops them just in time to prevent the ceremony. She cannot however, induce the young man to change his mind until she discloses their relationship. The husband favors the union and this fact renders it necessary to reveal the secret to him also.

This is the story upon which is based the play, "Mother Love" which was admirably presented at the Grand last night.

Miss Augusta Perry, as Eleanor Trent, the unfortunate woman with the secret, gave in her difficult role an exhibition of anguish so apparently genuine that she appeared to grow old during the few hours' action required by the play. The lesson of the play is that a mother will steal or lie for her child or to save her husband and if ther is any mercy for sin this is one that is likely to be forgiven.

Application to Parliament

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Corporation of the City of Peterborough will apply to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act for the following purposes:—

1.—To authorize the Council of the City of Peterborough to purchase Motor Driven Fire Apparatus, with the necessary equipment, and to issue Debentures to pay for the same, to an amount not exceeding $10,000.

2.—To amend Section 9 of Chapter 82 of the Statutes of 1907, so as to provide for the more expeditious collection of the special rates therein referred to.

3.—To authorize the Council or the Peterborough Utilities Commission to instal sanitary conveniences in any building, the owner of which is unable to pay the expense of same at once, or who has neglected to instal same and to make the necessary connections therefrom to the sewage and water works system and to pay the cost therof and collect the same, including interest, in equal quarterly instalments from the owner of such building, and to provide that such cost shall be a charge on the said building and the land on which the same is situated until fully paid and that if any of said instalments are not paid they may be collected by action against the owner or added to the Colector's roll and collected in like manner as Municipal taxes, with authority to the said Council to issue Debentures to meet the cost of said work

4.—In the event of the City acquiring the plant, property and business of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, that the Peterborough Utilities Commission shall have the control and management thereof, with power to maintain, operate, extend and renew the same and that the said Peterborough Radial Railway shall when acquired be a public utility within the meaning of The Public Utilities Act and the provisions of the said Act, and of section 3 of Chapter 65 of the Acts passed in the year 1915 shall apply to said Railway and to the said Peterborough Utilities Commission, and their duties, authorities and powers in connection with the same, and that the said Peterborough Utilities Commision, with the consent of the Council shall have authority to borrow money for the purposes of the railway and shall have such other powers in connection with the management and maintenance of the Railway as the Council may by By-Laws confer.

5.—To authorise the Council, without the assent of the Electors, to borrow such sums not exceeding $10,000.00 in addition to such amounts already provided or authorised, which may be required or needed to satisfy the amount of the award, costs, expenses and disbursements created or incurred by reason of the arbitration between the City of Peterborough and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, and the litigation resulting therefrom, and also the costs of the purchase of such property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, as was a part of the plant of the said Company, outside of the City of Peterborough and adjacent thereto, and to author'se the issue of Debentures of the Corporation therefor.

6.—The amount of the rateable property of the Municipality is the sum of $11,564,330.00 and the existing Debenture debt exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates is the sum of $1,938,350.59 of which the following are the particulars: Waterworks $600,000.00, Electric Lighting and Power Plant $120,000.00, Local Improvements $344,375.28, Public Schools $253,650.00 Collegiate Institute $72,335.31, Protestant Home $10,000.00, General City Debentures $827,100.00.

MR. GILLESPIE ACTIVE IN WEST SIMCOE CAMPAIGN

Services as Speaker and Organizer in Demand With Liberal Party---How he Secures Volunteer Workers.

G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., has been in West Simcoe since the beginning of the week, up to his eyes in the campaign to elect a successor to the late James Duff. The local representative for West Peterborough is, as a matter of course, doing his best on behalf of Isaac Scott, the Liberal candidate, who, like himself, is a farmer.

Mr. Gillespie is an effective platform speaker, especially in a rural constituency, where his intimate knowledge of farming and the requirements of that portion of the community make him popular with the voters. His services in this capacity are constantly in demand. He was one of the most active party workers in the bye-election in Peel a year ago when the Conservative party was purged of the membership of Mr. J. R. Fallis.

But it is as a quiet worker that Mr. Gillespie shines. He is noted as the campaigner who can arouse the active interests of the voters in a campaign without the incentive of money, getting them into the midst of the fight for the pure love of the game.

Times have changed within the past three decades. Campaign methods are vastly different from what they were thirty years ago. Constituencies are so longer purchased by the wholesale and delivered to this or that candidate. In those days, now gone forever, the purchasable voters really controlled the election. As they were purchased they voted and as they voted the election usually went. The only trouble with them was that as an element they were uncertain. When they were bought it was no cinch that they would remain true to their bargain.

In the days referred to, the man who carried the bag passed through the constituencq. Some "honest" worker was recommended to him, and with the latter he left a sum of money with the understanding that it ws to be placed among the faltering where it was calculated to do the most good.

After the election the polling subdivision may or may not have gone according to the estimates, but very often the local man who had been entrusted with the boodle built a new barn, purchased a team of horses or otherwise added to his visible assets. Many a commodious building stands today as the only monument in memory of a system that has passed out of favor.

Mr. Gillespie is a disciple of the new political cult. His forte, as before hinted, is to get men interested sufficiently to work during the campaign and at the polls on election day without money or price. He believes that the legitimate expenses of a campaign should be met by voluntary contributions from the voters and not by large donations from the interests. Every man who is interested in a contest, even to the extent of $1, is likely to do his best to hve his money win in the game in which he has invested it.

CONSIDERATION DUE THEM SAY MINISTERIAL MEMBERS

In Problem Attached to High Cost of Living.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 11—The regular monthly meeting of the Ministerial Association was held in the board room of the Methodist Church Millbrook, on Monday.

The meeting was largely attended and the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Rev. G. I. Craw, Springville; vice-president, Rev. W. H. Higgs, Millbrook; sec.-treas., Rev. W. T. Wickett Fraserville.

Among the matters discussed was the question of ministerial support in view of the increased cost of living.

After full consideration of the subject the following resolution was unanimously passed:

That, whereas the cost of living has enormously increased during the last two years, so that the purchasing power of the dollar only amounts to about 67c, and whereas the people generally are enjoying unusual prosperity, good crops and better prices than ever before known, the association, considering all the circumstances, feels that for the efficient discharge of the duties of the ministry, and for the providing of recruits for the ministry in the future, some consideration is due them, so that they may continue to give their whole time to the ministry of the Word, and the work of the church,

Therefore they decide to commend this important matter to the prayerful consideration of the respective congregations.

PREMIER'S REPLY TO THE "DRYS"

Provincial Legislation Sufficient

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—Demanding absolute prohibition of the manufacture, sale or importation of liquor in Canada as a necessary measure, representatives of temperance forces of all parts of the country today waited on Sir Robert Borden and presented a resolution setting forth their views on the subject. They asked for a prohibitory law by Act of Parliament o be repeaed only on a referendum after the war and not earlier than three years after its passage. In case the Government decided on a referendum preliminary to legislation, they asked that it be taken before June, the result to be effective three months afterwards.

The Premier said while the best possible case apeared to have been made out, it was not absolutely convincing. The Federal law of last session amplifying provincial legislation could effectively deal with the situation, he said. Where any province decided against the importation of liquor, all customs entries of it would be refused. As far as the manufacture was concerned the province could limit it to foreign export. He, however, assured the delegation that the most earnest consideration would be given to its demands.

Campaign Opens at Norwood Next Monday.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman will hold a series of recruiting meetings in the outlying towns and villages of this district, comencing next Monday at Norwood and Tuesday in Millbrook. At all of these meetings addresses will be delivered by well-known recruiting speakers and the 247th band will also be in attendance.

In each municipality clubs will be formed, to be known as the "One Hundred Club," and each member pledges himself to secure one recruit for the battalion. When this is done his obligation will cease. The idea is a good one and will find favor with the citizens generally.

Miss Tilly Mann, returned nurse, and six returned soldiers of Lindsay will be presented with engraved medals by the executive of the Soldiers Aid Commission of Lindsay.

Wins Military Cross

Capt. Jas. Ernest McAskill, who three years ago was assistant to Dr. Holdcroft, at Havelock, has been awarded the Military Cross for bravery at the front.

Condition Improved.

The numerous friends of Sergt. Alex. Gillespie will be glad to learn that an official report says his condition is improved. Sergt. Gillespie's name appears in the list of Canadian officers and non-coms. mentioned in despatches.

17 Letters from Soldiers

The president of the Kitchener League has recently received no less than 17 letters from soldiers in England and France, who send their thanks for gifts of socks and other comforts and supplies.

One Family's Part

LONDON, Jan. 11—A Scottish Canadian family's tragic service in the war became known on the departure from the Granville Canadian Hospital at Ramsgate of Nurse Murray and her brother, Corp. Murray, who wore three gold stripes on their sleeve. They are the only surviving children of Col. Murray, of Toronto, formerly of the Black Watch. Two of Col. Murray's sons were killed at Ypres, two fell on the Somme, and a younger daughter was killed by shell while a nurse at a Belgian clearing station.

At Canadian Base.

Major Keith Loch of the 93rd Battalion, is now in France, having arrived there on Dec. 24th after a very stormy passage across the channel. The letter, which was written on Christmas Day, states that he was at the Canadian base.

Souvenirs of War . . . .

The display of souvenirs from the battlefields of France in the north window of the Warne Drug Co. are creating much interest. They were sent home by Sergt. Sam Thomas of the 21st.

LINDSAY, Jan. 11.— Col. Glass, O.C. of the 252nd Battalion here, has received a cheque for $500 from Mrs. Timothy Eaton, to show her interest in the battalion, which bears the names of two of her nephews, Lieuts. Bishop. The money will in all probability be expended in purchasing a moving utcpleramihcan ing a moving picture machine for the purpose of stimulating recruiting meetings throughout the County of Victoria.

COL. ACKERMAN ADDRESSES THE ELEGIBLE MEN

SENDS PERSONAL LETTER TO YOUNG MEN OF THE COUNTY.

THEIR FIRST DUTY.

The following is a copy of a letter which Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, O. C. the 247th Battalion, is addressing to all the eligible young men in the outlying districts, and it will no doubt appeal to many:

Dear Sir:

Your name has been given to me as the name of a man apparently eligible for active service. If you are not eligible and know yourself that you are not, then this letter will not apply to you.

I have been entrusted with the work of recruiting a battalion, and the only way in which this can be done successfully is by securing the names of every available man and then personally pointing out to each individual reasons why he should enlist. The Prime Minister has given us his word that unless the remaining 120,000 men volunteer, conscription will have to be resorted to; so that if you are eligible you will be affected, anyway.

You should understand how serious the situation is at he present time, and must realize how you would feel if you were compelled to enlist as a conscript. I ask you, as man to man, to think this over very seriously, realizing that the eyes of every person in Canada are upon you. If you feel that you are medically unfit for service, go before the medical officer for examination, and if be finds you to be unfit for service, you will receive a rejected button.

In closing, I again appeal to you to enlist and take up your share of the responsibility in putting down a ruthless enemy of all mankind. I can give you my personal assurance that military life is both mentally and physically the greatest game in the world, and you have an opportunity of serving under officers who have served in France, been wounded, and are going back again.

Trusting you will treat this letter as a personal matter and favor me with a reply, I remain,

Yours truly,
C. H. ACKERMAN,
O. C. 247th Bn., C.E.F. Lt.-Col.

BRITISH ATTACK AT YPRES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—Army headquarters says British troops made an attack on German positions north of Ypres yesterday and penetrated defences at one point but were expelled by a counter-attack.

Other successes are reported in Roumania with the capture of about one thousand prisoners.

BRITISH WIN OUTSIDE TURK TOWN ON SINAI PENINSULA

Six Lines of Entrenchments Protecting Rafa Taken With Sixteen Hundred Prisoners.

FOE RELIEF FORCE WIPED OUT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The British have captured six lines of entrenchments protecting the Turkish town of Rafa on the Sinai Peninsula, taking 1,600 prisoners.

A Turkish relief force was destroyed.

Aafa is thirty miles southeast of Elarish, which was captured by the British on Dec. 22, and is just across the line in Palestine. Four mountain guns were taken. The number killed and known wounded is 600. The British force, which consisted of Anzac mounted troops and camel corps, left Elarish on Monday and fought all day Tuesday, when the Rafa positions were finally carried.

An official report issued in London last evening regarding operations in Mesopotamia says:

"The Indian division, advancing with great dash, yesterday attacked and captured the enemy's trenches on a front of 1,000 yards in the bend of the Tigris, on the right bank, northeast of Kut el Amara. Seven officers and 175 men were captured in the course of the operations.

"The enemy's trenches at Sannayat were bombarded on the same day, and his lines were successfully raided in three places."

The thermometer this morning was down to 16 degrees below zero. This is the coldest up to the present time, but may be lowered tonight by appearances. At noon the mercury stood exactly at the zero mark.

VILLAGE IS TAKEN BY RUSSIANS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 11—(Russian official statement): Russian front—in the region south of Lake Babit fighting continues. On Wednesday one of the villages to the east of the village of Kalnzem, which was stubbornly defended by Germans with a great number of machine guns, was taken by our detachments. Two enemy counter-attacks were repulsed. Three attacks by the enemy against our detachments situated six versts east of the village of Kalnzem were beaten back with great losses for the enemy. Under cover of a curtain of smoke the Germans attempted to attack our detachments occupying positions north-west of Ikskulla but they were dispersed by our fire.

CROWN PRINCE DEPRIVED OF MILITARY COMMAND

May Succeed Von Bissing as Governor of Belgium---He's Not Well.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A Daily News despatch from Paris reports the German Crown Prince has been deprived of all effective military command. He may go to Wiesbaden for treatment. It is also thought possible that he may be made governor of Belgium, succeeding Von Bissing.

MR. JAS. THOMPSON, M.L.A.

Jas. Thompson M.L.A. Seriously Hurt at Montieth.

Word reached Peterborough this afternoon of a serious accident to Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.L.A., of Havelock, in which the provincial member for West Peterborough had part of his left hand amputated and his leg and arm broken when he attempted to flag a train at Montieth.

Mr. Thompson was on a business trip to Northern Ontario.

FIVE LIVES ARE LOST IN FIRE

PARENTS OF FOUR VICTIMS ABSENT AT PARTY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—Four children of J. H. Leblanc, dentist, at 681 Notre Dame St. West, and Carmel Vendetta, a servant maid were burned to death at two o'clock this morning, when fire destroyed the Idealograph moving picture theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. Leblanc, whose apartment was in the same block, were out to a party. The children ranged from 2 to 11 years.

CORNWALLIS IS SUBMARINED IN MEDITERRANEAN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 11. — The British Admiralty ship Cornwallis has been sunk by a submarine.

The seaplane carrier Benmychree also has been sunk.

H. M. S. Cornwallis was sunk by an enemy submarine on Wednesday in the Mediterranean Sea. The captain and all the officers were saved, but there were thirteen men missing, and it is feared they were killed by the explosion, says an official statement.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1917

AS TO LIQUOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE REVIEW announced some days ago that it would accept no more contracts for liquor advertisements after the beginning of the present year, and this statement appears to have met with the general approval of our readers.

There are, however, a number of contracts still in existence, and these The Review is legally bound to carry out, or stand actions for damages brought by the parties interested.

The managers of this paper have written to the agents who made the contracts, asking that they agree to cancel the contracts at once. A number of replies have been received to the effect that if the principals to the transactions consent, the contracts will be cancelled and the advertisements withdrawn.

If this is done, the temperance people in this section of Ontario will have no ground for complaint so far as The Review is concerned. The very existence of the Ontario Government hangs on this issue, and every loyal Conservative paper should give every legitimate support to the Administration that risked so much in order to help out in the work of winning the war.

CARING FOR CHILDREN.

SHOULD PHYSICIANS use preventive methods to prevent the birth of illegitimate children? A Massachusetts physician last week declared that he believed it was the sentiment of progressive physicians that the medical profession was fulfilling a very important function by advocating a wider use of preventative methods, especially where the patient was obviously of the feeble-minded or epileptic type. It was his opinion that epileptic and feeble-minded women are frequently easy victims, and invariably give birth to illegitimate children, who inherit all the weak mental tendencies of the mother. The danger of allowing women of this type to give birth to children, he stated, has been shown repeatedly by investigation and study.

He said that he believed that the physician should exercise all his influence in preventing marriages between men and women who are mentally unfitted to be married. He likewise stated that just as much danger exists where men and women who suffer from moral diseases are allowed to marry. The whole problem, as he saw it, was one which had the largest and best interests of the State in mind, and which was advocated primarily to control the production of children who from birth might be State wards.

This physician is not likely to win many disciples to follow him in his new cult, as few people would care to advocate a policy of wholesale murder even if the public welfare was pleaded as an excuse.

Measures to prevent the marriage of diseased persons are all that is required. Mrs. Alice Rogers-Collins allude to this in an address in this city last week to the members of the Red Cross, and Rev. R. Pogue, in a sermon during the week of prayer, called attention to a new danger that threatens the generations of the future. Soldiers while in Europe will contract diseases, many of them the result of immorality, and these, in the event of their marriage, will be transmitted to their offspring.

Man's responsibility for the care and welfare of the child does not begin with the birth of the latter. Every child has a right to be born of healthy parents as well as to be born in wedlock.

In these days of investigation and improvement the human race is more neglected than are the lower animals. Eugenics are employed in the case of the latter, and the result is an improved class of horses and cattle, but, higher up in life, the halt, the lame, the blind and the morally diseased are permitted to marry and give in marriage as they will. And thus the sins of the parents fall upon the helpless children even to the third and fourth generation.

ARE WE NEAR AN ELECTION?

THE GOVERNMENT one week from today will meet Parliament, conscious of strong national support and with the record of a year of vigorous and efficient war effort to its credit. It has raised, trained, equipped and sent overseas since last session a number of men far beyond expectation of the stoutest hearts twelve months ago. It has financed all this huge effort without a cent of the vast stream of expenditure being diverted from its proper destination, and in a manner that has won and deserved the highest praise of the press and statesmen of Great Britain. Fulfilling its expectations and justifying its foresight and its faith in Canadian resources, its taxation policy has produced adequate revenues with a minimum of hardship and a fair degree of equity. And while burdened with the immediate and pressing problems of war, it has nevertheless found time to formulate measures for the welfare of returned and maimed soldiers on a scale of liberality consistent with the patriotic services they have rendered, as well as to effectively deal with other tasks whether foreign to, or remotely connected with, the war.

Fortified by such a strong position the course of the Government in the coming session is clear. It is quite prepared, and, in fact, has announced its determination, to ask for an extension of the parliamentary term, believing, as it has reason to believe, that the country is satisfied with its conduct of the war and has no desire for a change, especially when, at best, that change could only result in replacing the present Administration with discredited professional politicians of pre-1911 days. But, upon the other hand, if the Opposition sees fit to disregard the perilous situation in Europe, and, by refusing or haggling over an extension, seeks to embarrass the Administration and to weaken its conduct of the war, there is reason to believe that the Government would feel justified in testing its strength at the polls. Everything consistent with a regard to the duties of the war will be done to avoid an election, so far as the Government is concerned, but rather than have the national effort weakened by parliamentary obstruction in such a national crisis, Sir Robert Borden would hardly hesitate to immediately submit his record to the country.

TAFFY FOR THE VISITORS.

IT MUST BE the spirit of good fellowship alone, the hospitable desire to propitiate guests and make them feel at home, that induces any Ontario man to say, as so many of them did, at one of the numerous banquets tendered the Bonne Entente visitors from Quebec, that every child in this Province should be taught both the French and the English language. The reason given is that the business opportunities of future generations would be broadened by the possession of a working knowledge of both languages.

Every man in Ontario is not likely to have commercial dealings with Quebec in the future. Comparatively few would derive any practical benefit from a knowledge of French. The school life is too short to be cluttered up with more fads. The acquisition of the English language taxes the capacity of the average pupil in our public schools.

A knowledge of French would be an educational asset and so would a training in law, but comparatively few take up law as a profession. The same principle applies to medicine. Young men designed for commercial life require a special training. If this includes the learning of French and German, then they should be drilled in those languages just as they are instructed in bookkeeping or any other commercial branch.

The English language must be preserved in Ontario. There must be no compromise, and no attempt to place a foreign tongue on the same footing should be tolerated for a moment.

Regulation 17 is still in force, and its legality has been established by the highest tribunal in the land. That should suffice and end all this sapless discussion with regard to the use of French in our public schools.

WARNING THE PUBLIC.

THE BANK OF COMMERCE, in its usual letter to the public, warns Canadians that the present prosperity is due almost entirely to the abnormal conditions brought about by the war.

The conclusion of the war will no doubt occasion a readjustment of labor conditions, which may for a time cause more or less embarrassment, owing to the sudden cessation in the demand for munitions and other war requirements, combined with the return of the soldiers from the front, some of whom will naturally seek their former occupations. This will doubtless result in a period of low wages and surplus labor, and emphasizes the necessity for the exercise of thrift on the part of all who are reaping the benefit of the present abnormal prosperity.

There has been little change in the real estate position during the past year, farm properties having maintained their value, although, owing to the pressure of the bad season, there has been some tendency on the part of a few lease-holders in Southwestern Ontario to vacate their farms. Interest payments on mortgages have been up to the average, and there has been no appreciable increase in the demand for new loans. Urban properties have held their own with an increasing demand for the smaller class of houses, the rents for which have advanced. Business properties, office space, the larger stores and residences, however, are in little demand, and rentals have been reduced in ordr to attract tenants. Apart from supplying the demand for increased factory space and small houses, the building trade has been inactive, and 1917 does not hold out much prospect of improvement.

The principal factors affecting the general lines of manufacturing and trade in the province during the past year are:

(1) Increased output due to the demand arising out of military necessities, and to the increased purchasing power of the public.

(2) Increased cost of production, due (a) to the higher cost of labor and to the inferior quality of much of the help obtainable under present conditions; (b) to the higher cost of materials.

(3) The difficulty of advancing selling prices in proportion to the increase in cost of production, resulting in many lines in a smaller margin of profit, which in some degree counteracts the effect of the large turnover.

The increased purchasing power on the part of the public referred to above is due very largely to the fact that the tremendous orders for munitions and other supplies for military purposes which have been received have, directly or indirectly, affected every line of trade and manufacture in the country. The full force of this has only recently been felt. Last year's good crops also doubtless had their effect in enhancing the general prosperity.

If there is to be a commercial depression after the war, the people should provide against it by thrift and economy while wages are good and employment plentiful.

Where Electricity is Costly.

(Buffalo Express.)

Sir Adam Beck tells Fort Erie that it is paying three times as much for electric light and service as his home town, London. And it is added: "The rates in Fort Erie are the same as in Buffalo."

CAN A POLICEMAN LIVE ON A DIET THAT COSTS 25 CENTS A DAY?

Twelve policemen in New York have, for the public good, volunteered to submit themselves to a diet that costs only 25 cents a day in order to demonstrate whether it is possible to solve the high cost of living problem. Commenting on the test, The Sun of that city, says:—

As a detail of their crusade to teach persons who are living on 25 cents a day that life can be supported on 25 cents a day some of our philanthropic friends have been asking probationary policemen what they eat. The result is encouraging. One candidate for the scientific test begins the day with two raw eggs in a pint of milk; an extravagant meal, which it is to be hoped is never reminiscent of the cold storage warehouse. The fledgling patrolmen have competent appetites and good taste:

The majority of the dozen expressed decided preference for roasts — roast beef, roast chicken, roast veal, lamb and mutton chops.

One wanted oatmeal, coffee and rolls for breakfast.

Another wanted mutton broth, breast of lamb and coffee, and for supper two veal chops and three slices of bacon, with coffee and plenty of bread and butter.

One called for roast beef and spaghetti, corn cakes and coffee.

Roast chicken and rice would make an acceptable dinner for another.

For supper he wanted roast beef and potatoes, coffee and bread and butter.

Beef stew, tapioca pudding, coffee and bread and butter for dinner filled out.

If these selections are the children of habit and not the expressions of ambition, it is plain that our peace officers are not drawn from the ranks of sodden poverty. The roast of beef is a luxury of the highly prosperous; potatoes may be used as a garnish, but they are not the fare of common men. Is the Japanese influence responsible for the demand for rice? Rice will do at times; boiled rice with hot molasses is excellent, but let the rice be brown, not of the abominable denatured sort that is too often served. "Two veal chops and three slices of bacon, with coffee and plenty of bread and butter" betoken a man of sense and capacity. He should be able to catch a thief or arrest a street corner orator.

Confidence in the police, already high, will go higher as their normal appetites are revealed. They want good tuck; they are entitled to it. Yet we have our suspicions. Among the beverages catalogued we find neither beer nor ale. Have the "drys" captured the school of instruction? Or were the candidates for science's test modestly self-conscious?

ARTROLOGERS FAIL TO AGREE

Astrologers, like doctors, sometimes differ. The usual crop of prophetic reading of a new year is, however, interesting. Old Moore, still a favorite with the old timer, informs the world that the war will end in the autumn of 1917, and yet he is not polite enough to tell the "expert gentry" who diagnoses the news as it comes from the great war anvils deducing therefrom that the war will last for more than one year longer.

The Poilus will be pleased to know from another authority on astrology, that "Before the close of the year the French will be at the gates of Berlin." A bolder X-rayist of the future predicts that "The German Emperor will be dead or in exile before the dawn of another year." That, however, is unsatisfying. The fate of the Kaiser is a small matter compared with the fate of tens of thousands of our boys—will the war be over with the Kaiser? The Astrologer lacks a touch of Zadkiel.

When an astrologer becomes rapturous he is positively fictional in his form of writing, of which the following is an example:

"Russia's millions roll steadily onward, flooding the field of war and absorbing more of territory than hitherto they have conceded. They swarm into Turkey, overrunning its borders like a swarm of locusts. Having betrayed its ancient friend, how shall Turkey appeal to its enemy?

"Will Greece survive? She has offered hospitality under compulsion, she has flirted while others have fought. Her day is not far off, but is not yet.

"America dominates the political world with more cupidity than strength and more of opportunism than sagacity and perspective. Despite German peaceful penetration, she is yet more Anglo-Saxon than she can disavow.

"France suffers chiefly from insidious enemies within her own borders, and many privations will press heavily upon her, so that her progress will be impeded to some extent. Her vast hospitals will be extended into civilian lines, and she will establish hospitals wherein men of eight nationalities shall lie side by side suffering the same evil.

Poor Portugal's Port.

"Portugal will be heavily assailed and its port will be stormed by the fire of the enemy.

"Great Britain will add glory to her arms and great numbers to her honored dead.

"Mexico, through German influence, will become the centre of a great revolt and will suffer a consuming defeat.

"Halland can no longer sustain an armed neutrality, and great hurt will be done to her shipping. She will fall foul of her allies, and her freedom will be restricted.

"The Gates of the East having been broken down, there remains only the common enemy, and he will capitulate in the fulness of the year. Turkey being reduced, Austria seeks the advantage of a timely peace, but Bulgaria holds to the inflated idea that a pan-Bulgarian empire in the East, and her sons will pay heavy toll.

"Nothing can withstand the onward march of the Allies, and now at length they will join hands over the mutilated body of the infidel, he who, with God in his mouth and the devil in his heart, listened to the babble of a maniac philosopher and scorned the decrees of Providence."

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

Mr. Herbert Samuel, the British Cabinet Minister, has been likened to "one of those calculating machines which we owe to the inventive genius of America; it is as hopeless to find a flaw in his merciless accuracy."

Another critic once said of him: "He is the neatest, most methodical young man who ever reclined on the Treasury Bench. He speaks well and with the accuracy of a mathematical proposition. He is a perambulating parcel of propriety, and would be shocked if anyone wore his tie awry, and would probably refuse to shake hands with a man whose hair was not neatly brushed."

Needless to say, this was written humorously, but nevertheless there is a certain amount of truth in it.

Born of Jewish parents, Mr. Samuel was left an orphan when he was six years old, and he was brought up by an uncle, who is now Lord Swaythling, the famous financier.

Even while he was at Oxford, Mr. Samuel was asked to stand for Parliament, but he declined then, and went on reading law with a view to becoming a barrister if not practising as one.

In Parliament his best known work has been the introduction of what is popularly known as "The Kids" Act—the Act which makes it an offence for small boys to smoke tobacco.

Mr. Samuel plays lawn tennis and collects mixed metaphors and "Spoonerisms."

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Allow me to thank you for the editorial in The Review re my re-election to the Toronto School Board.

There is one thing I would like to correct, namely, that I had been shown the cold shoulder by my colleagues. From the very beginning I never felt anything else but at ease and I was treated splendidly, just as the other members. My motions and suggestions received the same consideration and when worthy of merit it was given.

I cannot speak in terms too high of the just treatment that that been accorded me. That is reflected in the election and reception of the other lady member, to say nothing of the two Soo ladies. I do not like that idea to go abroad. It is not just to the men.

I did not particularly want the chairmanship of the Property Committee; in fact I only thought of it when a junior member proposed to take it, or I am sure I could have had it. The members complimented me by saying I would be invaluable on the Management Committee, where a great deal of work was to be done this year, and there is not much to do on the Property Committee.

Hoping you will rectify this particular statement, and believe me, it was due to the men in general that I received my very large majority. Also the women.

Wit and Wisdom

A Chance for Thrift

It is pointed out that the epicure at a sitting may eat, drink and smoke the equivalent of munitions to a startling amount; the follower of fashion may waste still more on dress; and yet a greater indictment canhe levelled against luxurious indolence. A series of comparative values has been worked out broadly, thus:

$2.50 saved, say on feasting, equals 80 cartridges.

Piano equals 100 shells

Lap dog equals 20 shells

And deliberately said:

"Operator, please refrain from severing the connection as I am holding a highly interesting and important conversation with another individual over this telephone wire, and I shall be exceedingly annoyed if I am prevented from continuing it until we have concluded."

Then he hung up the 'phone with a groan.

A Clever Dog

A man who liked hot rolls for breakfast had a very clever dog. Every morning he would put a penny in his dog's mouth and say, "Baker."

The dog would then go to the baker's, place his paws on the counter, and present the penny to the proprietor, who, taking the coin, would then place a bag containing a roll in the dog's mouth. This the dog would safely carry to his master.

One day the dog had, as usual, brought his penny to the baker's counter.

The man, in order to see what the dog would do, took a halfpenny roll and, putting it into a bag, placed the latter, as usual, in the dog's mouth.

The dog put down the bag on the counter and went out and fetched a policeman.

DRY SENTIMENT STILL GROWING

Not quite five months have now elapsed since the Ontario Temperance Act came into force. A number of people throughout the Province still express their animus against the Hearst Government for proposing the Ontario Temperance Act even as "a war measure." With the Hearst Government the enactment of the Ontario Temperance Act (prohibition it is called) was not an incident to political power, but an economy forced upon the country by the circumstances of the time.

But with the short trial it has had there is a feeling growing all over the Province that it was a wise measure of reform. In Toronto, London, and elsewhere the police court records show a decided diminution in drunkenness. It is pointed out, however, that the fines are in excess of those for a corresponding period a year ago. The reason for that is obvious. The penalties for violation of the Ontario Temperance Act are heavier in most cases than for the violation of the old Liquor License Act, and in addition to that Ontario can claim without boasting that there is no community of similar size on this continent where such a measure is so well and so reasonably enforced. The light does not cause the dust it reveals any more than the Ontario Temperance Act indicates that there is more drunkenness than heretofore.

In all the larger centres in the Province police officers and police records tell the same story. There is a decided improvement by reason of the Act. The Premier knew he would lose support for the stand he took. That he took his political life in his hands to do what he considered right in a time of national stress is surely to his credit and those of the men that stood with him.

Russia Buys Warships.

In addition to the purchase of vast quantities of war munitions by Russia in Japan, a despatch from Maesuru to the Tokio Nichi Nich says that the Russian Government has placed with the Japanese navy an order for a number of mines, and eighteen hundred of these mines are to be built at the naval arsenal at Maesuru. Further, it is reported that negotiations will shortly be concluded between the Governments of Japan and Russia over the sale to Russia of three old warships. The really interesting thing about the deal is that the vessels are among those captured from Russia during the war of twelve years ago. The transaction will be dealt with, it is said, by the Minister of Marine on his own responsibility, without consulting the Imperial Diet, though it is said that the price of these warships will be mentioned in the general budget of the Government and submitted to the deliberation of the Diet next session. The three warships will therefore be dropped out of the navy list and then sold to Russia.

It is about as easy to be popular with yourself and please the neighbors at the same time as it is to sit on a barbed wire fence.

THEY FOUGHT SIDE BY SIDE

HOW CANADIAN SOLDIERS CAME TO AID THE AUSTRALIANS.

Sir Douglas Haig reported that among those engaged in the great advance of September 15 were "troops from Canada." In a message received by the High Commissioner for Australia, C. E. W. Bean, relates how, before the advance, the Canadians relieved the Australians on the left front, and thus made their entry into the battle of the Somme. The London Times made the following extracts from the message:

The time had come for the supporting troops to be drafted into the fight. An order was sent to the supports. They were to send an officer to receive instructions. He came. He was a man nearing middle age, erect, tough as wire, with lines in his face such as hard fighting and responsibility leave on the face of every soldier. The representative of authority upon the spot—an Australian who also had faced ugly scenes—explained to him quietly where he wished him to take his men, into such and such a corner by such and such a route.

It meant plunging straight into the thick of the Somme battle with all its unknown horrors—everyone there knew that. But the newcomer said quietly, "Yes, sir," and climbed up and out into the light. It was not an Australian who spoke. That "Yes, sir," came unmistakably from the other side of the Pacific. It was the first of the Canadians upon the Somme battlefield.

An hour or so later a young Australian officer, coming up with his men to improve an exposed and isolated trench—a trench which was outflanked already and enfiladed, and in half a dozen ways unhealthy—into a condition to be held against any attacks at all costs, found coming across the open towards his exposed flank a line of stalwart men in kilts.

His men were dead tired, the enemy's shell fire was constant and heavy, grey heads and helmets constantly seen behind a red mud parapet across a hundred yards of red mud craters proved that the Guard Reserve was getting ready to counter-attack him. Every message he sent back to headquarters finished, "But we will hold this trench." And yet here they came—a line of them, stumbling from crater into crater, and by one of those unaccountable chances that occur in battles only two or three of them hit in crossing over. They dropped into the trench by the side of the Australians. Their bombers went to the left to relieve the men who had been holding the open flank. They brought in with them keen fresh faces and bodies and an all-important supply of bombs. It was better than a draught of good wine.

So it was that the first of the Canadians arrived.

Long before the last Australian platoon left that battered line these first Canadians were almost as tired as they. For 36 hours they had piled up the same barricades, garrisoned the same shell holes, were shattered by the same shells. Twenty-four hours after the Canadians came a vicious bombardment descended on the flank they were holding. They were buried together by the heavy shell bursts. They dug each other out. When the garrison became so thin that whole lengths of trench were without a single unwounded occupant they helped each other, wounded, down to the next length and built another barricade and held that. . . .

With the light came a reinforcement of new Canadians—grand fellows in great spirit. And the last Australian was during that morning withdrawn. It was the most welcome sight in all the world to see those troops come in. Not that the tired men would ever admit that it was necessary. As one report from a young Australian officer said, "The reinforcement has arrived. Captain X—— may tell you that the Australians are done. Rot."

Bohemians Want Freedom.

The Bohemians of Winnipeg held a meeting recently at the Polish Sokol Hall under the auspices of the Bohemian National Alliance of Canada to discuss recruiting. Mr. Jaroslav Cisar, of New York, representing the Bohemian National Alliance of America, told a large audience of his countrymen that "the place for every eligible Bohemian on this continent is in the Canadian army."

"We want the world to know that we are in a state of actual revolution against our Austrian oppressor," he said. "We want our independence, and we want to prove our will to freedom by our deeds! We want the world to see that there won't be any peace in Europe until freedom is given us."

He said further that the Bohemian political programme was the destruction of Austria and the creation of an independent Bohemian state. He paid a warm tribute to Bohemians who have enlisted in the army, many of them having come for that purpose from across the line. The alliance passed a motion to help the recruiting among Bohemians by all legal means.

TOOK WAR LIGHTLY

CORNISH VILLAGERS AND FARMERS SLOW TO SEND MEN.

Writing from Helston, Cornwall, a London correspondent said: Helston is the rain washed, romantic little town where once a year in summer time the inhabitants transform themselves into fairies and, to the quaint tootling of a Cornish pied piper, dance the whole length of the town in and out of one another's houses. It has been changed now to the Helston War Dance; and instead of being performed annually, as was the old custom, it takes place fortnightly. The principal performers, young, fit men of the Class A category, dance in and out of the tribunal to a merry two-step of their own composing, and the most cunning dancers are rewarded with the elastic crown of exemption.

Why? Because Helston is much too far away, too self-contained, to take even a back seat in this alleged war that is going on. Besides, it has its own private ends to serve; its own mouths to feed; its own snug little farms to tend; its own immortal fires to feed; its own young men——.

"Ah!" said a quiet clergyman to a gathering of these young men. "Do you know what would happen to you if the Germans did come? Do you know that they would not only kick you young farmers out of your farms, but that they would be your masters and you their hinds? Do you know that for years past the German Emperor has had England all parcelled out into allotments for his subjects, ready for the day to come when you farmers will be nothing but hounded laborers on your own land?" The young men only grinned and said to one another that parson were just talkin' out o' the crown o' his hat.

HEROIC ANZAC

German Sniper Could Not Appreciate Supreme Devotion

Describing the gallantry of an Anzac on the field of battle, Lieut. R. Fuller says: "We had advanced our line several hundred yards and had begun to dig ourselves in. To cover us a screen of men was put out to give us timely warning as to any forward movement on the part of the enemy. Amongst those who went out was a lad named Jose.

"He had scarcely got fifty yards when he was picked off by a German sniper. Immediately a private named Hunt went to his assistance and commenced to dress his friend's wound. Whilst so doing he was himself wounded; but he finished the dressing and then picked up Jose in his arms to bring him in. He had barely covered half the distance when he was hit again. He stumbled, regained his footing, and came on.

"He was within ten yards of safety when he was hit a third time by the cowardly German sniper who was firing at him. This time the bullet went through both himself and his charge, killing them both."

WATERING HORSES

When Care is Needed—Feed Hay and Grain Together

Many horses are killed and many more are injured by careless feeding and watering. Never water a horse immediately after feeding grain. This washes the grain through the stomach before it is properly mixed with the stomach juices and is liable to cause colic. If the horse is very warm, let him drink a few swallows and then hold his head up for a minute or two, and thus cool his stomach slowly. Try it yourself in hot weather. You can drink a quart of cold water without injury if you will but take several minutes for the first few swallows.

When horses are brought in, hot from their work they should first be given water cautiously, and then fed hay and grain together, allowing them to exercise their own judgment in the selection of their feed.

PRISONERS IN GERMANY

British Proud and Admired, if Hated —Hard Worked

A neutral after seeing Germany writes in London: There is another great piece of contrast. Though I have looked about carefully, I have seen no prisoners at work. The official figures explain that you have more of their prisoners than they have of yours. Tommy is well to the fore almost everywhere in Germany, working long hours and often at unpleasant tasks. I did not notice any British prisoners working in Berlin itself, but more than once I saw little squads of them being marched through the streets on their way from one station to another, and I can assure you that the hearts of the neutrals went out to them. They bore themselves gallantly, head erect, and with a cheerfulness that the German does not comprehend and much dislikes. On another occasion I saw British officer prisoners crossing the Potsdamer Platz on their way to Potsdam Station. They were the object of intense curiosity and were surrounded by a sea of Germans. There was no molestation or manifestation either way. They were smartly dressed and obviously attracted the feminine eye, as I gathered by the outspoken remarks of some of the Backfische (flappers) around me.

FASHION HINTS

The foremost tailors of America have never advocated great widths in suit skirts. In fact, the greater the flare of the jacket the less pronounced has been the spreading line of the skirt—this so that one might act as a foil for the other and a more gracious silhouette be the result.

Certain tailors insist on a comparatively narrow skirt to accompany the new three-quarter length coat. The latter are very wide, and the effect of a wide skirt would be cumbersome in the extreme. To be sure, one never can tell just what will be the accepted mode. A process of selection and elimination is always gone through after the models are brought from Paris.

American women may be slaves to Paris ideas. Nevertheless they have been known to express themselves quite firmly on the matter of dress in declining to indorse this model or to accept that one. The extreme ideas seldom appeal to the average American woman—that is, not when they are in their first season.

Almost in the same breath with which one is told that Josephine modes are to be revived we are assured that for suits Louis XIII. effects will be used for demi-costumes. This of course insures a very good prospect for rich brocades, embroideries and other more or less regal garnitures. The incompatibilities of fashion are again demonstrated by the fact that along with first empire dresses Louis Seize costumes are recommended and hats such as were worn by the ladies of the court of Napoleon III. and his consort, Eugenie.

Three piece suits have already been advanced for another season of popularity. As a matter of fact, the dress with its coat complement is now accepted as a matter of course. Bulloz has advanced one of the earliest models which associates chiffon cloth with velvet and employs fur as the trimming for the jacket.

It is interesting to note that the waist is normal in both the dress and the coat. After all, it is the normal line that is the most generally becoming, and doubtless it will be one that will be finally accepted, no matter what favor may be tentatively shown to the high waisted and long waisted effects.

Italian Airman Honored.

A fight on October 12, between an Italian dirigible airship and an Austrian aeroplane, at a height of more than three miles over the Albanian coast, resulting in the air plane being shot down and the dirigible afterward being destroyed by its own single surviving officer, 30 miles inside the Austrian lines, was first described to the public when King Victor Emmanuel conferred medals for valor on three members of the Italian air corps. The officer, Capt. Ercole, whose left arm had been disabled, after two days of wandering and suffering from cold and hunger managed to elude the Austrians, and recrossing the mountains, finally reached the Italian camp. King Victor conferred a gold medal for valor on Captain Ercole, and silver medals on Captains Corbelli and Albino, the two observers, who were killed by the aeroplane's machine gun fire.

Lost Arms and Legs.

When answering complaints by Lord Mayo in the House of Lords concerning what he termed the inadequacy of some of the grants to disabled soldiers and sailors, Lord Sandhurst made an interesting statement on the value set by Chelsea Commissioners upon lost arms and legs. Pensions, he said, were paid on the following scale per week:

AN ACTOR'S REAL TRAGEDY

PATHOS OF JOHN McCULLOUGH'S LAST APEARANCE ON ANY STAGE.

John McCullough, the tragedian, died in an insane asylum. Writing about the famous actor's last appearance on any stage, E. H. Sothern in his "Remembrances" in Scribner's says:

He went through a scene in "The Gladiator;" then he went to the last scene in "Virginius," where Virginius raves after he has killed his daughter; then to Othello's farewell speech, one he had often told me that his great master, Edwin Forrest, had only read to his own satisfaction once in his life:

Oh, now, forever
Farewell the tranquil mind; farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop and the big wars
That make ambition virtue! Oh, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed and the shrill trump,
The spirit stirring drum, the ear piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war!
And, oh, you mortal engines, whose rude throats
The immortal Jove's dread clamors counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone.

It was pitiful in the extreme to hear McCullough read this at any time and feebly so now. He wandered through others of his various characters, the people about him weeping and seeking to hide their grief. At length he drifted into the part of Cardinal Richelieu.

He played the scene in the garden where Baradas, the creature of the king, comes to take Richelieu's ward away from him. He had spoken the tender speech of protection to Julie, and now Richelieu says to Joseph, who holds him up on one side while his ward assists him on the other, "Well, well, we will go home!" Here he walks feebly up the stage. Baradas, seeing how broken he is, says aside to De Beringhen, "His mind and life are breaking fast." Richelieu overhears him, turns with his old fury and cries: "Irreverent ribald! If so, beware the falling ruin! I tell thee, scorner of these whitening hairs, when this snow melteth there shall come a flood. Avaunt! My name is Richelieu! I defy thee! Walk blindfold on—behind thee stalks the headsman—aha! How pale he glares—God save my country!" And he falls fainting as the act ends.

Poor McCullough went up the stage at "Well, well, we will go home." Baradas said his line, the tears streaming down his face, "His mind and life are breaking fast." McCullough threw Joseph and Julie off as he turned on Baradas and began: "Irreverent ribald! If so, beware the falling ruin," and stopped dazed.

He looked at the weeping Baradas, at Julie sobbing, at the rest of the company standing about overcome with grief and terror, and collapsed utterly.

A Smoker's Character.

The manner in which a cigarette is held and smoked is a very sure guide to a man's character, according to Pearson's Weekly.

A smoker who holds his cigarette lightly between thumb and forefinger has refinement and tenderness.

If his other fingers are opened in V-shape, with the little finger bent somewhat back, he is invariably musical and has talent. He may not suspect it, nor may he have developed it, but it is there.

If the two middle fingers and the little finger are held close together, observation has shown that that is characteristic of reserve and shyness.

A smoker who holds his cigarette towards the palm of his hand, with the lighted end towards him, is secretive and deliberate. He will never be "rushed," and will get on in the world.

A man who holds his cigarette between two fingers and waves it about airily will be good-tempered but unstable. For him in life there is either complete success or complete failure.

It may seem unkind, but he who holds a cigarette with thumb and two fingers, or even three (that is unusual, but it is done) is not to be trusted in money matters. He is disloyal to his friends, too.

On the other hand, a man who holds his cigarette peculiarly between the forefinger and the next, with the latter above the former, is straight, honest, and a man to be trusted.

A man who "sucks" a cigarette and puts it out of his mouth by holding the lighted end an inch or two down with the tips of his fingers, is small-minded, timid, and nervous.

He who, when his cigarette is nearly finished, puts the end into a holder to finish will be careful and economical.

All rules have their exceptions, and the above may be no exception to the "exception rule," but many tests have proved that the "cigarette character" is the man's character. Make your own tests!

Lived Under Six Sovereigns.

After posing for his picture on his 105th birthday anniversary, Levi W. Richardson, said to be the oldest man in New Brunswick, died before he had fairly started his 106th year. He had been ill for only about ten days.

Mr. Richardson ascribed his long life and remarkable preservation of his faculties to going to bed early and being active. He had followed the operations of the war with the most careful attention, and his own ambition for the last year had been to live long enough to see Great Britain and its allies successful, for he had lived under six sovereigns and had watched with interest the expansion of the empire. More than 80 children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren survive him.

DEVICES MULTIPLY TO SAVE HOME WORK

Everything From Schedule For Woman's Day to Laundry Cupboard and Window Larder

Here is a list of labor-saving devices shown at an exhibition for housewives: (1) A schedule or plan for a day's work in the home. Although the day runs from seven a.m., to seven p.m., the work is so planned that the housekeeper has three hours off each afternoon. This makes a nine-hour work day. Long enough for any one. (2) Next came asbestos holders for lifting things off the stove. (3) A small towel on a loop; the loop is of tape, and slips over the apron belt at the right side; very useful when cooking to wipe the fingers on. (4) A laundry cupboard holding all things needful for wash day and ironing day. (5) Adjustable table. The top could be raised or lowered to suit the size of the worker. (6) Stainless steel knives. They sell for $9.00 a dozen.

Clever Larders

(7) Sliding larder; to send food down to the cellar to keep cool—a dumb waiter. (8) Porch larder, screened and holding deliveries or other food, cool and away from flies. (9) Fireless cooker, home made. Just a tight box, with a lid on a hinge and plenty of loose excelsior. The simplest device of them all. Just bring the food to the boiling point, cover with pot lid, and pack in the excelsior, with more excelsior packed down on top. Shut the lid, and food will keep on cooking.

Novel Kitchen Table, Etc.

(10) A kitchen table on legs for use in cooking. Gather materials on it, mix them, put on the stove, then push table and dirty dishes over to the sink. It saves many steps. The top should be of glass or oilcloth. (11) Dinner wagon—table with shelf to carry dinner into dining room and then use to bring out the dirty dishes. (12) Window larder made of framework of wood to fit an open window. Each side is covered with wire screen. One side opens with a door. Daily "left overs" are here kept cool and fly proof.

GERMANY'S LACK OF FOOD IS REVEALED IN LETTERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—The Sun publishes the following from London: The corespondent of The Sun is able to present letters of guaranteed authenticity taken from German prisoners captured on the Somme within the last two weeks, revealing the actual conditions in Germany brought on by the food shortage.

The following letter was written from Hanover: "Here, in Hanover, the people are gradually becoming thinner, always thinner. Anyone desiring to obtain food obtains nothing. Isn't this awful?"

A letter from Hamburg found on a German prisoner says: "Here in Hamburg there has been a frightful riot. Tonight in the Hofweg, Bergweg (and other streets) women and children broke into shops and robbed them. What is going to happen? The people have nothing to eat, there are no potatoes, grease and bread are scarce."

"War Here, Too"

Another letter from Hamburg says: "Yesterday it was war here, too. There were soldiers with bayonets at our backs. All the bread and butter shops and some grocers' shops were wrecked. Then mounted soldiers appeared. What a life! They were after us with their sabres right up to our doorsteps."

A third letter from Hamburg says: "There has been a frightful commotion here. Bread has been stolen from the bakers. The greengrocers had to sell all their potatoes without tickets. It gets worse every day. A hundred women marched through the streets. They all wanted more to eat. For a fortnight we have seen no butter."

Cards for Everything

A Crossburg woman writes her soldier son as follows: "I feel it very much that I cannot send you anything, but times are hard. Often I have to go out in the morning without a crust of bread in my soup. Money is scarce, too. We have bread cards, meat cards, soup cards, butter cards, rice cards, oil cards."

PRESENT CERTIFICATES TO S. A. YOUNG PEOPLE.

Every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock a gathering of children has come together to study the Bible in what is called in the Salvation Army, a Directory Lesson, corresponding largely to the church catechism. The last Sunday in December an examination was given to the children and over thirty of them won certificates of merit, which will be presented publicly tonight at a special meeting in the Temple on Simcoe St., to which any who are interested in young people's work are invited.

RIDICULOUSLY SLOW IS TANK'S PROGRESS

Brilliant Pen Picture of Appearance of His Majesty's Land Ships —Much Like Toads

In a message from British Headquarters the special correspondent of "The London Times" gave discreet details of the "Tanks" as follows: What animal are they really like? Candor compels one to reply that they are not like any animal, except in so far as they are even less like anything else on earth. If you must have some particular animal to compare them with, they perhaps resemble in general contour a toad more than anything else; a toad rather elongated towards its hinder end. In size the thing is—well, large. Not to be too exact, it is bigger than an ordinary motor car and smaller than a laborer's cottage.

Painted Like Snakes

In these circumstances, it can hardly be expected to move fast, and the deliberateness of its advance, coupled with the fact that it has no visible wheels or legs, gives to it a perfectly ridiculous solemnity. "Tanks" are painted in what naturalists call protective colors, the colors of snakes or lizards—that is, browns and greens and yellows, which harmonize admirably with the desolated environment in which the creatures move.

From Another World

Perhaps this coloration increases the suggestions of a toad in the thing's appearance; till one almost thinks that some such huge and awful batrachian may have lived, if not in the childhood of this earth, then in some other world, a thing related to all other toads as Diplodocus is related to a small sand lizard. When one sees the unspeakable things moving, with their great blunt noses thrust in the air before them, limbless and wheelless, going with a movement as smooth as that of a snake, but majestic and deliberate as a giant tortoise, it is such a mixture of pantomime and pure horror as no nightmare ever equalled.

SUCCESSOR TO LATE PASTOR RUSSELL COMES FROM MISSOURI

NEW YORK, Jan. 11—The Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, incorporated in Pittsburg, but domiciled in the old Henry Ward Beecher home, 122 and 124 Columbia Heights Brooklyn, has selected a successor to its founder and president, the late Pastor Russell. Joseph F. Rutherford was named.

As president of the society, Mr. Rutherford will exercise a patriarchal control over several hundred coworkers in this and other countries where Pastor Russell carried his doctrine of a "Christianity without a hell." The society claims "millions of followers in all parts of the world."

Mr. Rutherford, a native of Morgan County, Miss., now living in the "community house" on Columbia Heights, was selected by mutual consent of the "shareholders" (contributors) at a meeting held in Pittsburg, to the surprise at least of interested outsiders, who had expected the election of A. J. Richie, of Ontario, vice-president of the society. Mr. Ritche was re-elected.

No friction is reported as a result of the election.

SCHOOLGIRLS ADOPT BABY

Child Fed and Tended According to School Rules.

APPLETON, Wis., Jan. 11—Wishing to have a live subject to work with, the girl students of the domestic science department of the Appleton high school have adopted a two-months-old baby, and the girls in the department are kept busy feeding it scientifically and dressing it according to the best health hints. The child was taken from a poor family of seven children, as the parents are unable to look after it properly.

Staple Fall Colors

What Shade to Pick For Your New Warm Suit.

Broadcloths and velours will come first in fall street fabrics, and then serges and poplins. Plain stuffs will take the place of stripes, and staple colors will be more used than unusual ones, although there will be some dark toned stripes and perhaps somber plaids. It will be what manufacturers call a "plain season," which may be the natural reaction from the stripes and checks, the plaids and ruffles and the bright sports colors of the spring and summer. And the staple colors in this case, it is believed, will be midnight blue, myrtle green, plum, taupe, wine, gray, brown, burgundy, navy blue and black.

The poplins and gaberdines will be used for suits of the early fall before broadcloth is needed for its warmth and general look of winter, although medium weight broadcloth with a high satin shine is right for the warmer weather. There will be some coverts and needle cords too.

Cashmere velours will be used for both suits and coats, as well as for sport skirts. And since sport clothes are as much in demand in fall and winter as in summer, and since this is the best sport material for cold weather, the dark colors of the other materials will not entirely hold good for velours.

Succession duties of the E. C. Walker $4,000,000 estate at Walkerville amount to $663,000, the largest amount from one estate ever received in Ontario.

GERMAN BUREAUCRACY IS SELF-HYPNOTIZED

Censorship and Manipulation of Press React Ever Upon the Well-informed —Dirty Methods Exposed

The evil effect of the censorship of their own press by the German Government is to hypnotize the thousands of Government bureaucrats into the belief that that which they read in their own controlled press is true. No people are more ready to believe what they want to believe than the governing class in Germany. They wanted to believe that Great Britain would not come into the war. They had got into their heads, too, that Japan was going to be an ally of theirs. They wrote themselves into the belief that France was defeated and would collapse.

Deceptive Quotations

Regarding the press, as they do, as all-important, they picked out for quotation two or three British newspapers as exponents of British public opinion, whereas results have proved that these organs expressed the opinion of nobody but themselves. These newspapers expressed their honest, if erroneous, opinions.

But the German Government goes farther than that. It was quite content to quote freely expressions of Greek opinion from Athens organs well known to be subsidized by Germany. Certain bribed papers in Zurich and Stockholm, and one notorious American paper, are used for this process of self-hypnotism.

Two-fold Object

The object is twofold. First, to influence public opinion in the foreign country, and, secondly, by requoting the opinion, to influence their own people into believing that this is the opinion held in the country from which it emanates. Thus, when Germans are told that large numbers of the Dutch people are pro-Ally, they point to an extract from an article in De Toekomst and controvert one. These methods go to strengthen the hands of the police when they declare that in acting severely they are only acting against anarchistic opinions likely to create the impression abroad that there is disunity within the Empire.

MEAN TRICK ON THE POOR TRAMP

"No, sir," said the young man, "I do not haunt the railway station the way I used to, watching the crowds and sometimes encountering an old friend from the old home town. I had an experience a while ago.

"The person responsible for my changed habits was a hobo with a hard luck story who had once been a gold miner and had known Jack London, and hadn't eaten regularly for eight weeks. Would I stake him? Sure. I would and to show my democracy I'd eat with him.

"The restaurant was inexpensive because I had only 80 cents in my pocket. We found a table half way to the rear. I handed the menu to Jack London's friend. A waiter came quickly and I ordered a beef pie, coffee and apple pie with hot sauce, a modest but satisfying meal that cost only 25 cents.

"But my seedy friend did not take the hint. He called for soup, a sirloin steak, lettuce salad, sweet potatoes, coffee—and, yes, some of that apple pie with hot sauce. The waiter had hurried away before I could protest.

"He had a lovely, well-developed appetite. I ate my beef pie thinking deeply. Presently a brilliant idea seized me. I finished my meal. The tramp was busy with the steak.

"'I have just remembered,' I said, 'that I have an engagement five minutes from now. You don't need to hurry. Just go ahead and enjoy your meal. I'll pay the checks and point you out to the cashier. When he looks down this way you merely nod your head so that he will know you later.'

"'All right,' said the seedy one. 'Much obliged to you.'

"On the way to the cashier's desk I dropped the checks into my own coat pocket. The cashier was a husky man with a large, square jaw.

"'My friend down at the sixth table will pay the checks,' I explained to the cashier, pointing out the tramp.

"I sauntered out carelessly, but presently hurried up the steps to the elevated. I plan to raise a mustache before venturing near that restaurant again. I wish I knew what happened to the tramp."

Curious Tobacco Lore

Pipe Smoking Was Once Regarded as an Art in England.

Every one knows that tobacco was one of the gifts of the new world to the old and that Sir Walter Raleigh made smoking fashionable in England in the days of Queen Elizabeth. For the next fifty years the smoking of pipes not only became general among all classes, but a thing of highest fashion, held in light of an art. In those days it was not said that a man smoked tobacco, but that he "drank" or "sucked" tobacco, and the smoker was called a "tobacconist."

A curious feature of tobacco manners among fashionable smokers of the Elizabethan period was the practice of passing the pipe from one to another, after the fashion of a loving cup. In a play of 1614 one London gallant says to another who is smoking, "Please you to import your smoke?" "Very willingly, sir," says the smoker. No. 2 takes a whiff or so and courteously says, "In good faith, a pipe of excellent vapor!"

The rich young swell carried about with him an elaborate tobacco apparatus, often of gold or silver. It included a tobacco box, tongs with which to lift a live coal to light his pipe, a ladle "for the cold snuffle into the 'nostrill,'" a priming iron and as large a collection of pipes as his means could afford and his pockets could find room for. Sometimes the tobacco box was of ivory and occasionally a looking glass was set in the lid, so that when the beau opened it to take out tobacco he could also have a view of his delectable person.

DIED IN FLORIDA.

W. C. Temple Originated the World Series Contests.

ORLANDO, Fla., Jan. 11.—William Chase Temple, credited with originating world series baseball games, died at his home at Winter Park, Fla., aged 59 years. Mr. Temple owned the Pittsburgh National league club in 1892-93, and in 1894 donated the Temple Cup to the winner of the world series games.

He was born in Florida, but for a number of years had interests in Chicago and Pittsburgh. In 1905 he returned to Florida and since had been active in the organiation and development of the citrus industry.

All Frenchmen born in 1898 have been ordered to register for the class of 1918.

A conference of Provincial and Federal ministers is being held at Ottawa on the re-employment of returned soldiers, and related problems.

PREPARING THE EVIDENCE

NO OPPEAL IN SAMPSON CASE YET.

No appeal has so far been entered against the conviction of Clarence Sampson, who was sentenced to Kingson Penitentiary for three years o a charge of cattle stealing. At the time of the trial a number of objections to the admision of evidence were overruled by Magistrate Langley and the defendant's counsel, E. G. Porter of Belleville, signified his intention [illegible] the case to a higher [illegible]. It is understood that a copy of the evidence is being prepared in case an appeal is decided on.

The other cases against the prisoner will come up before the magistrate on Saturday, Jan. 20.

The late James Handley, who died at his residence in Millbrook on Friday, Jan. 6th, was born in Mount Pleasant on January 17th, 1852. He resided there till coming to Millbrook in the early '70's to work for the late Alex. Ferguson, with whom he learned his trade as a wagon and carriage maker. On June 26th, 1877, he was united in marriage to Mary E. Deyell, daughter of the late John Deyell, who survives him. He is also survived by two brothers, Thomas, of Seaforth, and William, of Mount Pleasant, and one sister, Mrs. J. Fallis, of Peterborough. Three sons, Wm. A., of Seattle, Percy, of Hamilton, Howard, of South Porcupine, and two daughters, Isabelle, of Lindsay, and Nettie at home, are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate father. The late Mr. Handley was widely known, esteemed and respected by many friends, who will sympathize with the family in their affliction. The funeral took place on Sunday, Jan. 8th, to St. John's cemetery, Ida. Rev. Canon Allen conducted the services at the house and grave. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

BASIS FOR THE NEW WAR LOAN IS ANNOUNCED

FOR PERIOD OF 30 YEARS WITH THE OPTION OF REDEMPTION

IN TWELVE YEARS.

KAISER DRUGGING THOSE HE CAN NO LONGER DRAGOON.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 11. — Bonar Law announced at the Guildhall meeting today that the basis for the new war loan was issued at five per cent. and the price was 95. The period of the loan was thirty years, with the option for redemption in twelve years.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Lloyd George, speaking in the Guildhall this afternoon, said Emperor William had told his people that the Entente Allies had rejected his peace offer. The Emperor did so, he said, to drug those whom he could no longer dragoon.

"We had rejected no peace terms," the Premier said, and added, "We were not offered terms, but a trap baited with fine words. It would suit Germany to have peace now on her own terms. We all want peace, but it must be a real one."

The Premier said the grim resolution of the Entente Allies at the recent conference in Rome was that at all costs they must achieve the high aim which was before them when they accepted the challenge of "Prussian military caste."—"To rid the world forever of its menace and to save Europe from unspeakable despotism."

The conference was under no delusions, the Premier continued, as to the magnitude of the task of the Allies, but felt no doubts as to the results. The whole situation was probed, difficulties were faced and arrangements made to deal with them. All the Allies felt that if victory was difficult, defeat was impossible.

HEAVY LOSSES ARE INFLICTED ON GERMANS

WHEN THEY ATTACK POSITION OF FRENCH IN CAURIERES WOOD.

LIQUOR MEN TO TAKE ACTION

BELIEVE GOV'T CAN STOP INTER-PROVINCIAL TRADE.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—Prevention by the Federal Government of the shipment of liquor from a "wet" province to a "dry" province was discussed at a conference of representatives of the Quebec Licensed Victuallers and allied trades.

The meeting was called to consider what steps the liquor interests of this province should take in view of the movement that will be made at Ottawa to secure the prohibition of the imporation and manufacture of liquor in the Dominion. It was agreed that as matters stand now the temperance legislation of "dry" provinces is offset by the fact that liquor can be shipped in from a "wet" province, as is the case between Quebec and Ontario.

The conference was of the opinion that the Federal Government would be well within its rights in prohibiting the passing of liquor from one province to another, but it could not make Quebec dry without its consent. A delegation to Quebec liquor men will be sent to Ottawa to advance this view.

John R. Wissler, the second clerk in Nichol township council's century of existence, having held that office for 24 years, was presented with a gold-headed cane.

SAY COUNTY COUNCIL SHOULD HELP SOCIETY

Women Should Get This Habit As well as Men

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions, instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limtstone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who pratice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside clealiness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

GAVE EXAMPLE AT COST OF LIFE

FRENCH OFFICER DIED TO PREVENT RETREAT.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—"Allowing himself to be killed resting on his cannon to give an example and prevent a precipitate retreat," reads the Order of the Day recording the death of Lieut.-Col. Patrick Mahon.

It was at the pass of St. Marie Aux Mines, in the Vosges. Twice before he had tried to save the pass, the second time leading a victorious counter-attack. A hot enemy attack the third time forced the French to retire. Mahon, dismounting from his horse, crossed his arms and stood in front of one of the French guns, facing the enemy until he was killed.

The body still lies between the French and German lines, although a number of officers have tried to recover it.

Three hundred and sixty school aeroplanes are to be built in Canada by the Imperial Munitions Board.

Rev. Dr. John Neil was again nominated by the Toronto Presbytery for the position of moderator of the General Assembly.

Norwood Council Deals With Children's Aid Request.

(Special Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, Jan. 10.—The inaugural meeting of the cillage council was held on Monday. All the members were present and signed the declaration of office, viz., B. W. Squire (reeve), J. P. McKelvie, T. H. Elliott, R. Tulford and C. L. Puffer (councillors).

A communication was read from the secretary of the Children's Aid Society, Peterborough, requesting the use of the Town Hall on the evening of Jan. 17.—Granted.

By law No. 420, appointing Mr. E. C. Squire school trustee for a term of two years was put through its several readings and passed.

By law No. 421 appointing Thos. Watson a member of the local Board of Health was passed in the usual way.

Messrs. A. Breault and W. H. Harper were appointed village auditors.

A letter asking financial aid from the Children's Aid Society, Peterborough, was read. The Council while recognizing the important and necesary work done by the society thought that the aid should come the County Council as by that method all municipalities would contribue their just share.

On Monday evening the Norwood Board of Education held its regular meeting, with the following members present: Messrs. E. P. Cuffe (chairman), J. F. Elliott, H. Webster, J. Doherty, T. Watson, J. O'Keefe, W. Cuthbertson, J. A. Finlay and J. Marks.

The chairman reported that Mr. Trenouth's room had been closed for two days as Mr. Trenouth had been attending the funeral of his sister.

The financial report for the year 1916 was handed in by the finance committee.

It was decided that the report be received and filed and that the auditors prepare a similar report for publication as the village report.

Mr. F. C. McRae, district representative, presented the following accounts for payment out of the county grant:

Entrance fee for Ottawa Winter Fair, $1; K. G. Thomson, ac., $9.70; United Steel and Wire Co., hen coops, $47.50; Co-operative Supply Department, $49.35.

The accounts were referred to the advisory board for acceptance.

Other Accounts

K. G. Thomson, ac. P.S., $3.10; T. E. Rorabeck, salary, truant officer, $5; J. W. Kirk, ac., $63.22; J. L. Squire & Son, $5.70; Wm. Wilson, drawing gravel, $3.60; secretary's ac. postage and war stamps $4.99; W. H. Tucker & Bros., $6.30.

Referred to their respective committees for verification.

Hon. Geo P. Graham at a meeting of Southwest Toronto Liberals urged that all Canadians fill out their National Service cards.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

There was quite a supply of hay, straw and wood on the market all week, and there seemed to be little trouble in finding buyers, and prices were unchanged.

The scarcity of cattle in this part of the country has kept he drovers comparatively idle. It is very hard for them to pick up any kind of good marketable cattle in spite of the high prices that prevail.

Hogs are selling briskly and the demands of the packers cannot be satisfied at present, even if the local price is $12.50 per hundred.

The market for both eggs and butter is much easier and prices will take a big drop in the hen product shortly.

There has been no great demand for fowl since the holiday market. The high prices that prevailed then seem to have got the housewives away from a fowl appetite.

HIGHER PRICES FOR CHEESE

President Stone's cheery address at the Eastern Dairymen's convention, told of a prosperous year just past. Exports of butter from Montreal amounted to 177,189 packages, as compared with 54,495 for 1915. There was no occasion to refer to the higher prices realized.

From May to November, exports of cheese were 2,142,700 boxes, an increase of 29,100 over the previous year. Cheese, too, had shared in the price advance. Before the war, said President Stone, prices ranged from 11c to 15c a pound, while this year they ranged from 14c to 25 1-2c. He was of the opinion that prices will be fully maintained this year, if not advanced.

ANCIENT SURGERY

INSTRUMENTS 2000 YEARS OLD EXHIBITED IN LONDON.

A set of 37 very remarkable ancient Greek surgical instruments has been discovered near the site of Kolophon, in Ionia, and has been brought to England. The instruments (says a correspondent of The London Times) show a type of workmanship unequalled in any other extant specimens, and generally reveal the very great progress in surgery which the ancients achieved. The date, though somewhat uncertain, is probably the first or second century A. D. With two exceptions, all the instruments are of bronze. The blades of the knives were originally of steel, but in each case this metal has been almost completely destroyed by oxidisation (rust).

It is an interesting fact that in ancient times knives were made either of stone or bronze. The custom was followed, not because iron was unknown, but because that metal was held in superstitious fear. Amongst the five pairs of forceps or grippers in the find is a large and beautifully made instrument, the handles of which are shaped to represent two dolphins. This is probably a pair of "polypus" forceps, used for removing growths. The "bite" of the teeth is strong and close. Another interesting pair of forceps is that used for extracting arrow and lance-heads from wounds. An elevator for raising depressed bone is another interesting exhibit. Its presence in the collection would seem to prove that after battle, efforts must have been made to treat surgically even the most serious wounds of the skull. Modern surgeons are apt to imagine that brain surgery is a recent discovery, and that operations for the elevation of pieces of depressed bone were invented within living memory.

Another and still more remarkable brain instrument is the "drill-bow" for operating a skull trephine. This instrument proved a very great puzzle at first, and was supposed to represent some sort of measuring appliance. Research, however, has shown that it is a bow which, when fitted in a string, was used to rotate a bone drill or skull trephine—very much as drills and trephines are still occasionally rotated. Far from being a triumph of modern surgery, skull trephining or trepanning is a very ancient manoeuvre. Skulls have been discovered again and again showing trephine openings, and the natives of the South Sea Islands are actually known to practice the operation.

In classic times this was not undertaken, as at present, to relieve the pressure from an abscess or an effusion of blood, but to allow exit to the evil spirit supposed to be troubling an insane or epileptic patient. That the Greek and Roman surgeons achieved good results is certain. Probably the purity of the atmosphere in which they worked made them to some extent independent of antiseptics. They used mandragora juice or atropin as anaesthetics.

Ancestral Pride.

"Do you still want this genealogy?" asked the man who digs up such things.

"Sure, I do. Why not?"

"Well, I've found that your great-great-grandfather was hanged for murder, your great-grandfather was imprisoned for robbery, and your grandfather was tarred and feathered for beating his wife. That's not a very proud record, is it?"

"I should say it is. Shows how my family is getting better each generation. I'm an improvement on the whole bunch—never been in jail yet. Let me have those records. I'm proud of 'em!"

Circumstances occasionally force a man to admit that other people's troubles are almost as great as his own.

DRAIN COW STABLES

Manure Hurts Milk—Draughts Also to be Avoided

The best material for the floor of all cow houses or byres is undoubtedly concrete, as it will admit of easy and efficient washings. The utmost attention should be paid to the system of drainage, which is best provided in the form of surface drains running into a common channel. Cleanliness in the interior of the cow house is as much requisite as in the dairy itself and the methods of ventilating must be on approved principles, the windows securing at the same time an abundance of light. Those structures admitting a downward draught on the animals are clearly injurious to the health of the cows, and must be condemned on that score. The best windows are those admitting an upward current of air to circulate round the top of the building, and so replace the bad air without causing dangerous draughts.

On a great majority of farms the manure heap is to be found in close proximity to the cow house, and the undesirable odors from this source can be clearly detected in the byre. There can be no doubt as to the evil influences thus communicated to the milk, and where new buildings are being erected or alterations are being planned, it will be well to bear this in mind. A further source of depreciation in the purity of new milk is to be observed in some situations where the entrance to the barn or yard resembles a miniature bog, the cows having to plunge up to their hocks in thick mud when entering the yard. This can be prevented by making a well drained entrance with chalk or rubble.—Maritime Farmer.

ANATHEMA ON GERMANY

Fierce Moment at Funeral of Submarine Victims

Twenty thousand Greeks witnessed the funeral of victims of the Angeliki at the Piraeus. The population gathered in a dense black mass around the cathedral, while the procession of workmen, carrying thirty-three banners and huge wreaths, escorted the biers, behind which followed the Admiral Commanding the allied fleets and the naval attaches of France, Russia, England, Italy and Serbia.

There was a dramatic scene in the cathedral, where, amid the murmurs of the crowd struggling to enter and the sobs of women, the president of the Workmen's Corporation called down the curse of Heaven on "honorless Germany," whereupon all present cried "Anathema!" Meanwhile, in the harbor buildings close by were lying the bodies of twenty five other victims whose funeral the government would not allow at the same time, fearing the effect upon the people of nearly thirty coffins being carted through the streets.

The outlook for good, keen ice on that date was never better.

District Cup

Mr. J. D. Flavelle of Lindsay, who is the umpire for Group 2 of the District Cup series, has not yet set the date for the play. It will likely be on Tuesday, Jan. 23, in Lindsay.

"BUFFALO BILL" POPULAR WITH JUVENILE READERS

Col. Cody, as "Buffalo Bill," who died yesterday at Denver, Col., was for many years known throughout America and Europe through his Wild West show. He was a picturesque type of the pioneer frontiersman, and lived to see large cities built where he once hunted the buffalo and fought Indians. He was born in Scott County, Iowa, in 1846, his ancestor being Spanish, English and Irish, and he became known and beloved by juvenile America in the stories of western adventure.

Beginning as a pony express rider in 1869, when a boy of 14, he afterwards became a Governmena scout on the prairies, in which dangerous work he was engaged for many years, taking part in numerous engagements with the Redskins. He earned his sobriquet of "Buffalo Bill" by contracting to supply meat to laborers constructing the Kansas Pacific Railway, and in eighten months (1867-8), he furnished 4,280 buffaloes. In 1872 he was elected to the Nebraska Legislature. Since 1883 he had been in the show business, making his first trip to Europe in 1887. He was judge advocate general of the Wyoming National Guard.

Cowboy is No More

In an interview not long ago Col. Cody said: "I grew up with the trappers. Then came the killing of the buffalo and the trapper went with that. After the buffalo were killed came the era of the domestic cattle, and the cowboy came with that.

"The cowboy took an occupation from the buffalo hunter and the stage-driver gave way to the engineer The barbed-wire fence was the first death knell to the romantic cowboy. The farmer settled on the range where the cowboy had ruled, and the oldtime cowboy now is riding the mowing machine, taking off his chaps as an obeisance to the advance of civilization. There are just as many cattle today as there ever were, but the individual, the small owner, the man who has barbed-wire fence, has done away with the cowboy.

Unique Experiences

"Life was hard in the pioneer days, but it was interesting. Experiences I have had never can be experienced again by any living man or by any man yet to live. Conditions have changed and they never will revert to the days which made the "Wild West" what is probably ever will be—a source of interest to the American people. Yet I would not go back to them."

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

Time and tide never had much consideration for the human being. Abe Attell, former featherweight champion of the world, who lost his crown to Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland several years ago, attempted to perform a come back stunt Monday night in New Orleans. But the Abe Attell of old was not there. He was knocked daffy in four rounds by a youngster named Phil Virgets. Attell weakened after the first round, which was the best evidence that Father Time had grabbed him for his own. The knockout punch kept Abe in the land of nowhere for five minutes. Both men weighed 126 pounds.

Does comedy on the baseball diamond pay? Germany Schaefer, for years leading exponent on the diamond, says: "No." Germany makes that remark after trying in vain to land a job as manager, declaring no one will take him seriously because of his long career as a clown.

Nick Altrock and Carl Sawyer, Schaefer's successors as comedians on the Washington roster, argue to the contrary. On the strength of his fame on the baseball field, Altrock has embarked in vaudeville, and admits that he is knocking 'em dead in western cities. Sawyer, who lacks the natural humor of Altrock, has been more successful, having just landed an important position with the Keystone Company.

"I don't want people to take me seriously," said Altrock at Chicago when Schaefer's complaint was related to him. "I'd make a fine manager, wouldn't I? I am getting good money for making the fans laugh and Grif thinks I am some use teaching his young pitchers. But go into the movies? Imagine me falling off a 100-foot cliff. Perhaps the guys who would he supposed to rescue me would fail to be on the job. Suppose they forgot to leave a call or suppose they had trouble with their engine? Whew! What would Grif do without me?"

Five streets in the suburbs of Charleston, W. Va., have been named after famous baseball players, and an official record placed in the county clerk's office. The streets are named Bush, after the Detroit shortstop; Baker, the Yankees' slugging thirdbaseman; Wagner, the Pirates' veteran infielder; Johnson, Washington's remarkable pitcher; and Speaker, the Cleveland club's centre fielder and leader of the American league in batting last season.

Honest Efforts.

Moses was fated never to enter the land of promise he so longingly viewed afar, and Columbus never found—who can now wish that he had?—that unimpeded sea route westward to India that he sought so wisely and so daringly. Yet still the world moves on, and by mysterious and unexpected ways the great, brave soul is permitted to subserve the benignant purposes of God contemplating the elevation and blessing of man. And so, I cannot doubt, the unselfish efforts in our day for the amelioration of social hardships, though their methods may be rejected as mistaken or defective, will yet signally conduce to their contemplated ends. Fail not, then, humble hoper for "the good time coming," to lend your feeble sigh to swell the sails of whatever bark is freighted with earnest efforts for the mitigation of human woes nor doubt that the Divine breath shall waft it at last to its prayed for haven.—Horace Greeley.

Mcfee off Junior Lineup To-night

WHEN A HORSE BALKS.

In an article in Our Dumb Animals Alfred H. Pope says that the balky horse has the most sense and the confirmed runaway horse the least sense of any horse.

The balky horse is not to be cured by beating and abuse. When a horse makes up his mind to balk he has no room in his mind for anything else. Whipping only increases his stubbornness, but there is a method which goes to the cause of the trouble. With a single idea in his head it was reasoned that the best way to get the horse to move was to give him another idea—something else to think about.

The trainer then remembered that horses and mules resent interference with their liberty to move their ears at will. It was noticed that a horse never changes his course of action without moving his ears. It was then found that when a horse balked it annoyed him to have one ear pushed under the crown of the bridle so that he could not move it.

And it was also found that if the ear was left there for about twenty minutes he was so annoyed that he forgot about his determination to balk. He shook his head, turned to one side and then the other and made every effort to release the ear. This occupied his mind until when the driver ordered him to go he went. After a few minutes the ear was released and he went on as if he had forgot all about balking.

In conclusion the writer said, "This trick will not break a horse of balking, but it will invariably start one that has balked on the road, provided he hasn't already been whipped and abused to a point where nothing matters."

ANCIENT MAKE-UPS

ROUGE AND FLESH COLORS HAVE BEEN FOUND IN CLASSIC ROME.

Thousands of years ago the art of "make-up" as practiced in the dressing-rooms of actors and actresses of to-day, was known to the Egyptians and Romans. For proof of this one only has to study the many interesting theatrical relics in the British Museum.

The Egyptians supply us with what is probably the oldest wig in the world—a wig, it is true, that was in no way connected with the drama, but one that will compare favorably with the finest creations of the theatrical perruquier. Strangely enough, the tresses are made of plaited crepe hair, exactly similar to that used by modern actors for moustaches.

In the Graeco-Roman department, says the 'Era Annual,' may be seen the cosmetic box of a Roman lady. The white and flesh-colored chalks and rouges are similar to those used for "making-up" in the days previous to the invention and manufacture of grease-paint. There are also two objects of the theatrical life of the past that have their replicas in the theatres of the present day. One is a thin, oblong slab of stone, bearing the Latin words, "Circus Plenus," which was occasionally to be found outside a Roman circus, and corresponded to the familiar modern notice, "House Full." The other is a plain ivory disc displayed in the Egyptian room, but which would hardly attract attention. This common-looking object is a theatre check or pass, but whether of a temporary or permanent character cannot be ascertained.

Much the richest department in stage objects, however, is the Graeco-Roman room, where one case of stage exhibits may be seen. Here are to be found specimens of the masks worn by actors, which were modelled according to strict rules. They were made of terra-cotta, and must have been very uncomfortable to wear. There are also numerous statuettes in bronze and terra-cotta of actors wearing their masks in the various characters they impersonated, in addition to models of masks of every description and kind.

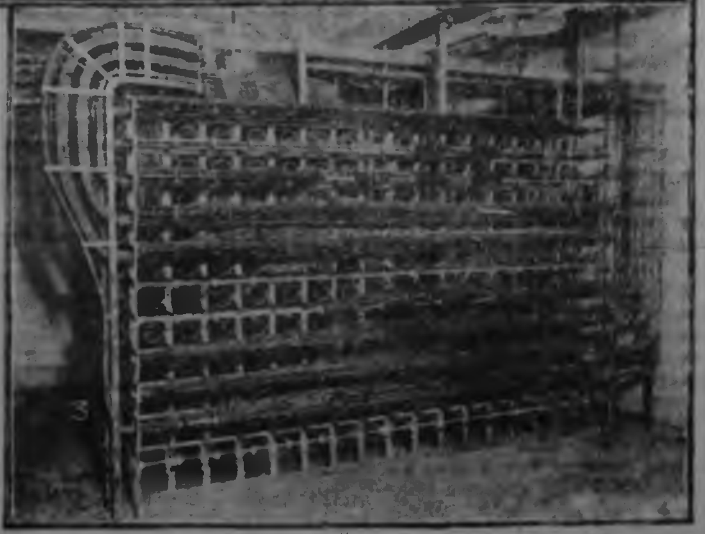
LARGEST PRIVATE SWITCHBOARD IN CANADA



(1) Switchboard at Vancouver Hotel, showing Telautograph.
(2) Vancouver Hotel.
(3) Wire connections behind switchboard.

ONE realises the immensity of the problems which confront the architect of a modern hotel when one sees the switchboard at which the "Hello" girls operate at the huge C. P. R. hotel in Vancouver. Here there are 600 guest rooms, 15 large public rooms and other rooms requiring inter-communication, so that the business man giving orders to his valet or making an appointment, and the lady guest talking gossip to her friends in the city may get their connection with ease and celerity. The private branch exchange switchboard at the Vancouver Hotel is the largest in Canada, and embodies interesting new features such as the Telautograph and the Maids' Signal Service. The Telautograph is an ingenious instrument by which messages handwritten at one station are reproduced by electrical means at one or more other stations. The Telautograph transmits handwriting just as the telephone transmits speech. It provides a means by which any switchboard operator receiving an order can write that order to the station which is to execute it. The instrument operates on the principles of the direct current voltmeter. The magnetic field is electrically produced and two variable currents controlled by the transmitter are used to actuate two moving coils of the receiver, which in turn impart to the pen of the receiver the movements made by the pencil in the hand of the operator.

The Maids' Signal Service helps the guests to find maids when required. On the telephone switch board are hundreds of small lamps bearing numbers corresponding to the numbers of the guest rooms. Each maid is provided with a miniature portable lamp, and before entering a guest room, she places this lamp in a socket on the outside door trim of the particular room. Immediately after being placed in the socket the lamp lights, and anybody passing can know that there is a maid in any room whose door is illuminated by a lamp. The placing of the maid's lamp in the socket also causes a lamp bearing a similar number stationed on the telephone switchboard to light, thereby notifying the telephone operator of the room in which a maid is engaged. From the lamps on the switchboard the operator knows where all the maids are to be found, and should a guest require the attendance of one she can be immediately summoned by telephone message.

The switchboard is 24 feet long, and all the exposed woodwork is of mahogany. The telephone has a line equipment of 760 stations.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

TAIT—SHEA

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 11.— A pretty wedding was solemnised at Christ Church when Miss Josephine Shea, eldest daughter of Mrs. Stewart Shea, became the wife of Mr. Walter Tait of Calgary, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Tait of town. The wedding was performed in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties, by the rector, Rev. Chas. Carpenter. The bride wore her travelling suit of navy blue serge with hat to match.

CARVETH—DOUGLAS.

In the Methodist Church, Millbrook, on Wednesday, January 10th, at 7 a.m., Miss Ida Douglas, of Cavan, was united in marriage to Mr. S. R. Carveth, of Millbrook, in the presence of immediate friends. Rev. W. Higgs officiated. The happy couple left for a tour via the 8:45 train.

Mr. J. J. Sheehy of Chicago, who has been spending a holiday in the city, returned to his home this morning.

The friends of Mrs. E. McKinley will be pleased to learn that she has been removed from Nicholls Hospital to her home at 493 Aylmer St., but is still confined to bed. Mrs. McKinley wishes to thank Mrs. S. T. Medd for beautiful flowers and the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club for their plant; also kind friends for the sympathy shown during her stay in hospital.

Miss Laura and Messrs. Vincent and Leo Foley of Toronto, Mrs. McGregor of Detroit, and Mrs. Henry of Peterborough, attended the funeral of their father, the late Matthew Foley, on Monday. Among the relatives who attended the funeral of the late Matthew Foley on Monday were Mrs. Torpey and Bud Torpey of Toronto, Mrs. Wm. O'Brien, Mrs. John O'Brien and Mr. Jack Foley of Peterborough.—Havelock Standard.

Mrs. J. Knox and daughter Dorothy, Gilmour Street, have returned to the city after an extended visit in Fenelon Fals.

Dr. J. C. Wray and Mrs. Wray, who have been visiting the former's aunt, Mrs. Patterson, 675 Water St., left this week for their home in Redcliff, Alta.

The junior chapter of the Peter Robinson Chapter of the I. O. D. E. are holding a tea at the Empress Hotel on Saturday afternoon. The hostesses are Mrs. Widdifield, Miss Helen Davidson. The girls assisting, Mrs. Birnie, Miss Florence Scott, Miss Flossie Mitchell, Miss Madge Graham, Miss Kathleen Powell, Miss Ola Cavanah, Miss Amy Clementi, Miss Georgie Stevenson, Miss Marion Grieves and Miss Jessie Spence.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cooke, of Orillia, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie Cameron, to Mr. Richard T. Harder, of Orillia, Lieutenant, 154th Batt., C.E.F., the marriage to take place shortly in England.

Major G. I. Campbell, chief recruiting officer for the third military district, accompanied by Mrs. Campbell, are visitors to the city today. Mrs Campbell addressed a meeting in Lindsay yesterday.

Mrs. G. A Macdonald has gone on a visit to Toronto and Chicago.

The proceeds from the Melting Pot of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E., which have justbeen made up, amounted to $226.47. The members of the Chapter take this opportunity of thanking all who contributed to make the Melting Pot such a success, and to announce their intention of making a collection of scrap paper. All arrangements for the collection will be announced later.

WANT THEIR CHILDREN

Parents Make Application to Aid Society.

The Children's Aid Society, held their regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon in the Bank of Montreal chambers.

The usual accounts for supplies for the Children's Shelter were passed, and a committee was appointed to select the standing committees for the year.

Three applications were received by the Society from the parents of children made wards of the Society, asking that the children be taken from their foster parents and restored to the father and mother. In one case, the threat of an appeal to the courts was made. The secretary and agent were requested to secure all the information available in each case.

The committee in charge of the Children's Shelter are much pleased with the new system in vogue under the guiding hand of Miss Coulson son.

MRS. BLANCHE JOHNSTON WILL SPEAK AT THE ARMY TEMPLE; MANY YEARS IN S.A. WORK

Special services are announced for this week at the Salvation Army Temple, when Mrs. Blanche Johnston, of Barrie, will give addresses.

Mrs. Johnson was formely Lieut.-Col. Read and was for many years Dominion superintendent of the rescue work. In the interests of this work she travelled thousands of miles in Canada and the States, lecturing on social and prison reform. She organized prison work in many cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific. She has a wide experience in many phases of Christian work. She is a chaste, sympathetic speaker and has addressed hundreds of audiences of all classes of people, aomng the highest circles and down through the ranks of society to the slums and prisons.

Four years ago Mrs. Johnston was obliged to relinquish her position owing to a serious breakdown in health, and has since devoted herself more particularly to writing.

Mrs. Johnston married Mr. N. B. Johnston, a Barrie merchant, and with returning health, is taking part in Christian public work.

In addition to being prayer league secretary in the Army, Mrs. Johnston is editor of the Dominion White Ribbon Bulletin for the W.C.T.U., editor Dominion S. S. Teachers' Quarterly, one of the editors of the Women's Century, president of the W.C.T.U. in Barrie, chairman of the finance and advisory committee of the Equal Franchise Campaign, Committee, etc.

Mrs. Johnston's subjects will be: Saturday, 8 p.m., A Need of Empire; Sunday, 3 p.m., A Canadian Privilege. Sunday, 7 p.m., An Important Question; Monday, 8 p.m., Music's Mission.

FINE PROGRAM FOR STANDARD EFFICIENCY GROUPS AT Y.M.C.A.

An interesting program has been drawn up for the standard efficiency groups which meet every Wednesday night in the Y.M.C.A. The following practical talks have been arranged: The evolution of the telephone; How to Classify Birds; Sex Education; Books and Reading; Craftsmanship; Collection Night, when the boys exhibit articles which they have collected and made. History of religion; Music, Art, Sculpture and Architecture; Nature; First Aid to the Injured; and The Growth of Altruism in the Individual.

Last night Mr. G. O. Cameron of the Bell Telephone Co., delighted the boys with an address of The Evolution of the Telephone. Mr. Cameron held the attention of his audience from start to finish, which places him in the class of experts in talking to boys. At the close of the address James Pogue moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Cameron for his kindness in coming to the "Y" and giving the boys such an interesting talk. H. Copp seconded the motion, which met with the hearty approval of the boys.

Next Wednesday night Mr. Elcombe will give an address on how to classify birds.

The Junior Employed boys had a large turn-out to their gymnasium and Bible Class last night. Tonight the Junior Employed Boys Bible Club will hold a social for their club in the "Y."

Tonight the Senior Employed Boys' Life Problem Club will meet at 7.30.

Saturday morning the Junior Collegiate and the Junior Schoolboys Bible Study Class will meet for study. All boys will find a welcome to any of the study groups.

Mr. Bruce Hamilton has a fine group of employed boys which meet for Bible study every Wednesday night.

The boys' skating rink is in fine condition now and every day sees a large number playing hockey and enjoying themselves skating.

BRANCH OF CHILDREN'S AID FORMED AT HAVELOCK

Rev. Mr. Skene Elected President of the Committee.

A very successful meeting on behalf of the Children's Aid Society was held in the Town Hall, Havelock last night, when Mr. Spence, gave an illustrated lantern lecture on the work of the society. In the unavoidable absence of Reeve Mathison, the chair was taken by Rev. Mr. Skene.

At the close of the lecture it was decided to form a county committee in accordance with the Children's Protection Act of Ontario, and the following ladies and gentlemen were elected: Mr. A. Anderson, Mrs. H. Andrews, Mrs. A. C. Denike, Mrs. W. Vance, Revs. Skene, Patterson, Adams, Messrs. F. L. Squire, J.P., C. A. Ghent and H. Andrews.

The following officers were subsequently elected: President, Rev. Mr. Skene; vice-president, Mrs. W. Vance; secretary-treasurer, Mr. C. A. Ghent

The success which Mr Spence is meeting with in his publicity campaign is very encouraging and beneficial results to the Children's Aid Society are bound to follow.

Next Wednesday Mr. Spence will repeat his lecture in the Town Hall at Norwood, when Reeve Squire will preside.

"FIGHTING BLOOD" AT THE ROYAL TONIGHT.

TERMS OF ENTENTE

As Made Known to United States President.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 11.—It has been learned by the Associated Press that the Entente reply to President Wilson makes specific designation of its terms of peace, which includes the restoration of Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro, and complete reparation for the damage they sustained; and the evacuation of the invaded territories of France, with such reparation.

The terms also provide for the reorganization of Europe, guaranteed by a stable regime and founded upon the respected nationalities and the full liberty and security of all great and small nations.

The retirement of the Turkish empire from Europe is also required.

BIRDS TAKE SILVER CUP AT POULTRY SHOW.

ALL ON VIEW TONIGHT.

The Peterborough Poultry Association's show is creating wide interest and justly so. The exhibits are particularly fine, some of them fit subjects for the artist's brush. And the Peterborough owners are getting a share of the ribbons.

Arthur Everson won most points in White Wyandottes and takes the silver cup. He was closely followed by Archie Brault's exhibits. D. R. Gardiner's Silver Campines were winners, and W. T. Abbott, with Partridge Rocks and Silkies, won first and second in Silkies and two thirds in Rocks.

Waits, of Belleville, one of the new exhibitors, has a handsome display, and is well up in the running, as are Griffith and Hilbert, of Wilford, who have a goodly number of choice birds.

Fred. Brown captured three prizes with five entries in Buff Orpingtons.

Harry Lush, with nearly 150 entries, is doing well, and Jas. Baptie and A. O. Kidd, who also have large entry lists, will take home numerous prizes.

The judges started at the specials this afternoon. Citizens who visit the market hall tonight will find the "class of the show" ticketed and ribboned.

BRITISH MAKE ATTACKS TO NORTH OF BEAUCOURT

Berlin Statement Claims British Were Driven Back---Teutons Repulse Russian Attacks---Laburtea Taken.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 12. — Two attacks were made by British troops early this morning on the French front north of the Ancre River. North of Beaucourt the British gained initial success, the war office announces, but were driven back by counter-attacks.

On the railroad from Vilna to Dvinsk, Russian companies that attacked were repulsed, suffering heavy losses.

Two minor attacks launched in order to ameliorate our position southwest of Riga brought us thirty-two prisoners.

Roumanian Front — Extending our successes of Jan. 10th, we stormed yesterday on both sides of the Oituz road several successive positions of our adversary. The enemy suffered severe losses in casualties.

North and south of Suchitza Valley hostile attacks were without success.

In the swampy lowlands between Braila and Galatz we pushed back the Russians further towards the Sereth.

Laburtea has been captured.

QUIET ON FRONT HELD BY FRENCH.

PARIS, Jan. 12. — The war office says there were no events of importance on the French front last night.

ELECTIONS FOR MOTHERS' CLUB

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED FOR THE RED CROSS.

REPORTS RECEIVED.

The regular meeting of the Mothers' Club of the Y. M. C. A. was held at the Association building on Wednesday, Jan. 10. As this is the parent mothers' organisation of the city the reports from the mothers' circles of the schools were received. These reports showed that much had been accomplished, largely in Red Cross work. They also showed hearty co-operation of the teachers with the circles.

The work of the Y. M. C. A. Mothers' Club has been the consideration and investigation of current problems closely related to the home. Several pleasant and helpful social events have also been conducted.

Parents' night was held at the Association building in March last, when 150 parents of the boys met and listened to a fine address by Mrs. John Allan. This was followed by a social hour.

Very helpful addresses have been given throughout the year by Dr. Harvey on "The Mother and Child," by Capt. Pearson on "Y. M. C. A. Work at the Front," and by Mrs. James Kendry on "The High Cost of Living."

Mrs. J. F. Canniff gave an excellent paper on "The Education of the Child," and Rev. R. J. Webb's address on "The Dignity of Motherhood" was much appreciated.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $7.76.

President—Mrs. C. N. Meserve.
First Vice-Pres.—Mrs. M. A. Morrison.
Second Vice-Pres. — Mrs. Charles Rishor.
Rec.-Sec.—Mrs. W. J. Lamb.
Treasurer—Mrs. Geo. Grange.
Cor-Sec.—Mrs. J. D. Craig.

ARMS CRUSHED IN MACHINE

A WELL-KNOWN POULTRY MAN HURT AT BOWMANVILLE.

Exhibitors at the poultry show yesterday missed W. Munro, one of the popular exhibitors on the association's list. He had been working at the Goodyear plant at Bowmanville and on Wednesday had both arms crushed when be was caught in a machine. Mr. Munro intended to be present at the show yesterday.

SUDDEN CALL TO MRS. BROWNLEE

FATALLY STRICKEN AFTER ARISING EARLY THIS MORNING.

Mrs. David Brownlee died very suddenly at her residence, 383 Rogers street, Ashburnham, early this morning. She rose shortly after 6 o'clock to show a lady who was stopping with her how to attend to the coal stove, which was in the sitting-room, and while her relative was in the kitchen Mrs. Brownlee fell to the floor. She was picked up and placed on her bed and medical aid summoned. The doctor found that death was due to heart failure.

Mrs. Brownlee was born in Peterborough over eighty years ago and was a daughter of the late John Craigie. One son, Charles Brownlee, of Minden, survives her.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

HARRY THAW NOT TO DIE

Will Leave Hospital in Two Weeks.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12. — Harry Thaw, according to the physicians, will be able to leave the hospital in two weeks, unless it proves that he swallowed slow poison tablets, some of which were found in his pocket. Detectives are at his bedside and the warrant for his arrest will be served as soon as he is declared out of danger.

YOUNG WOMAN HELD ON CHARGE OF DESERTION

Child desertion was the charge stated in the warrant upon which Chief Thompson's officers arrested Alice Townsend at a McDonnel St. residence this morning. The warrant was issued at Hastings and Constable Lynch of that village was notified of the arrest and has taken the prisoner to Hastings.

In the summer of last year Inspector Miller of the Provincial Police Force, was sent to Hastings to investigate the case of a child which had been left on the doorstep of a prominent resident of the village.

While trying to clear this case up, he found a number of suspicious cases; one was the Dolly Taylor case and another the one against the Douglas girl at Westwood, in which concealment of birth was alleged.

During the prosecution of these other charges the investigation into the desertion was at a standstill. Quiet information leading from one place to the other was forthcoming and Inspector Miller visited

PETERBORO BIRDS WIN GOODLY SHARE OF PRIZES AND SPECIALS

President Robson Successful Over Boston Show Winner---A. Brault, Jas. Baptie, H. Lush, Geo. Buller Have Long List of Winnings---Best Show Ever Held Here.

The Peterborough Poultry Association brought their exhibition for 1917 to a close last night, when the successful owners were presented with cups, special pries and cheques for their winnings. This year's show was by far the most successful one in every way the association has ever held, not only for the increased number of entries and the large attendance, but also for the high class of birds in every breed and variety. The selection of the best representative in each class was a very trying one for Judge Robertson of Ottawa. Mr. David True of Lindsay assisted in the judging yesterday afternoon. When it is known that prize winners at such large places as Boston, Buffalo, Ottawa and Guelph were not given a ribbon at the local exhibition it will not be necessary to comment on the exceedingly high class of the specimens.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, previous to the presentation of the cups and special prizes, told of how the Peterborough poultry show had doubled in the last nine years. It was a great credit to the city and he felt sure that if it had not been for the war, the market hall would not have accommodated the entries. He introduced Ald. Geo Duncan, who is acting-Mayor in the absence of Mayor Duffus, to the meeting.

Ald. Duncan was glad of the opportunity to be present and say a few words of praise on the great work of the association. It was not only a credit to the city, but to the province and the Dominion. The city appreciated their efforts to improve the poultry stock of the district.

Winners of Specials

Ald. Duncan presented the cups and special pries as follows:—

A. Wilson, box of Bachelor Cigars, for most points in Silver Dorkings.— J. J. Hartley, Peterborough.

Best Male Bird

James Baptie, of Kendry, had 37 birds entered in the show. The classes represented were Cayuga Ducks, Silver Wyandottes, Colored Dorkings, Black Orpington, Black and Golden Hamburgs. This entry, besides running off with the sweepstakes (a silver cup) for the best male bird in the show, which fell to the lot of the Colored Dorking cock, captured 13 firsts, 12 seconds, 4 thirds and one fourth, or 30 prizes all told. Some showing for the ever-popular James, who delights in the care and improvement of his varieties.

G. Buller to Front

George Buller, city, did exceptionally well. He displayed Rhode Island Reds, Black Wyandottes and Buff Orpingtons, 21 entries in all, from which he won 20 prizes, two silver cups and several other specials. In Rhode Island Reds he had five entries in a class of 21 birds, one being a Toronto entry, and he won second cockerel, third hen, first and second pullet and a special. In Black Orpingtons he secured first and third cock, first and second hen, and third cockerel. He had first in cock and second in hen in Black Wyandottes.

President Beats Boston

"Bob" Robson, president of the association, had 4 firsts in Black Minorcas and 2 thirds, one of his entries trimming a winner at Boston, which was fourth. He also drew a sweepstake for best in Mediterranean class.

J. J. Hartley won eight prizes with eight birds. He displayed Silver Grey Dorkings, taking 3 firsts, 2 seconds, 2 thirds and a special.

Alex Elliott, one of the junior enthusiasts of the association, and a regular exhibitor, got second in cockerel and third in pullet, Columbian Wyandottes.

Showing five Buff Orpingtons, Fred Brown, city, took first in cock, first in cockerel and first in pullet, and a special, a feat that tickled the local exhibitor.

Barred Rocks of Joe Kelly, seven in the open class and three in the sales class, won four times and twice on specials.

Campines Winners

D. Gardiner, city, with seven entries, won 7 prizes—4 firsts, 2 seconds, 1 third and 1 special in Golden Campines.

Sam Jordon showed six Buff Minorcas, getting 1 first, 1 second and 2 thirds.

James Vinson, Oshawa, had ten White Wyandottes in a stiff competition, from which he emerged with first on pullet and three specials.

With eight entries in Barred Rocks W. J. Nisbett, Conger Street, had four specials, second on Barred hen and 2 firsts on White Rock, cock and hen.

HOLD NEXT RECRUITING MEETING IN OPERA HOUSE; HON. G. P. GRAHAM, SPEAKER

Two More Recruits Bring the Battalion Strength to 140- -Major Medd Leaves on Return to Report for Duty in France.

Hon. George P. Graham, formerly Minister of Railways and Canals, will be the chief speaker at the recruiting meeting on Sunday night. Major O'Flynn will also relate his experiences at the front and his story of meeting with many of the Peterborough boys of the earlier contingents will be extremely interesting. The major is a speaker of merit and knows how to tell a good story.

This meeting will be held in the Opera House instead of the Armories. The accommodation for the comfort of the citizens will be much better. The 247th band will attend and several soloists have promised to give numbers.

Major Medd Leaves

Major S. T. Medd, who two years ago raised B Squadron of the 8th C.M.R., and went overseas in command of it, left last night on his return to duty in France, after being home on sick leave for some weeks.

Pte. H. Shaw Sick

Pte. Hiram Shaw, of 49 Lafayette Ave., who joined the 5th C.M.R. and has been in hospital in England for three months, is expected to return to Peterborough in the near future.

Knitters of Socks

Will all those who are knitting socks for the Canadian Kitchener League kindly hand in all finished articles by the 16th inst., as the league wishes to make a shipment about this date. The letters from the boys in the trenches still ask for socks, and during these winter months we cannot send too many pairs. The league has the yarn and will be very pleased to give it to every lady who will sacrifice a little time for the comfort of our own boys in the trenches. Yarn can be obtained from Mrs. Knox, 481 Gilmour Street, Mrs. Pligg, 576 Aylmer Street, and from G. Mowat at the Peterborough Creamery.

Battalion 140 Strong.

The 247th Battalion is now 140 strong, and C. O. and his officers are finding encouragement as the battle for recruits progresses.

Banquet to Soldiers.

The Otonabee Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, wishing to do honor to the returned soldiers, are giving a banquet in the recreation room of the Armories on Monday evening, Jan. 15th, at 6 o'clock. They sincerely hope that every returned soldier in Peterborough will come.

Personal invitations are being sent out, but it is difficult to get all the names, so if any returned man does not get one, the chapter trusts he will accept this invitation.

You are included in this invitation if you have enlisted and have been discharged, no matter whether you have seen overseas service or not.

Meeting at Havelock

Lieut.-Col Ackerman left at noon today for Havelock, where he will arrange for a recruiting meeting to be held next week. The 247th band and other entertainers will be secured for the occasion.

Red Cross at Keene

Judge Huycke and Major O'Flynn will address a Red Cross meeting in Keene this evening. The Otonabee township residents have always been to the fore in all patriotic and recruiting work and the meeting tonight will no doubt be largely attended.

Two More Recruits

Lieut. Quinn O.O.

There was nothing special in the daily orders. Lieut. Quinn is the orderly officer for today and Lieut. Brooks for tomorrow.

THE WEATHER

LOWEST FIGURE DURING NIGHT WAS 17.

At daybreak this morning 14 degrees below zero was registered. During the night 17 below was the lowest figure. At noon hour, 5 above. The worst is probably over and more moderate conditions will now prevail.—W. P.

VETERANS OF '66 MEET AT ARMORIES

COL. ACKERMAN RELATES HIS EXPERIENCES AT THE FRONT.

Wednesday evening, Jan. 10, was the occasion of a very pleasant gathering of the Veterans 1866 Association. The meeting was held in the recreation rooms of the Armories, with the president, Col. J. W. Miller acting as chairman.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Mr. J. Crane and Mr. J. Firth were guests of the evening.

Col. Ackerman entertained the members by relating some of his experiences at the front and in the trenches. He made his address more interesting and instructive by using the blackboard, giving diagrams of the different shells now in use. The construction of the trenches was also an interesting feature.

The members appreciated the kindness of Mr. J. Crane and Mr. J. Firth in contributing some fine selections of song and instrumental accompaniment.

Patriotic verses composed by Mrs. C. Sanderson, Toronto, were read by Mrs. R. Sanderson, and found favor by those present.

Refreshments and smokes were served during the evening.

SYSTEM IN RECRUITING.

IF LT.COL. ACKERMAN fails to secure recruits for the 247th Battalion, with the raising of which he has been entrusted, it will not be for lack of earnest and well-directed effort. Recruiting in this district has been rduced to a system, and if men are not found for the service by the methods employed, then every means short of conscription will fail.

The census taken by the recruiting officers of the available men in this city is complete in every detail, and the letter sent to each should appeal to all who possess a spark of patriotism. There is nothing in the delicately worded circular to arouse the antagonism of the most obdurate or to wound the feelings of the most sensitive.

The "One Hundred Clubs" in the municipalities should reach every available man. These organizations will at least be able to locate every resident who should be in uniform, and this is all that it is humanly possible to do short of getting them into line by compulsion.

MORAL LIFE IN THE CAMPS.

SOME OF THE MOTHERS in Peterborough object to their sons enlisting, not on account of the risks to which they will be exposed from the weapons of the enemy. What they fear is that they will be contaminated by evil associations, and that if they do return it will be with moral natures warped out of shape.

There is not the slightest foundation for any such misgivings, as the women of Peterborough should be convinced by this time. It is the very flower of Canadian manhood who have enlisted; the best young men in every community are in khaki today. Two battalions have been raised in this city, and another is in process of formation. There have been soldiers in Peterborough ever since the war broke out, and their conduct has always been exemplary. Any young man who enlists will find at the training quarters and in the military camps when he goes overseas better associations, than if he looks for his companions in the pool rooms or other resorts where young men are in the habit of congregating.

Rev. R. G. Peever, preaching recently a sermon in memory of young men who had gone from his church never to return, said he was pleased to learn that the moral atmosphere of the trenches is such as Christ himself would love to walk in.

The young men who volunteer for the work the soldier boys of Canada have undertaken are far from being degenerates. The clothes they wear are the highest recommendation of their character. The young fellow who is filled with animal spirits is not necessarily depraved. When he gets into the firing line and sees danger and death on every side of him he is sure to realize that he is standing in the very presence of Omnipotence.

Miss Ada L. Ward, the eminent English journalist, knows the soldiers of the Allies army as well as does any civilian on earth. She has seen them in the trenches, in the camps and in the hospital.. She knows them, the soldiers of Canada especially, those men who have not made arms a profession, but took up military life when the call came, for the high-minded and chivalrous young fellows that they are, Nature's aristocrats, and fit associates for any class under the sun.

Miss Ward will speak at a recruiting meeting at the Armories one week from Sunday night. She will have a message of peculiar interest to the mothers of Peterborough; to those who have sons in the service, and to those who have boys who ought to be there. Whatever dangers may beset the recruit will not arise through the associations in which the new life places him.

PARLIAMENT AND TEMPERANCE.

TWO INFLUENTIAL deputations waited on Premier Borden in Ottawa yesterday, one from the Dominion Alliance and the other representing the National Council of Women. Their demands were identical. They asked that the Dominion Parliament pass a law forbidding the importation of liquor into a dry province from one that remains in the wet column, this law to be repealed only by a referendum to be taken not earlier than three years after the enactment. They further asked that if the Government decided to submit the question of passing such an enactment to a popular vote, the plebiscite be taken not later than June, the result to be effective soon afterward.

Premier Borden's reply will occasion no more surprise than did his set promise to give the matter his most earnest consideration. He said that the questions involved had already been fully provided for by the Federal powers that had at the last session gone as far as the Constitution as set forth in the B. N. A. Act permitted. At that time the dry provinces were given all necessary authority to make prohibition absolutely airtight. They can shut out all liquor importations if they care to go to the full limit and decree that the private use of liquor is illegal. In that case the manufacturer could distill liquor or brew beer only for the export trade.

So long as the temperance party persist in urging the Government to take unconstitutional action they cannot hope to escape the suspicion that they are trying to get the Federal lawmakers into a hole. For the Government to pass such a law as the one they were yesterday asked to father would be to force prohibition upon Quebec. The B. N. A. Act says distinctly that each province shall settle the liquor question for itself. If the matter of prohibiting the manufacture or sale of liquor was submitted to the voters of the entire Dominion, and if it carried in every province except Quebec, as it probably would, it could not be made effective in the single province that recorded its dissent. That point has been made perfectly clear by numerous decisions handed down by the Privy Council from time to time.

Then why lay hold of the wrong horn of the dilemma? The present Dominion Government is not responsible for the B. N. A. Act. No matter how disposed the members of the Cabinet may be to farther the cause of temperance, they are powerless to do more than they have already done. To urge them to defy the Constitution is a pernicious course, tending as it does to excite class prejudice against them. The Review believes that the rank and file of the temperance party are sincere in this matter, but that they are being misled by crafty politicians, who see a chance to make capital for themselves at the expense of their opponents.

Even if every province in the Dominion declared for prohibition, the manufacture of liquor would automatically cease without it being necessary for any Government that might happen to be in power to legislate it out of existence. There is not a distillery or a brewery in Canada that could live depending on the foreign market alone.

The American Congress is being beset by the same difficulties as the Dominion Parliament. Temperance advocates are urging it, with little hope of success, to ignore state rights and pass a Federal prohibition enactment. The Supreme Court has just held that any state in the American Union that votes for prohibition can also stop the importation of liquor from wet states, just as the dry provinces in Canada can. Just as in the Republic, the Federal authorities have power to prevent the nullification of the authority of the various provinces. The Dominion Government has co-ordinated its powers with those of the provinces.

Prohibition in the eight provinces that have voted dry can be made complete, and such a condition should satisfy the most ardent friends of temperance. No provincial legislature should hesitate half way and attempt to shift any part of the responsibility upon Parliament. No temperance organisation should permit itself to be made a catspaw to rescue political chestnuts from the fire.

At the head of one of the deputations yesterday was one of the foremost judges of Quebec, a province that has more than any other always been jealous of its provincial rights. That judge appears to be of a different opinion on this issue, than some of the leading legal lights of the country.

The liquor men of Quebec have decided to send a delegation to Ottawa to present their side of the case. They concede that the importation of liquor nullifies prohibition to a great extent, and are convinced that Parliament is within its rights when it gives the dry provinces the power to stop it. All they contend is that the Dominionh as no right to make Quebec dry without the consent of the majority of that province.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

FEMININE interference with military plans is neither magnificent nor war.

• • • •

THE PUBLIC, with bated breath, waits to see what new form of war tax will be invented by Sir Thomas White.

• • • •

EVEN IF the majority of the people of Canada are in favor of temperance, their preference runs to constitutional enactments.

• • • •

• • • •

SO LONG as a local paper insinuates that there are traitors in the Dominion Cabinet, the slacker will not lack an excuse for not enlisting.

• • • •

MEDICAL PRACTICE may be "revolutionized" every ten years, as the doctors claim, but the old method of passing to the Great Beyond undergoes no change.

• • • •

"SOMEBODY BLUNDERED" when the heroic Six Hundred rushed to their doom. Somebody sinned when millions were sent to the sacrifice two and a half years ago.

• • • •

LAW-ABIDING CITIZENS in and visitors to Toronto will fail to see how that city can stand a reduction in its police force and still hold its place as a civilized centre.

• • • •

IN THEIR HEROIC EFFORTS to make one dollar do the work of two, the members of the Ministerial Association of Millbrook and Cavan may be described as on the home stretch.

• • • •

THERE IS TALK of arresting the managers of the Toronto Street Railway on account of the defective service. The managers of the local transportation lines have every reason to congratulate themselves that they operate in a community in which the patrons are slow to wrath.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Sometimes.

Sometimes a girl's clothes attract attention and at other times it is the lack of them.

Hear the Babies Laugh.

(New York Sun.)

The Pig-headed English.

Many wounded men are coming back to our church from the dreadful Western front. They have been fighting the ignorant English, and they find that so ignorant are the English of warfare that the English soldiers on the Somme refuse to surrender, not knowing that they are really beaten, with the result that terrible losses are inflicted upon our brave torops.

Fighting Another's Battles.

(New York Times.)

The United States may be compelled to go to war with Germany. The President does not want war with Germany, therefore he asks her to submit terms of peace the Allies can accept, including essential and adequate guarantees against future war. With the Allies we can have no thought of war, they are fighting our battle. They are fighting for our principles, for human liberty, for the rights of nations small and great.

A Compliment to British.

(Montreal Gazette.)

Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, in an interview with Mr. Cyril Brown of the New York Times service, spoke of the British as being the principal enemy on the German Western front. He admitted also that the happenings on the Western front had caused the German armies much trouble last summer and autumn. The tribute from an enemy will rather please the British. They went out to make trouble.

FOODS THAT REFUSE TO MIX

"Don't mix your drinks!" is an adage the wisdom of which every person owns but few know that there are certain foods which should not be taken with certain drinks, or with other foods.

It is a very old Persian proverb that informs us of the disharmony existing between milk and fish, and some of the cases of strange illness associated with experimenters in the sour milk cure a short time ago were attributed by medical men to ignorance of that Persian warning.

The acid in apples renders them unsuitable for dessert or pudding when cabbage forms part of a meal, and such a combination is nearly always productive of acid dyspepsia in the consumer, and the same may be said of certain acid fruits when cooked with sugar. Even that long-cherished British breakfast table institution, the marriage of eggs with bacon is now being viewed with grave suspicion by dietetic experts as the cause of much of the national indigestionn; whilst it is equally probable that the habit of drinking tea after a meat meal is the more prolific source of the complaint.

WHAT WOULD YOU THINK AND DO IF-

If a savage had broken into your neighbor's house and killed your neighbor;

And if the brute had then attacked your neighbor's wife and daughters, committing bestial outrages upon them;

And if you had gone to the rescue, though poorly prepared, and had fought the beast for over two years;

And if one of your other neighbors had done nothing to help, and had told his family that they must be absolutely neutral even in thought.

And if this neutral neighbor had made every endeavor to get your customers away from you while you were necessarily absent from your business;

And if at last you had succeeded in securing a strangle hold upon the assassin so that he suddenly became very anxious to escape with his booty;

Then if your neutral neighbor should send you a "note" stating that he thought you and the ravisher were fighting for the same objects;

And if he should ask you to give the murderer a written statemnt of your peace terms;

And if the speculative friends of your neighbor's son-in-law should get the tip in time to raid the stock market and make it look like Belgium;

And if the fiend with whom you were fighting for your life should derive new hope and courage from your neighbor's intercession in his behalf;

Wouldn't you feel grateful to your neutral neighbor? And Wouldn't you consider him a man of rare tact and discernment? And Wouldn't you wish that people that were too proud to fight were also too proud to write? And

DRAWBACKS TO HOME WORK

"There is a great deal in this vocational school idea. It gives the boy a choice of alternatives in life. The man who has no choice, no alternative, is handicapped," said the man with the Christmas tie. "For this reason I think it is a great deal better to let a boy do things himself than to do them for him or to pay other people to do them for him."

'Alternatives be hanged!" exclaimed the grocer. "Sometimes letting the boy do it himself doesn't pay."

"You miss the point of my argument regarding the great alternative," insisted the man with the Christmas tie. "The boy gets excellent training when he has to chase around for his own things. He does not depend upon others; if he wants something done he knows he ought to do it himself. He attains manual dexterity. If he wants his trousers pressed, he should be taught to heat up the iron and go to it. The choice of an alternative—"

"This is where I come in," said the grocery man. "The other evening my boy Bill decided that his trousers needed pressing. I told him that he ought to be able to do a little job like that, and so he pitched in. He's just begun going with a girl, and you know the way fellows are at that age. They begin polishing up shoes without being told, they spend about an hour before the mirror in the morning tying up their ties and brushing their hair. And, of course, their trousers must be creased.

"Well, Bill attached the electric iron and while it was getting hot he hustled around gathering his tools. He got the ironing board and placed it between two chairs. He got half a dozen cloths and finally a basin of water. This he placed on a convenient chair and then went upstairs to get the trousers.

"I came in, intent upon having an evening of enjoyment with my news paper. There was my favorite chair, ready for my wearied body. I sat down with a sigh and rose into the air with something stronger than that. The basin was now quite empty of water, and I hastened upstairs to change my garments.

"Hereafter Bill is going to send his trousers to a man who makes a business of pressing trousers, and not try to do it at home, thus endangering the happiness of the family."

'Or, as an alternative," suggested the man with the Christmas tie, "he might drop his girl."

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

The pro-Ally German editor, Maximilien Harden, is proving a greater thorn in the side of the Hun military authorities than they bargained for, for although his newspaper was suppressed in Germany, because it published too much of the truth, he has arranged that it shall be issued as usual in Switerland.

The Kaiser's dislike for Herr Harden is no new thing, and even before the war there was no love lost between them.

On one occasion shortly after Harden had been publishing some particularly strong criticisms of the chief Hun, he was pointed out to the Kaiser at a public function.

"What-" exclaimed Wilhelm. "That insignificant little chap is Harden? Why, he does not look as if he could hurt a fly!"

Later on someone told Harden what the Emperor had said about him.

"I am not trying to hurt a fly," he replied, with a grim smile, "it's a great big bluebottle that I'm after!"

An amusing story is told by Mr. Knowles the English comedian, about a keen temperance advocate who was one night addressing a public meeting on his pet subject.

"I should like," he declared, "to take every bottle of wine and every bottle of beer and every bottle of spirits and sink them all to the bottom of the sea.

The lecturer paused in his remarks to beam delighted approval on the interrupter. "Ah, my friend," he said, "I can see you are a teetotaller."

"No, sir; I'm a diver!" said the man.

THE ETERNAL FEMININE.

"Nowadays women are not young women at all until they are thirty or so. They are girls—up to then. And even at forty they very often have a girlish laugh."

"Women, though they sometimes like clever men, are always half in love with fols. Fools appeal to their maternal, protecting instincts."

"Every married woman has obtained her husband under false pretences. It's the only way. But every girl has a deadly rival in the heavenborn angel her lover mistook her for when he was courting her. So likewise a man has got to look out for danger from that godlike creature that his sweetheart thought he was. Marriage, you see, introduces a man and a woman to one another."

"The kind of girl you marry does not matter half so much as the kind of man you are. A good husband makes a good wife, and a good wife will make a good husband out of other girls' leavings. Marriages (as they say) are made in heaven; and I reckon that the heaven they are made in is that state of blissful ignorance which we call Youth. It is leap; but if you look too long you leap; but if you lok too long you get giddy, or lose your nerve, and then you don't leap at all. Or, if you do leap at last, you've got so old in the meantime that violent exercise is bad for you."

Wit and Wisdom

Teacher was impressing upon the class the importance of accurate observation. To illustrate, she said;

"Now each of you look around this room and tell me what is the most interesting object to you, and why."

"Yes, Thomas, what is the most interesting object you have observed?"

"Your desk, please, miss."

PERSIAN DIPLOMACY

NOT MUCH SAID, BUT THE PRINCE UNDERSTOOD THE SHAH.

There were great variety and charm in the society of Kissingen, writes Princess Lazarovich in her account of a holiday on the continent. There were people from the four corners of Europe, America and the orient, each having a distinct personality that brought vivid suggestions of his origin.

Prince Malkolm was the diplomatic representative of Persia for all Europe, being accredited at the same time to London, Petrograd and Rome. His wife, a beautiful Armenian princess, a Christian, was one of my dearly prized friends in London. Prince Malkolm told us one day of how he came to be a Persian diplomatic representative. He was a relative of the shah, had been educated in several countries in Europe and had become interested in the Christian religion as the root force of western civilization.

Prince Malkolm told us how he studied and pondered long to hit upon some means of bringing Christian principles to Persians in forms that they would understand, making Christianity the fulfillment of old Mithraic and Zoroastrian conceptions. Having formed a plan, he returned to Persia and began to talk to his countrymen and put before them the ideas that he believed would raise up the fallen nation. The people everywhere listened to him eagerly and followed him about in throngs. Some of them began to proclaim him a prophet and almost worshiped his person. He tried in every way to combat that tendency, in which he saw the speedy and complete wreck of his dearest hopes.

One day the shah sent for him and said:

"My cousin, you are much followed about here. You are exerting yourself too much. You need rest. Would you like to go as my ambassador to Europe—and stay there many years?"

Then Prince Malkolm added:

"I knew what he meant. So with my heart falling like a stone I answered, 'Yes, your majesty, I accept.' On that day I started on my journey westward. And all these years I have been virtually a European."

"But what did the shah really mean?" I asked.

THE CROWN PRINCE
Who may become Governor of Brussels.

A TAILOR DUKE

The fact that the Duke of Cumberland, who retains his rank as a British peer, sent an enthusiastic congratulatory telegram to the Kaiser after the Jutland fight, expressing his immense satisfaction over "the great victory of the German fleet," again calls attention to the agitation afoot for depriving the Duke of his British honors.

Since the name of the Duke of Cumberland was struck off the roll of Knights of the Garter in 1915, Mr. Swift MacNeill, M.P., has asked more than once why this traitor, in open warfare against the sovereign and the people of the British Empire, should retain his peerage of Great Britain. Mr. Asquith has pointed out, however, that he does not think the time and energy of the House would be usefully employed by promoting the necessary legislation to deprive traitor dukes of their titles. It certainly seems scarcely worth worrying about when such big events are moving.

The Duke, who is a son of King George V. of Hanover, and brother-in-law to Queen Alexandra, is in his seventy-second year, and has for many years lived in retirement in his Austrian castle of Gmunden. The Cumberland jewels and the family plate, by the way, are famous. The plate is said to weigh over a dozen tons.

LEAPS IN THE DARK

A former herdsman relates a thrilling personal experience connected with a stampede of cattle. He was taking a herd of 400 steers to Leadville and had camped for the night on Bear river, near its junction with the Little Snake. At midnight, when he went on guard, all was quiet, but in an hour or so, for some unexplained reason, the cattle were up and off like a flash. Something had stampeded them.

He was riding an old blue colored, line backed California broncho, just the beast for the work. He had often ridden him a hundred miles a day. The night was dark and cloudy, and he had to rely on the animal's sure footedness as he strove to stay on the flanks of the steers and turn them until their scare should cease.

It was a wild race. Four or five times the broncho gave tremendous jumps, but landed right and went on in good shape. In the course of an hour or so the man had the beeves quieted.

When daylight came, being curious to learn what obstacles had occasioned those tremendous jumps of the broncho, the man set forth to look over the ground. Leaving the bottom land, the steers had ascended a gentle acclivity, and on the plateau at the top he had kept circling them.

The plateau was intersected by a canyon about four miles long and from 1,500 to 2,000 feet deep. Its walls inclined toward each other at the top, and the distance across was fifteen or twenty feet.

During the chase the broncho had jumped that frightful chasm four times. His hoof marks were plainly visible, and down in the debris, hundreds of feet below, were a dozen mangled steers that had been crowded off.

WHALING DAYS ARE NOW OVER

ONCE THRIVING INDUSTRY THAT HAS NEARLY VANISHED.

At the outbreak of the American Revolution and for a period of seventy-five years following the conclusion of that struggle whaling was the most important branch of the American fisheries. From 500 to 700 vessels sought whales in all the oceans and seas of the world, and in one year New Bedford alone sent out 300 vessels, whose cargoes of bone and oil were the basis of the industrial life of the city.

The pursuit of sperm whales reached its climax in 1837, when oil valued at nearly $4,500,000 was brought in, mostly from the south Pacific. The height of the industry was in 1846, when 70,000 persons derived their support from whales and 720 vessels, valued at $21,000,000, were engaged.

For more than fifty years the fishery has been declining, and in numerous ports that once derived most of their wealth from the industry there have for a long time existed only memories of former greatness. For a number of years the sperm, right and bow head whales that supported the fishery in early years have been very scarce and their pursuit has been unprofitable, and the present importance of the whale fishery, amounting in value to less than 2 per cent of the American fisheries, depends on the taking from shore stations of species of whales that formerly were for the most part neglected.

The glory of the whale fishery has departed forever, and the commercial if not the biological extinction of all kinds of whales is proceeding rapidly, undeterred and unlamented by the principal maritime powers.—Hugh M. Smith in National Geographic Magazine.

Braided Rivers.

A river not confined to a single channel, but broken up into a number of channels, which in turn branch and unite in a complex and confusing manner, is called a braided stream. It is caused by the slight fall of the stream, which prevents it from carrying away all the sediment swept into it by its numerous tributaries.

This material chokes the stream and forces it to spread into many shallow and shifting channels, resembling the strands of a braid. A good example of this is Jefferson river, in Montana.

What Did He Say?

Oliver Wendell Holmes once told Professor Poulton he would never repeat to any one what Tennyson said to him when he entered his house. William James pressed him to do so with the assurance, "There are no reporters here." But Dr. Holmes replied, with emphasis: "I have said that I will never tell any one. It was not a thing that I should have supposed any man would say to a guest he had invited to his house."

MURAD CIGARETTES

TO-DAY—

at this very hour—more smokers are trying Murads for the first time than all other high-grade cigarettes combined.

What is happening to-day has happened every day since Murads were first introduced.

What is responsible for this?

Not advertising—Quality!

MISHAP ON LAST BUSINESS TRIP

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF INJURIES TO MR. JAS. THOMPSON.

Further particulars of the accident which befel Mr. Jas. Thompson, M. L. A., state that he was struck by the National train at Homer station, about six miles north of Matheson on Wednesday between 5 and 6 p.m. Mr. Thompson sustained the loss of some fingers besides other injuries, which it is hoped will not prove serious. Mr. Thompson was coming up the track, intending to take train No. 47 for Cochrane. Seeing a train approaching, he hurried to get to the station, and when within one hundred feet of it tried to flag the train, thinking it was No. 47, which is due to stop to take on passengers. Instead of being No. 47 it was the National running on 47's time. A peculiar feature of the accident was that this was Mr. Thompson's last business trip north.

WELDING BY

Millard's Oxy-Acetylene Process

An ugly patch or the complete dismantling of an automobile to repair a broken frame is unnecessary if you use our modern method. Smashed cylinders, cranks and gear cases are made as good as new at a cost, but a fraction of a new part.

The intense heat of the Oxy-Acetylene flame melts together the iron, steel or aluminum parts, thus making a repair which is as good and as strong as when new.

Tires and Tubes Vulcanized and Repaired.

WHAT ALLIES REQUIRE OF FOE

TERMS ON WHICH PEACE WILL BE MADE WITH GERMANY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.— Declaring "It is impossible at the present moment to attain a peace which will assure them reparation, restitution and such guarantees to which they are entitled," the reply of the Entente Powers to President Wilson's recent peace note was received yesterday by the American Government.

The Allied Governments object to the implication in the President's note that the aims and purposes of the two groups of belligerents are the same, saying it "is in direct opposition to the evidence." The note says: "The objects of the Allies in the war will not be made known in detail until the hour of negotiations," but then summarizes these objects as follows:—

Restoration of provinces wrested in the past from the Allies by force or against the will of their populations.

"It never has been the design of the Allies to encompass the extermination of the German people," says the note.

The note is not taken to mean that no prospect of peace conference remains, since it is taken for granted that Germany is not willing to discuss terms on the basis laid down by the Allies.

Announcement from Ottawa is to the effect that men blind in one eye, deaf in one ear, or minus a finger or two, or a toe or two, may now sign with non-combatant but highly necessary and useful Forestry and Construction units. The eye test has been reduced first, to the lowest standard; second, to include recruits whose vision can be raised to normal by the aid of glasses; and third, men who have lost the sight of one eye. This latter class will be taken on on the understanding that they are eligible only for a Class 3 pension, which amounts to $208 per annum, if the sight of their sound eye is lost while in the service.

Moderate degrees of flat feet will not constitute a cause for rejection. In this connection, doubtful recruits will be tested by a five-mile walk. Recruits who have lost one or two fingers may be accepted if they are regarded by the medical board as capable of labor. They may also lack as many as two toes on each or both feet provided the great toes are not included in this total. Deafness in one ear will not bar enlistment, provided that the deafness is not due to an existing disease. In this connection the same pension provision as applied to men lacking one eye, is also in force.

PETERBORO BIRDS WIN

Samuel Oke of Peterborough won first and second prizes for the best dressed fowl. The winners were two Buff Orpingtons, one of which weighed over 12 lbs. dressed.

W. J. Crowhurst & Son, Port Hope, with 19 entries in Toulouse geese, Rouen ducks and Pekin ducks, won 6 firsts, 9 seconds, 3 thirds and 2 specials. They also secured the sweepstakes for best Pekin drake in the show.

Griffith and Hilbert of Wilford had 30 birds and won 8 firsts, 5 seconds, 1 third, 2 specials and a silver cup for most points in White Leghorns.

A. O. Kidd had nine Barred Rocks, one being one of the pictures of the show. His winnings were first on hen, first, second and fourth on cockerel and second on pullet. Mr. Kidd will exhibit at Ottawa. He also took a cup for most points in Barred Rocks.

Entry of 70 Birds

Curtis Bros., of Norham, had 70 birds on exhibition, comprising geese, Aylesbury ducks, Guinea Hens, Silver Hamburgs, Leghorns, Anconas, Black Spanish, White Rocks, Minorcas, Light Brahmas, Dark Brahmas, Pit Games, Single Combed Brown Leghorns, Cornish Black and Golden Hamburgs. These entries won 31 firsts, 22 seconds, and 7 thirds, besides a number of specials, a total of 60 prizes.

Bottrell & Sons, Bowmanville, took three sweepstakes for Oriental, Game and Miscellaneous bantams. They had in all 104 entries, and won 55 firsts, 26 seconds, 3 thirds and 4 specials.

H. Daniels of Lindsay, with 27 birds, Columbian, Buff and Partridge Wyandottes, got three specials in Columbians, 1 on buff and 1 on Partridge. He won 23 prizes.

H. Brown and Son, with a nice showing in 10 Blue Orpingtons, 14 Blue Andulusians and 2 Buff Orpingtons won 7 firsts, 3 seconds, 6 thirds and 2 fourths.

S. W. Lord, Campbellcroft, had 39 entries in Emden geese, Chinese, Runner ducks, Silver Campines, Black Spanish, Golden and Silver Polands, Japanese Bantams, Partridge, Cochin Bantams and Guineas. He won the sweepstakes in Campines, and captured 24 firsts, 14 seconds and 1 third.

SEMI-ANNUAL LONELY SALE ON TO-MORROW

A Brief Statement

Some men never patronize a sale, some never buy unless there is one. Both hold radical views. Its a case of "head I win tale you lose". But the man who requires an overcoat, suit or other article, at a time when a reliable clothing house says "$25.00 Suits for $17.85" and pledges that such is the case, it is then sound business and good judgment for him to purchase, and he strikes a happy medium. We assure you that every item is what the former price indicates.

Facts Tersely Told

This sale is held annually and our patrons look forward to its arrival. Its object and achievement is to stimulate trade in January, which would otherwise be a dull month. The name "Lonely" is because the garments offered are broken lines. The assortment is liberal, and contains all sizes. Each year its success increases; we can trace it to but one source "the remarkable values". Purchasers at former sales will uphold these statements.

STARTLING FACTS —READ THEM

United States Government Statistics Reveal:

That Only 358,000 out of their 100,000,000 population report incomes in excess of $2,500 per year.

That Nineteen out of every twenty fail to provide either for their families or old age.

That Every second man of the population at age twenty-five will be dependent upon someone else at sixty-five. Which class will you be in?

That Life Insurance Companies are distributing more than $2,000,000 per day.

That Life Insurance has decreased pauperism more than thirty-three and one-third per cent. in thirty-five years.

That Less than seven per cent. of the value of American lives is covered by Life Insurance.

That Life Insurance saves the nation more than $30,000,000 per year in maintaining the poor.

Under such conditions, what is your plain duty, aye, and privilege? Clearly to insure your life while you can. You say where and how can this best be done?

We answer — A monthly Income Policy for your family or an Endowment for yourself in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

With its $75,000,000 of assets, there is no Company represented in Canada, can offer you better, if any can offer you as good.

Let us show you what we have done, before placing your insurance. This places you under no obligation and may prove a decided advantage.

THOUGHTFUL FARMER FORESEES EVERYTHING

"Down at the Barn" He Has Every Little Trouble-saver All Ready For Use

A writer in the British Columbia Fruit and Farm Magazine says: Down at the barn I've got a box in which I keep bolts and scraps of iron that might be utilized for repair purposes. Say, it comes in mighty handy oftentimes. Down at the barn I've got a place to hang all the harness. Just nailed up a strip across the two-by-fours and drove spikes into them. Find it better than throwing the harness on the floor.

Down at the barn I've got a box for hammer, hatchet and nails. Don't have to look all over the place for the nails or something to drive them with. Mighty handy when you are in a hurry.

Down at the barn I've got a lot of rivets and everything just ready to mend a broken piece of the work or buggy harness. I've plenty of axle grease for the wagon and buggies, and some washers handy to keep wheels from rattling.

Down at the barn I've a [illegible] of binder twine ready to use when I need strings for sacks or any other purpose. I've got the surrey sheltered from all the rain and the hot sunshine. Haven't had the tires tightened for six years. They don't need it. I have a cosy stall for every horse and cow. Makes a fellow feel good when the storms are sweeping cold nights.

MEANING OF DREAMS

WHAT MAY BE DISCLOSED BY SCIENTIFIC ANALYSIS OF SLUMBER VISIONS.

Scientific dream interpretation helps us to see ourselves as we really are, gives us intimate glimpses of the subconscious as well as conscious desires, fears and modes of thinking that enter into the making of our character and the shaping of our conduct, according to H. Addington Bruce in the Mothers' Magazine.

The compilers of the gaudy little paper covered dream books once so much in vogue went rightly enough on the theory that dreams are symbolic. But they erred by assuming that they are always symbolic of future events and that any particular dream element can always be interpreted as symbolic of the same kind of future event.

Those who expect modern science to provide them with a dream manual akin to the old dream books, so that every one may become his own interpreter at a glance, are consequently doomed to disappointment. Accurate dream interpretation almost always means time and effort. But it is well worth the trouble it costs. All who would discover unsuspected weaknesses and defects in themselves, who would gain a maximum of health, happiness and efficiency through right living, will do well to seek to have their dreams analyzed.

And it is not only for the light it throws on one's nature and character that scientific dream interpretation is worth while. There are dreams which rightly interpreted throw light on the state of the dreamer's physical health, sometimes enabling action to be taken that will avert serious disease.

Canadian Trade Gains.

Only the expected occurs when the annual report of the Canadian Department of Customs makes a showing of greatly increased export trade for the Dominion during the last fiscal year. Nobody who takes in impressions could have been even casually in touch with Canadian affairs, during the last eighteen months, without being conscious of an industrial activity greater than had ever before been felt or expressed in the Dominion. In the height of Canada's development and prosperity previous to the outbreak of the European war, that is, in the fiscal year 1912-13, the total trade of the country passed the billion-dollar mark. Last fiscal year it ran close to the billion-and-a-half mark, and in the first six months of that period the industries of the Dominion had not taken on the pace at which they have been travelling since. It is a reasonable conclusion that the trade of Canada has made gains, since June 30 last, out of all comparison with those made in the same period of 1915-16.

The imports of Canada previous to the outbreak of the European war were 77.38 per cent. in value greater than its exports; this unfavorable balance has been almost completely reversed; in the last fiscal year the exports of the Dominion exceeded its imports in value by 56.40 per cent. Canada has cut down its external purchases not alone in the United Kingdom but in the United States, during the last two years. In the latter there has been, in the last fiscal year, a healthy drop of more than $30,000,000. This means that the money derived from Canadian industry is largely staying at home. One reservation must be made in this latter statement, however. Canada has put a large part of its surplus earnings into war loans and war supplies. The draft of taxes for its oversea army has been great. From the Atlantic to the Pacific everybody in the Dominion is busy. Thrift has received a wonderful stimulus. Our nation, as has been said before, has found itself. For the first time in its history it has something like an adequate comprehension of its resources and possibilities.

Knowing the principal cause, however, we are far from gloating over our present great prosperity. If people are getting rich in money, they have suffered and are suffering losses that money can never repay. The price of Canadian prosperity has been high beyond computation. But there is another and a brighter side. Canada is coming through the terrible experience that has befallen the empire a better and stronger country than it has ever been before. Morally, as well as materially, it is a new Canada.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,

Kept Fit Through Two Wars

Ontario Sapper Praises Dr. Cassell's Tablets.

That a soldier should use and praise Dr. Cassell's Tablets is clear proof of the wonderful sustaining power of this great strength-giving medicine. And thousands of service men on land and sea are trusting to Dr. Cassell's Tablets to sustain them through all the hardships of relentless war.

SAPPER A. HARTLEY, OF THE A. COMPANY, CANADIAN ENGINEERS, whose home address is 986, TRAFALGAR STREET, LONDON, ONTARIO, is one of many who have written in praise of Dr. Cassell's Tablets. He says:—"As a constant user of Dr. Cassell's Tablets I would like to add my testimony to their value. I used them when I was in the South African War, and, finding the benefit of them there, have taken them since whenever I felt run-down. I always recommend them, for I know they do all that is claimed for them. In my opinion they are the best tonic anyone can take for loss of appetite, poorness of the blood, or general weakness of the system. We have had a lot of hard training here, and some time ago I began to feel the strain, but I got some Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and the boys are surprised at what a difference they made in me. I mean to have some with me always on active service."

Sapper Hartley.

Dr. Cassell's Tablets put new life and vigour into weak, overstrained people. They nourish the nerves, enrich the blood, strengthen the general system, and create that snap and fitness which make life a joy. Take a course of them, and health and vital energy will soon be yours.

JUNIOR PETES ONE GOAL BEHIND AT OSHAWA GAME; SCORED FIVE IN THIRD

Besides Stiff Opposition on the Part of the Home Team, Locals Had to Swallow Some Weird Decisions by Referee---Score Was 11-10.

Peterborough Juniors were defeated at Oshawa last night in a game in which 21 scores were registered, the odd goal going to Oshawa after a hard battle on keen ice. The Oshawa juniors were ahead by 5 to 4 at the end of the first session and when the second rest was called they were leading by 10 to 5. In the third period the Petes scored five goals to Oshawa's one, and with an even break in the decisions by Referee Gorrie of Toronto would have emerged on the big end of the score.

Gorrie is credited with having put up a weird performance, the play at times being too fast for him. He not only offended the local players, but also failed to please the homesters' following.

Bartley Starred

Bartley was the star performer for the Petes, with Cherret a close second, these lads splitting nine goals between them. Montgomery got the other Peterborough counter. He was a marked man throughout the fray and Graham was up against a similar argument.

The teams:

Peterborough.—Goal, Murray; defence, McIntyre and Montgomery; rover, Graham; centre, Cherret; wings, Frost and Bartley.

Referee—Gorrie of Toronto.

Major O'Flynn, manager of the destinies of the 247th hockey team, believes in giving his puckchasers lots of practice in fast company, and has every hope of arranging a game with the fast Queen's University team, to be played here next Tuesday night.

This should be a good drawing card for local fans. The fast Riverside team of Toronto only beat the Kingston aggregatgion by a score of 2-1 in Toronto.

Jerry Coughlin is in Toronto working out with the Torontos in an effort to land a job with the professionals. Jerry has had considerable experience in O.H.A. and semi-pro. hockey and he fell from the graces of the amateur body.

Lieut. J. F. Strickland is in charge of the 247th Bn. team which left at noon for Cobourg where they will play tonight. Thornton will not play, and Lieut. Quinn will fill the vacancy. Otherwise the team is unchanged.

CURLING

The inter-rink matches at the curling rink last night brought out a full quota of regular rinks and the games were exciting in a number of instances. The results were as follows:—

Spoken With Feeling.

"There are all sorts of synonyms for money in this country," said the talkative man. "We call it 'tin,' 'mazuma,' 'kale,' 'dough,' and a dozen other names I don't recall just now."

A solemn looking man seated in one corner opened his mouth as if to say something and then closed it without uttering a word.

"'The unattainable,'" the solemn man replied and then fell once more into deep thought.

No Use For It.

"Have you a five dollar bill that you don't know what to do with?"

"Yes; here is one."

"Oh, thank you. But I say, this is counterfeit."

"Well, you asked me for one I didn't know what to do with."

When Women Meet.

"That woman pretended to be glad to see me. What an actress she is!"

"But you were a match for her?"

"Yes. I pretended to be just as glad to see her."—Exchange.

His Turn to Ask.

"Am I the first girl you ever kissed?"

"Am I the first man to whom you ever put that question?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

HICKEY—BLACKBURN

St. John's Church, Newmarket, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Tuesday, Jan. 9, when Barbara, eldest daughter of Mr. George Blackburn of Newmarket, was united in marriage to Mr. D. H. Hickey, eldest son of Mr. P. J. Hickey, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Wedlock of Newmarket.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Hickey will reside at 640 Bethune St.

Mr. A. H. Stratton is in Toronto on a business trip.

Judge Hopkins of Lindsay entertained at his home on Wednesday night, the occasion being his birthday.

Mrs. A. H. Stratton left for Toronto this afternoon and will spend the week-end the guest of Mrs. Peter Campbell.

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, BD., will give a lecture on The Humor of Life in the Presbyterian Church at Millbrook next Monday night.

Mrs. W. H. Meldrum has gone to Detroit on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. E. A. Green. She will be away about a month.

In spite of the cold yesterday a good crowd was present at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum to work for the Red Cross. The tea was a great success. Mrs. J. White and Mrs. W. O'Brien, the hostesses, were assisted by Mrs. M. Tooley, who poured tea and the young ladies who looked after the tables were the Misses Annie Simons, Veronica O'Brien, Bernice Giroux, Marie O'Dette, M. Hickey and G. Carson.

Dr. J. H. Cormack, of Oakwood, is visiting in the city.

Mrs. W. H. Bell of Keene was a visitor to the city today.

MISS L. HUGHES TO SPEAK HERE

PROMINENT SUFFRAGIST WILL ADDRESS MEETING NEXT THURSDAY.

Miss Laura Hughes, daughter of ex-inspector James L. Hughes, and niece of Sir Sam, will deliver an address in this city on equal suffrage next Thursday. Miss Hughes comes here under the auspices of the Local Council of Women and full particulars will be published later.

There is no person in Canada more familiar with this subject than Miss Hughes, who has made a study of its every aspect, in Canada, in the United States and in England. She has been active in war work ever since the beginning of hostilities and worked for some time in a munition factory across the ocean. It was Miss Hughes, too, who shed so much light on the problem of woman's labor by taking a position in a Toronto factory.

Warning to Teamsters

Chief of Police Thompson has announced his intention of issuing summonses for all teamsters who have not taken out licenses by Jan. 15th.

AT THE ROYAL.

Grand show in the Royal tonight. Three reels of war pictures showing the French fighting at Verdun. These pictures are recommended by the French Government. Two reels of the Million Dollar serial, The Girl From Frisco, and a three reels feature drama with an all star cast. Another three reels of a feature detective story and two laughable comedies. This makes the best show ever given at the Royal. On Saturday afternoon school children will be admitted for five cents.

WILL HEAR COMPLAINTS.

The Property Committee of the City Council will meet tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock to hear what any citizens have to say about the garbage collection.

Forty Visits in Eleven Months

Some idea of the distress and want relieved by the Canadian Patriotic Fund may be gathered from the following story, a record of which is on file in the office of the fund in Montreal. When this case came to the attention of the Relief committee the mother was in the maternity hospital. Three children under six years of age were living in confined quarters, and an older invalid brother was living with them, all in a state of destitution. A woman to clean the house and administer to the wants of the family was immediately sent in. A ward visitor approached the landlord, who generously lowered the rent. The eldest child had been ill with measles, and the fund had her sent to the Alexandra Hospital. When the mother returned home she was taken with the same disease, as also the second child. A doctor, nurse and charwoman were placed in regular attendance. The infant caught the disease, was sent to the hospital and subsequently died. Following the measles the mother was confined to her bed with a violent attack of rheumatism, one of the girls developed mumps, and the youngest pneumonia. Another nurse was secured, and medical aid was provided. In all, forty visits were made to this family by the fund visitor within eleven months.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY TIME-TABLE CHANGES

Effective Sunday, Jan. 14, the following alteration in Grand Trunk train service will be made in and out of Peterborough:—

Train No. 96, now leaving Peterborough 8.10 a.m., for Port Hope, will leave Peterborough 8.55 a.m., arriving in Port Hope 9.55 a.m., instead of 9.10 a.m., as at present.

TRIESTE BOMBARDED BY ITALIANS

BRITISH ATTACK AT SERRE GAIN FOOTING IN POSITION

Admittance of British Successful Attack is Made by Berlin.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 13. — British troops attacked again today the German lines at Serre, north of the Ancre, on the Somme front. They gained a footing in one advanced position, army headquarters announced.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE AT CHAULNES.

PARIS, Jan. 13. — There was artillery fighting in the region of Chaulnes, says today's official statement. The night passed quietly on the remainder of the front.

NOW CHASE AFTER CASH

Conviction of Sampson Followed by Flow of Bills.

The recent conviction of Clarence Sampson of Dummer on a charge of stealing is going to be a very expensive one to the county if County Treasurer Elliott pays all the bills that are presented to him by persons who at some time or other have assisted in the chase.

Acting High County Constable Moore will of necessity have quite an expense bill for work actually done in the search for information which might have resulted in the arrest of the accused. Then there are a number of county constables who took a hand in trying to locate Sampson, and they contracted bills for livery and auto hire, taking trips without result. They want their pay for the expenses and time lost on journeys through the country.

Witnesses' Fees.

The most important expense bill will be that of witnesses from a distance, who made two trips to the city to strengthen the Crown's case against the prisoner, and then there will be the expense of bringing the prisoner back from Watertown, N.Y.

Some of these were legitimate outlay and unavoidable, but whether all of them will pass the county board of audit is another question. Whoever gave the authority for the extra expenses will have a nice bunch of bills to O.K. and many explanations to make.

HIS 10th YEAR IN PASTORATE

Tomorrow is the tenth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. J. R. Webb at Murray Street Baptist Church. The deacons have therefore arranged to celebrate the event at the morning service, when Rev. H. E. Stillwell, B.A., of Toronto, and late of India, a personal friend of the pastor, will preach. The music and other features of the service will be in keeping with the nature of the occasion. It has been arranged, too, that the officers of the church meet at 10.30 for a brief season of prayer. The pastor will occupy the pulpit in the evening.

PAPER FOR CANADIANS

LONDON, Jan. 13.—It is proposed to establish here a daily newspaper for the benefit of Canadians serving in England and France. The War Record Office would be responsible for the production.

BROOKE PIONEER GONE

MUNITIONS EXPLOSIONS

BLOW-UP AT THE POWDER WORKS OF THE DU PONT CO.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Four hundred thousand pounds of smokeless powder blew up at the Du Pont Powder Works at Saskell, N.J., last night, and for the second time in forty-eight hours New York and northern New Jersey were jarred and frightened by a munitions explosion.

Damage estimated at $1,500,000 was caused by last night's explosion. It was said at the offices of the company at midnight that all of the more than 1,500 workers had been accounted for with the exception of two men, and that twelve had been injured.

Possibly Incendiary

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.— A statement that the fire and explosions which wrecked the plant of the Canadian Car & Foundry Co. at Kingsland, N.J., yesterday, was "possibly if not probably of incendiary origin," was issued here yesterday by the officials of the company. The total loss, it was said, was $16,-000,000.

OPENING OF HOUSE

Speech From the Throne Next Thursday.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—Parliament assembles next Thursday, but the formal opening will be held and the speech from the throne will be delivered only on Friday. Thursday's proceedings will be confined to the election of Mr. Rhodes as speaker. The address in reply to the speech from the throne will be debated the following Monday.

CITY TEAMSTERS WILLING BUT ASK FOR PROTECTION

Non-Residents Get Off With the Same License Fee.

The teamsters of the city are all willing and ready to take out licenses as the city by-law requires, but they want the police commissioners to give them certain protection.

In other cities the by-law makes the fee for a non-resident teamster double that paid by the city property owners. At present the local license does not discriminate between local men and outsiders.

The Police Commissioners will no doubt meet at an early date to take the matter up.

BAILIEBORO MAN DIED SUDDENLY.

C. F. Dwson of Bailieboro, died very suddenly at his residence last evening. He is survived by his widow and several children.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from the family residence.

A Grandfather's Clock Made Her

Mr. Frank Clarke, the Charlotte street jeweler, has just completed a made-in-Canada grandfather's clock. The works came from Kitchener, Ontario, and the movement was assembled by Mr. Clarke and placed in position in a case of quartered oak, made by Mr. J. B. O'Dette, a foreman at the Peterborough Canoe Works. The clock is fitted with a cathedral gong and strikes the half hour and hour.

The case is seven feet high and is 2½ feet wide. The completed clock does credit both to Mr. Clarke and Mr. O'Dette. It is priced at $60.

THE WEATHER

There has been a sudden and decided change in weather conditions during the past few hours. Tuesday we had it 17 below; this morning it was 20 above, with snow falling. During the night two below was the low point. Colder weather again is around the corner.—W. P.

FELL 140 FEET AND WILL LIVE

TEAMSTER HURLED OVER RAIL OF HIGH BRIDGE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan 13.—While driving a loaded lumber wagon across Williamsburg Bridge yesterday, Geo. Kitser was hurled from his high seat over the bridge rail in the East River when his team became frightened and ran away. He was picked up and taken to the hospital, where it is said, although suffering internal injuries, he will live. His fall was 140 feet.

A whole train of hospital cars, produced by the Government railway department for the Military Hospitals Commission, were "launched" today.

GERMANS THROWN BACK AND ROUMANIANS TAKE TRENCHES

Heavy Attacks on the Russians Are Repulsed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Enemy attacks against heights south of the River Oituz were repulsed.

Roumanians attacked the enemy west of Monestar Kachinul on the River Kasino and after a violent struggle succeeded in throwing back the enemy and occupying his trenches. The Roumanians acptured three machine guns.

Heavy forces of Germans attacked the Russian lines yesterday east of Kalnzen, south of Lake Babit, on the Riga front, the War Office announced today. The attacking forces were driven off.

TURKS TAKE TOWN

BERLIN, Jan. 13.— Army Headquarters says: On the Roumanian front further ground has been gained north of the Slanic Valley, where 170 men and several machine guns were captured.

Turkish troops captured the town of Mihalea, north-west of Braila, with 400 prisoners and ten machine guns. The balance of the garrison who attempted to escape were drowned in the Sereth.

JAS. BLAKE FATALLY HURT WHEN SLEIGH STRUCK POLE

Young Wife Was With Him at Time of Accident

From injuries which he sustained in an accident last night, James C. Blake, a young married man who lived at 120 Park street, died at 2 o'clock this morning. A party were sleighriding down what is known as Dale's Hill, in Brownton, last night, Mr. Blake and his wife being with them. Deceased was steering the sleigh, which ran against a telephone pole, and he sustained internal injuries.

Deceased was a member of Peterborough Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 111, having joined last March. He was 26 years old, and is survived by his young widow. He was employed at the C. G. E.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon from the residence of his mother, 639 Chamberlain street, to Little Lake Cemetery, and will be under the auspices of the I.O.O.F.

No conditional compliance from the Greek Government will be tolerated by the Allies, in the demands of the ultimatum to the Greek Government.

REEVE B. W. SQUIRE

Of Norwood, who is in the running for the 1917 Peterborough County wardenship.

NEW RECTOR AT BRANTFORD

BRANTFORD, Jan. 12.—Rev. J. B. Fotheringham of Goderich will be inducted by the retiring rector, Ven. Archdeacon G. C. Machenzie into the rectorship of Grace Anglican Church here on Jan. 19.

TRIESTE FORTIFICATIONS ARE DAMAGED BY ITALIAN 'PLANES

LETTER DISCLOSES DEPLORABLE CONDITION OF PEOPLE IN VIENNA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 13. — The Arbeter Zeitung of Vienna publishes a letter to the burgomaster from the wives of the city tramway employes who have been called to the colors, appealing for full pay. The letter says: "We are in a deplorable condition; our distress is frightful, and our children are pining away. Although employes who have not been called to the colors have received an increase in pay, they are starving, in spite of it, and how must it be with us poor creatures with our half pay? Our wretchedness is great. On our knees we entreat your excellency to have compassion and grant us full pay. Do not abandon us. Take pity on our children."

Hostile Seaplane is Brought Down and Occupants Taken

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, Jan. 13. — An official communication says that on Thursday Italian seaplanes bombarded and damaged the fortifications of Trieste. On the same night two hostile seaplanes tried to bombard Grado Cervignano without success. One of them was brought down and the aviators captured.

247th BAND WILL PLAY AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE PRECEDING ADDRESSES

Recruiting Meeting on Sunday Night at 8.30

The 247th Band will provide music at the recruiting meeting in the Grand Opera House Sunday night and Miss Emma Worth will sing.

Hon. George P. Graham will be the chief speaker and he will have an interesting message for all. The meeting will open at 8:30.

Pte. Brownlee Killed.

Pte. Hugh E. Brownlee of the famous Canadian regiment, "The Little Black Devils," and a brother of Mrs. A. G. Lawless, Lakefield, has been killed in action. He was on duty as sniper at the time of his death.

"Y." Dugouts Under Fire.

The Y. M. C. A. has pushed its work right up to the battle lines, says a Paris despatch. The refreshment dugout, where hot drinks are served out to the men, is now often so near the enemy that great precautions have to be taken lest it should be discovered. Some of these dugouts are in the debris of recently captured positions. One of them is so near a very vital point that when the wounded were carried past to the dressing station a short time ago the Y. M. C. A. was able to serve them with tea and coffee.

Message From Trenches.

The Adjutant-General, Canadian Militia, O. C. ..o. 3, Kingston, has addressed the following order to the O. C. Military District No. 1, London, Ont., O. C. M. D. No. 2, Toronto: Re Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Sir,—

I have the honor, by direction, to state that the marginally noted officer has returned from overseas serseas service and will be in Canada for the next two or three months.

Capt. Burnham has expressed his willingness to assist in recruiting in every way possible. He has just returned from a visit to the trenches and will be glad to visit your district and address public meetings, conveying a message from the trenches to men in Canada to come over and help their comrades.

You are requested to take this matter up with your district recruiting officer and suggest that he should communicate with Capt. Burnham with a view to utilizing his services.

This officer's address while in Canada will be,

House of Commons,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Major-General,
A. Adjt.-General.

Dr. Baker's Brother Dead.

Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker, principal of Alberta College, Belleville, who lectured in St. James' Church last night, has learned that his brother, Capt. C. W. Baker of Toronto, had died of wounds. Capt. Baker enlisted and went to the front more than two years ago. He was invalided and returned to France. Some weeks ago he had one of his legs broken in action. He was a veterinary surgeon.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman returned from Havelock this moring after arranging for a recruiting campaign in the village. All the merchants are being asked to uphold Havelock's splendid record and do all in their power to assist the recruiting officers. There are still many eligible men there that would look well in khaki. The 247th Batt. band will attend a recruiting meeting in Havelock on Friday night next.

Recruiting meetings will be held on Monday in Norwood and on Tuesday in Millbrook. Special speakers will be on hand to address these meetings and the 247th Band and other entertainers will contribute.

Still They Come.

Two more recruits were added to the roll this morning in the persons of Pte. Wilfrid Jones, 106 Lansdowne St. and Pte. Jas. Wesley Rogers of Clarina.

Church Parades

All battalions under formation in the Third Military District will hold a church parade every Sunday after tomorrow.

Largely Attended Meeting

Judge Huycke and Major O'Flynn addressed a very largely attended meeting in the interests of Red Cross work in Keene last evening. The chair was occupied by Reeve Anderson, who in his address pointed out that Otonabee township had donated $4,000 to the Red Cross last year and $3,000 the previous year.

Miss M. Teigmann gave several beautiful violin solos, in which she was ably accompanied by Miss McFarlane.

The Keene Quartette contributed several numbers.

Battalion Orders

By Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, Commanding, 247th Bn., C.E.F.

Inoculation—

Medical Officer's parade at 10 a.m. Jan. 15; second inoculation for all inoculated last Monday.

First inoculation for all officers and other ranks now available.

Officer Commanding A Co. will arrange accordingly.

The Sergeant-Major will parade all headquarters details.

Duties—

Next for duty—F. J. Strickland.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lieut.,
Adjutant

Pte Taylor Wounded

Pte. Hiram Taylor, of Curve Lake who went overseas with the 93rd Batt., is reported wounded in today's casualty lists.

INSTALLATION OF FORESTERS' 1917 OFFICKRS

SOCIAL TIME FOR MEMBERS AND FRIENDS OF THE CHEMONG COURT.

The annual installation of officers of Court Chemong 530, I.O.F., was held on Thursday evening. There was a good attendance of the members and their friends. The court was favored with a visit from Bro. J. H. Eagleson, High Chief Ranger of Eastern Ontario, and of the Government Civil Service Department, Ottawa, who duly installed the officers.

The chairman for the evening was Bro. A. H. Webb, who presided in his usual able and efficient manner, and in a well chosen speech welcomed Bro. J. S. Eagleson to the city and court, and also the members and their friends to the meeting.

The meeting was opened by singing God Save the King.

Bro. W. Madill, treasurer, read the financial statement, which was highly satisfactory.

Mr. J. John contributed a reading in his forcible and realistic manner. Mr. J. Lydell then sang the popular songs, Roamin' in the Gloamin', Come Back, Nanny, It's Nice to Get Up in the Morning, and had to respond to encores. Bro. J. S. Eagleson gave a splendid address and in part stated that the order had over 200,-000 member and a large financial surplus and reserve with the Government, and now good over 100 per cent. strong. There were 3,000 members with the British forces and 100 of them had been killed in France and their beneficiaries had been paid the insurance in full.

Major Campbell was present and gave a brief inspiring speech on recruiting.

Bro. G. P. Powell in a neat speech proposed votes of thanks to Bro. Eagleson and Major Campbell; this was seconded by Bro. J. W. Byers.

Refreshments were then served by the ladies and card games were engaged in by a large number.

Miss Calder and Miss Allan delighted the audience with selections on the violin and piano, and also as accompanists to the various singers.

Votes of thanks were tendered to Mesdames Bradshaw, Webb, Reid and Miller for preparing the refreshments.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was Bros. A. H. Webb, G. W. McKee, H. A. Webb, J. W. Byers, G. W. Powell, R. E. Duvall and F Clark, to whom, and to the ladies, the success is attributed.

TWO STEAMERS SUNK

LONDON, Jan 13.—The Greek steamer Evangelos and the British steamer Brentwood are reported sunk.

Huge subscriptions are pouring in for the British war loan.

Hereafter letters addressed to Berlin, Ont., will not be sent to the Dead Letter Office, but will be forwarded to Kitchener, Ont., without delay.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, JANUARY 13, 1917

TOMORROW NIGHT'S MEETING.

HON. GEO. P. GRAHAM will be the chief orator at the recruiting meeting tomorrow night, which will be held at the Grand Opera House instead of in the Armories, as in this zero weather it is a matter of some difficulty to heat the latter building. Mr. Graham is one of the most magnetic public speakers in Canada, and should fill the Opera House to its capacity. He has a son at the front, and has always been an active and successful worker in the cause.

The women of Peterborough were shown their duty plainly by the speakers at the meeting last Sunday night. It is up to them, who have already done so much, to use their influence to induce the faltering young men to step to the front and get into uniform. To begin with, they could induce all such young fellows to accompany them to the meeting tomorrow night. "The One Hundred Clubs" are organized so that one man may get at least one other to enlist. If the hundreds of women who attend the recruiting meetings could each bring one likely eligible, the oratory would not be wasted entirely upon those for whose benefit it is not designed.

The young man, it may be, does not realize the danger that threatens the Empire, or understand what is required of him. He will never realize or understand until he can be got out to the recruiting meetings, and the women are the proper parties to act as agents in this matter.

THAT TROUBLE AT KITCHENER.

THE TROUBLE at Kitchener seems to have been fomented to a degree by outsiders, especially by the sensation-loving press and the time-serving politicians. If a Citizens' League is formed in any community, socialism, if not anarchy, is at once suspected, while the only object of such an organization is to promote the welfare of the corporation.

When the candidates of the Citizens' League were elected to the various municipal offices, all kinds of trouble was anticipated. The new council, it was reported, intended to hold star chamber sessions and work out pernicious policies in the dark. It was assumed, without any reason, that they were to change the new name "Kitchener" back to the old designation, and otherwise defy the citizens, who alone were supposed to be truly loyal.

Leave Kitchener alone and it will work out its own destiny to the satisfaction of all parties interested. The new civic officials appear to measure up to the average. They will meet in open session, as the law requires, and no attempt will be made to change the name of the city again. It is likely that any objection to the original change was based on sentimental and business reasons, and that patriotic considerations were never a serious element in the discussion. A proposition to change the name of any city always precipitates a more or less serious factional disturbance even when the country is at peace with its neighbors. Kitchener will be all right if breeders of mischief on the outside will only restran themselves from taking a hand in preparing the municipal kettle of broth.

The saddest feature of the whole controversy from the start has been the lame attempt of politicians to place the government in a false light. The very papers that have done their utmost to make capital out of the purely local differences at Kitchener are the ones who attempt to invent excuses for the ribald mob that breaks up recruiting meetings in another part of the Dominion. The disloyal or lukewarm subjects of the British Empire, the stranger within our gates, is bad enough, but he is little if any worse than the paper or politician who seeks to fatten upon the stress of the nation.

There are different forms of "political frightfulness." Perhaps the worst of all is that evidenced by the ranter who would cover his own misdeeds by wrapping around them the flag he professes to reverence.

WHY FORCE AN ELECTION?

THE BORDEN GOVERNMENT is meeting Parliament infinitely stronger in public confidince than it has been at any time since the early days of the war. A few months ago there undoubtedly was general unrest and irritation throughout the country. Without either the time or the inclination to indulge in partisan controversy, members of the Government were constrained to permit all kinds of reckless charges and insinuations to pass unanswered, with the inevitable, temporary result that their silence was in certain quarters mistaken for weakness and an admission of guilt.

But, as time went on, and investigation after investigation exposed the falsity of the accusations and the petty calibre of the men behind them, public opinion steadied and national confidence in the Administration's conduct of the war became stronger than ever.

The first readjustment in this direction came with the findings of the Royal Commission which inquired into the shell charges, findings which not only exonerated the Government, but which exposed an Opposition campaign of falsehood and misrepresentation upon an unprecedented scale.

Then, in quick succession, came the downfall of the Parliament buildings charges, the nickel charges, and the Ross rifle charges; and the light which each explosion turned upon the scurvy motives of the men who engineered the attacks, left a profoundly unfavorable impression throughout the country with respect to the methods of the Opposition.

Finally, in the general process of strengthening public confidence in the Government, was the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and some of his principal lieutenants. The much advertised conference of Liberal leaders in Ottawa in November was expected to produce some concrete, definite program with respect to the problems of the war and the issues of the future. Instead, it degenerated into a confusion of negative criticism, lacking in cohesive national purpose, and barren of constructive thought. This failure of Sir Wilfrid and his party to point in a single instance to what should have been done in the war by the Government that had not been done, or to what had been done that should not have been done, coupled with Sir Wilfrid's unexplained refusal to join Sir Robert Borden in an appeal for recruits, his strange attitude toward National Service, and his wavering inconsistency on matters affecting the war accordingly as he addresses audiences in Ontario and in Quebec, has not been without its effect upon public thought, and does not encourage hope in Liberal breasts of victory just now at the polls.

Then came the report of Sir Charles Davidson on the matter which he had investigated as a Royal Commissioner, the sale of small arms to the Allies, and the purchase of two submarines for the defence of the British Columbian coast. The hope of the Liberals that the findings of Sir Charles Davidson would discredit the Administration have been blasted. The report, instead, is one of the best testimonials the Borden Government has received since taking office.

Why should the country be torn up by an election in a time like the present, when nothing that a designing Opposition can do throws a shadow of suspicion upon the Administration that is guiding Canada through the greatest crisis in the nation's history?

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

THE OFFICERS of the Canadian Patriotic Fund are waging an active campaign throughout the greater part of Ontario to ensure the raising of at least six million dollars, this province's share of the burden for 1917. All kinds of newspaper and other publicity is being given the movement. Even in those municipalities where there will be no subscription campaigns, every effort will be made to stimulate individual giving.

In Peterborough, the $60,000 required for the Fund will be secured by a tax levy. There are, however, a number of residents whom it will be impossible to reach by this means, but all such will be given an opportunity to make a voluntary contribution.

The need of the Fund is greater than ever this year, and the drains upon it are heavier. The man who for any good and suffcint reason cannot go to the war himself should be pleased when a chance to help maintain those who do go is offered him.

PAYING WAR INDEMNITIES.

THE ALLIES have issued a statement as to what they will insist upon before they consent to lay down the sword, but they declare that they will not state their conditions fully until actual negotiations are begun. Germany and her allies will be required to make reparation for the damage they have wrought. They must withdraw from all Allied territory which they now occupy, restore Alsace and Lorraine to France, and the Turk must be driven from Euorpe, thus giving Russia what she has so long coveted, possession of Constantinople.

In the matter of making reparation, damage to property is alone taken into consideration. Germany and Austria may be stripped of their last cent and inch of territory, and still the debt to humanity will remain unsettled. Those priceless works of art so wantonly destroyed can never be replaced. The cathedral at Rheims can never be fully restored, and Belgium's losses cannot be made good. For ages to come the brave little nation that first engaged the Hun barbarians in conflict will suffer from the effects of her sacrifice.

The property damage caused by the war has been beyond estimate, but what of the loss of human life? If the conquerors figured on this basis, all the wealth in the world could not discharge Germany's obligation in this respect. Every able-bodied man is reckoned by actuaries to be worth, striking an average, $4000 to the world. His value to his friends and dependents, however, is beyond calculation. But if Germany were charged with the value of every human life for the loss of which that country is directly and solely responsible, the last of her possessions, if confiscated, would fall far short of paying the debt.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Loyalty of printers throughout Canada has been amply proven by hundreds who have sprung to the defence of their flag and country. Therefore, it was quite in keeping with this virtue that the members of Toronto Typographical Union, on Saturday night, enthusiastically endorsed the Government's registration scheme. They still have use for "shooting-sticks" in a case of emergency.

JUST TRY TO UNDERSTAND

(Frank Crane.)

Just to understand.

I think the real reason why we dislike anybody is that we do not understand him. I have a theory that every human being is lovable, if only understood.

And if we would try to understand our enemies half as hard as we try to overcome them they would cease to be enemies.

There is the mother who lives in constant friction with her daughter. Their attitude is one of constant hostility. The mother complains that the daughter is headstrong, secretive, wayward, intractable. The daughter that the mother is hard, unsympathetic, always finding fault. If both parties only had imagination enough to put themselves in each other's place! If each would seek to understand the other, instead of justifying, excusing and pitying herself!

Those who get along best with very small children are those who most carefully study them, who try to get heir viewpoint, who endeavor to understand, more than to compel, corect, or teach.

In fact, the whole business of "getting along with folks" resolves itself into a matter of understanding folks, and there is no business in the world that affects our peace of mind more profoundly.

Get out of yourself! Get into the other mind. Unself yourself a bit—and you will understand yourself better!

Lovers, try to understand, and you will escape jealousies, slights and all the poison of offences that mar your delight in one another.

Parents, try to understand and you will not lose your children.

Children, try to understand your parents, and you will find their care for you a pleasant garden and not a walled prison. Neighbors, try to understand, and your communal life will be a joy and not an irritation.

Employers and employed, if you would try to understand each other you would both get more out of your relation than by fighting.

Nations, try to understand each other. The time is past for despising and hating them that are of another blood and speech. Race hate, rivalry, fear, contention, pride—do you not see their result in the cataclysm now in Europe?

And God—He forgives because He understands.

COMMENTS ON CIVIC TOPICS

(Municipal World.)

The careful study of municipal administration will direct attention to several things that must be secured before any community can rest satisfied with the work of its public officials.

◆ ◆ ◆

◆ ◆ ◆

Men cannot register their minds at the polls unless they have minds to register, and the voter who makes up his mind without information is no source of strength or wisdom to any government.

◆ ◆ ◆

We have heard much in late years of "an awakened public conscience" which has revolutionized the public affairs of this municipality or that: but these sudden awakenings have not, as a rule, brought us more than a short spell of government by indignation.

◆ ◆ ◆

The proper conduct of a municipality's business is not in any sense a political question. It is a matter that directly affects every industrial, commercial and betterment interest in the community.

◆ ◆ ◆

The steady increase in the per capita requirements of municipalities, both large and small, presents one of our most serious municipal problems.

◆ ◆ ◆

The chief merit of free government is not the efficiency which it procures at the apex of the administrative pyramid; it is the initiative and intelligence which it develops at the base.

ARE YOU TIRED OF GIVING?

Tired of giving to the Patriotic Fund, are you?

Well, Tommy is probably tired of fighting in the trenches, but he isn't dropping his rifle and striking the trail for home!

The fact is, we Stay-at-Homes have to see this thing out, like it or not, tired or not. We stand pledged to support the wives and children of the men who have thrown up their civil employment and are now fighting our battles.

Don't let us evr lose sight of that fundamental fact. It is for us and us alone that these men are risking their lives. This war is our war—ours to lose or win. These men are placing their lives in jeopardy every day in order that we may win. These men are placing their lives in jeopardy every day in order that we may win. They will carry the fight to a victorious finish only if we give them courage by taking care of their families, and by sending them all necessary reinforcements up to the limit of our ability.

We who stay at home are escaping all tooo freely if all we have to do is to give of our surplus money. How trifling are such gifts compared with the gifts of precious lives these men so forely offer.

Died Suddenly.

L. Ewen, of Kirkfield, married a year, dropped dead after unhitching his horse at the home of his cousin.

A DAILY NOVELETTE

"I've found it!"
Then our hero cried,
As he through wife's Belongings pried.

Sheerlock Bones, the great detective, sat in a comfortable position on the edge of the bookcase, calmly smoking a Gesundheit Julianna, when in rushed Ever Lookinmore, greatly excited.

"I want you to help me decipher this code. I found it in my wife's desk and I think it will show where her father buried his treasure. You know the old man didn't leave a cent and we thought he was rich."

This was the code: Chain 40 and 3 to turn. 1st Row: 3t, ch15, turn. 2nd Row: 1 t into 5th ch 15, turn. 17 t, 4 o. 3 t, 4 o. 6 t, 1 dt.

"Umph!" said the great detective. "Before I work on the case case I'll go home with you to get a couple of dozen clues. I'll want to see the desk you found it in. The box in which it was concealed, etc. All those little things may throw some light on the subject."

The great detective and Lookinmore rummaged all through Mrs. Lookinmore's closet and under the carpet, behind the wall paper, and they even were so thorough as to look between the quicksilver and the glass in her mirror, but nothing doing.

Just then Mrs. Lookinmore rushed in the room saying, "Have you seen —where did you get that paper? Give it to me this instant! That's the filet crochet design for a divan cover that Mrs. Quackly gave me yesterday."

orges Carpentier, France's pugistic idol and most gallant of ting airmen. was born at Lens years ago yesterday. Since becom- a military aviator Carpentier has ice been decorated for bravery — ecord of which all friends of the ing game may well be proud. Car- tier worked in a coal mine as a , but he is now an owner of coal nes—although these are now be- worked by the Germans. Beginning his ring career at 13, Carpentier fought his way through all the divisions from bantam weight up to light heavyweight.

"I know Carpentier well," says Eugene Corri in his book. "Thirty Years a Boxing Referee," and adds: "He possesses all the natural charm that characterizes the finished Frenchman. His manners are delightful. and might well excite anyone's envy; but these things do not comprise the character of Carpentier. There is in him much of the bulldog tenacity and courage as any Briton ever possesses. He can be frightfully fierce, though in saying that I must not be thought to convey that he violates the traditions of the ring. He fights fiercely, but he fights fairly, and never, so far as I have seen, subordinates his art to floundering violence. His cleverness is very remarkable at critical junctures, while his hitting powers at close quarters is astounding. The young Frenchman, though the war has cost him thousands of pounds, is brimful of cheeriness and optimism and all the virtues that go to make a real man."

Platonic love is a sort of prologue to the real thing.

CURLING

The inter-rink matches at the Curling Rink last night were of more than ordinary interest, owing to the fact that some of the crack curlers were beaten by the veterans. The contests towards the finish were especially interesting owing to the possible change to be made by a well-placed shot.

The scores last night were:

G. W. Green	O. A. Moore
R. Dobbin	J. F. Linton
W. M. Laing	M. C. Tooley
W. H. Bradburn	A. W. Archibald
Skip 7	Skip .. .15

There will be no schedule games tonight. All the ices are open to skips who can select rinks and settle old disputes.

It is quite likely that the skips for the District Cup and Tankard series will get their rinks out for a practice.

The Open Bonspiel.

The Peterborough Curling Club will hold a meeting next Friday night to take up general business and to discuss the question of holding an open as well as a local bonspiel this winter.

Peterborough's open bonspiel last winter was a very successful one, but some of the members are of the opinion that the event should not be arranged for this year.

Games With Lakefield.

Three rinks of Lakefield curlers will come to the city on Monday and play a friendly game with three local rinks.

EVERY-WINTER TRIP FOR FIFTY-TWO YEARS.

WELLAND, Jan. 13. Willson Chambers, of River Bend, near Wellandport, skated down the creek from his home to Niagara Falls, at which place he visited his brother-in-law, William Misener. Mr. Chambers, who is over 70 years of age, has been making this trip of 50 miles on skates every winter for the past 52 years. He uses a pair of skates over 100 years old.

His father, the late Robert Chambers, carried on a gunsmith business at Lundy's Lane a century ago. He has attended every Toronto exhibition since it came into existence except the year of the World's Fair at Chicago, 1893, he being in Chicago and unable to get home.

SPORTDOM

There was once a dashing young broker

They're janiting now—
He couldn't learn how

Once a sporting celebrity gets the title of "boy wizard" it sticks to him longer than his hair and teeth.

Instead of wasting time talking about a third major league, the National League ought to try to be a second one.

In some colleges the husky studes all try to make the eleven, and in others, judging from results, the poor victims are sentenced for their sins to serve time on the football field.

Some boxers seem to be afraid of overworking if they fight once a year, and others consider a couple of days between fights a long vacation.

Best fighters in the ring today seem to be "Jimmy" Wilde, the "Mighty Atom" of old England, who weighs less than a hundred, and Jess Willard, the "Man Mammoth," who weighs less than a ton.

Christy Mathewson, may not be wildly enthusiastic about Cincinnati ball players, but he says that Cinncy could win a pennant every year in a checker league.

Notice to Creditors

IN THE MATTER OF the Estate of The Anglo-Canadian Type and Printing Machinery Company, Limited, of the City of Toronto, Ontario, Insolvent.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the above-named insolvent Company has made an assignment of its estate to me, for the benefit of its creditors, pursuant to Chapter 134, R. S. O.

The creditors are notified to meet at the offices of the said company, on the corner of Spadina Avenue and Adelaide Street in the City of Toronto, on Friday the 19th day of January, 1917 at the hour of three o'clock in the afternoon, to receive a statement of the affairs of the Company, appoint Inspectors and give directions as to the disposal of the estate.

Creditors are hereby notified to file their claims with me, verified by affidavit on or before the date of the said meeting, after which date I will proceed to distribute the assets of the said estate amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard to those claims only of which I shall have received notice.

THE BLESSING OF A HEALTHY BODY

Has Not Had An Hour's Sickness Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. MARRIOTT
August 9th, 1915.

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel rundown and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

KEEP LITTLE ONES WELL IN WINTER

Winter is a dangerous season for the little ones. The days are so changeable—one bright, the next cold and stormy, that the mother is afraid to take the children out for the fresh air and exercise they need so much. In consequence they are often cooped up in overheated, badly ventilated rooms and are soon seized with colds or grippe. What is needed to keep the little ones well is Baby's Own Tablets. They will regulate the stomach and bowels and drive out colds, and by their use the baby will be able to get over the winter season in perfect safety. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CERTIFICATES ARE AWARDED

The presentation of thirty certificates for Bible study was a most successful affair at the S. A. Temple Thursday night.

Sgt. Major R. C. Braund made some interesting and encouraging remarks about the work of the Sunday School.

FIRST MEETING SMITH COUNCIL

D. GARVEY ALLOWED $10.00 FOR SHEEP KILLED.

ACCOUNTS PASSED.

At the first meeting of council of the township of Smith, held in the Council Chamber, the council made the declarations of qualification and of office and took their seats as follows. Reeve, Fred McKee; Deputy-Reeve, Geo. B. Nichols; Councillors, Moore, Middleton and Nichols.

Mr. D. Garvey waited on the Council re a sheep killed by dogs, owners of which were unknown. By motion the treasurer was instructed to pay Mr. Garvey $10.

Mr. H. Sanderson presented an assessment schedule showing that he had been assessed for one dog and that his tax bill called for $3. The clerk was instructed to look into the matter and report at the next meeting.

The treasurer was instructed to pay the following accounts:—

A. G. Shearer, goods, $7.50; John Armstrong, goods, $8.20; J. N. Telford, services as sanitary inspector and relief officer, $32; R. Touchburn 75c; Wm. Nichols, $11.50; Dr. J. A. Morgan, services as M.H.O., $15; British Red Cross, $1,691.85; Taylor & Hall, $108.95; Municipal World, $5; H. Nesbitt, $10; Sick Children's Hospital, $5.

TESTED RECIPES A OF FRENCH CHEF

Proper Way to Cook Bacon

Before frying bacon it is a good plan to put the rashers into boiling water for two or three minutes. They plump out to twice their ordinary thickness, and all chance is removed of their being too salt.

Relish Mayonnaise

One cup of dressing, 3 small sweet pickles and 10 stuffed olives. Put through fine meat grinder 10 drops of onion juice, two eggs boiled hard and chopped fine, 1 tablespoon of grated radish and 1 tablespoon of minced parsley. Mix all together and fold into the dressing.

Hominy Croquets

Mix 1 cup hominy with 1 cup thick white sauce and 2 tablespoons grated cheese. When thoroughly cold, shape into balls, roll in crumbs, then in egg and then in crumbs. Fry in deep fat. (To prepare egg for rolling croquets, beat into it 1 tablespoon cold water.)

Escalloped Cabbage

Boil until tender one-half of a large head of cabbage. Drain and cool. Put in buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and paprika. Add one cup of white sauce. Lift the cabbage that it may be mixed with the sauce. Put on a layer of grated cheese and a thin layer of bread crumbs. Bake for 15 minutes. Serve in dish in which it was cooked.

Chicken Liver and Bacon

Slice the chicken livers not too thin. Cut bacon in small squares. Put a slice of bacon on a couple of toothpicks or small skewers, then a slice of liver, until about eight pieces are on each skewer. Put into skillet. Allow to heat, turning on all sides. Add one quarter cup of water. Cover and steam for ten minutes. Remove cover and brown slightly. Serve very hot.

Preserved Pineapple

After peeling the fruit and removing the "eyes," weigh it, allowing a pound of sugar to each pound. Slice the pineapple and put it and the sugar in the kettle in alternate layers. Pour in a cup of water to prevent burning, and bring slowly to a boil. Remove the pineapple, spread on platters to cool, and boil the syrup for fifteen minutes more. Pack the fruit in jars and fill these with the boiling liquid. Seal immediately.

Canned Quinces

Pare, and cut into quarters, dropping into cold water as you do this, to preserve the color. Weigh the fruit and allow three-fourths as much sugar. Cook the quinces gently in boiling water until soft. Skim out the fruit, add the sugar to this water. Skim water well and boil till clear. Return the quinces to the syrup till heated through. Drain and put into jars. Boil the syrup ten minutes longer. Strain it into jars. Fill to overflowing and seal as usual.

You may be deceived some day by an imitation of "SALADA" B114 and possibly you will not detect this imitation until the tea-pot reveals it. Demand always the genuine "Salada" in the sealed aluminum packet, and see that you get it, if you want that unique flavour of fresh, clean leaves properly prepared and packed.

600 LOST WITH ITALIAN SHIP

ANNOUNCEMENT OF LOSS ONE MONTH AGO.

ROME, Jan. 13—It is officially announced that the Italian battleship Regina Margherita struck a mine and sank Dec. 11. Six hundred and seventy five men on board perished. Two hundred and seventy were saved.

Cashmerette Hose, ribbed, every size from 6 to 10. Worth 40c and 50c. Special price this month, per pair 28c. Elliot's Store.

Tart Apples

Peel and quarter firm apples, throwing them into cold water as you do so. Weigh the fruit and allow two pounds of granulated sugar to eight pounds of apples. Put the apples into a preserving kettle. Pour over them barely enough cold water to cover them, and let them cook gently until tender. While these are cooking make a syrup by mixing the sugar with water (allowing a cupful of water to each pound of sugar) and bringing to a boil. Cook for four minutes, then lift the tender apples from the water. Lay them gently in the syrup, simmer for a minute and while very hot put into jars. Seal immediately.

And Any Woman May Become Free From All Blemishes of Face or Skin by Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

One of the greatest blessings a woman can have is to be possessed of a fine, fair skin on face, neck and arms. A little attention now and then to the blood condition makes this possible. Women are great sufferers from blood disorders and hence their complexions are marred because of this fact.

"A Beautiful Complexion Always is a Centre of Admiring Gaze."

Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which are as pleasant to take as a peppermint, give in an exceedingly short time a complexion that will rival the ideals of an artist to produce. They act in such a natural way, by cleaning out the pores, throwing off all skin discolorations and blood impurities, that they do their work of beauty building almost before you can believe it possible for them to act at all.

You may obtain a box of these delightful wafers from any druggist anywhere. Price, 50 cents.

R. G. DINGMAN Y.M.C.A. SPEAKER

BOYS' WORK LEADER WILL GIVE AN ADDRESS ON SUNDAY AT 4:15.

Mr. R. G. Dingman, of Toronto, managing editor of the Financial Post, and a Provincial leader in boys' work, will address the Y.M.C.A. meeting on Sunday at 4.15. As Mr. Dingman was in attendance at the Peterborough Boys' Conference in 1915 he is known quite well locally. Every man and older boy is invited to attend.

The annual meeting and election of directors of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. will be held Tuesday evening Jan. 16, at 8 o'clock. Every Y.M.C.A. member who is also a member of an evangelical church, should be present to cast his ballot.

The board of directors will meet Tuesday evening next at 6.30 to close the business in connection with 1916. Supper will be served.

Last night the Junior Employed Boys held a very enjoyable social evening at the "Y." The first part of the evening was spent on the rink in playing games and hockey. Bruce Hamilton had charge of the games which means that the boys had a good time. After the games the boys gathered in the dining hall, where a fine supper was waiting for them. After supper a social hour was spent during which Mr. J. A. Mundell, an expert in boys' work, who is in the city, read a good story, which was heartily received by the entire group.

Plans are now under consideration for a county boys' conference along the lines of the standard efficiency tests, a program of religious education for Canadian boys.

Motor Reciprocity

California is to return the East's many visits. Efforts are to be made to assemble 100 or more cars to start at the same time and travel in caravan manner to the Eastern cities. Tours are to be arranged on two-month schedules, with time for sight seeing allowed.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal when it burns leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headaches, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practising internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember, inside bathing is more important than outside bathing because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens, and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

PARCELS FOR THE PRISONERS

MANY GIFTS FOR CANADIANS PASS THROUGH THE RED CROSS.

LONDON, Jan. 13. — The Canadian Red Cross is overwhelmed with parcels sent for prisoners from Canada. It does not seem to be known in Canada that such parcels, though addressed to individual prisoners, have automatically to pass through the Red Cross, and that this organization is only allowed to send thirty pounds per fortnight to each man. The consequence is that a popular man may have something like a hundredweight of good things sent to him, whereas another with less friends, will get little or nothing. Further, parcels in many instances come to hand much damged. The labor of repacking is a prodigious matter, becoming so serious that it is likley it will be necessary to seek the Canadian Government's aid in prohibiting the indiscriminate dispatch of parcels. The friends of prisoners would be well advised to send money to the Red Cross Prisoners' Funds.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

If mustard is mixed with milk it will keep longer without discoloration.

When mashing potatoes always use boiling, not cold milk. Beat hard and the potatoes will be light and fluffy.

A tablespoonful of water may be allowed for each egg used in crumbing croquettes or fish.

There is no simpler way to clarify lard used for frying purposes than by heating it thoroughly with several slices of raw potato and straining.

It is well when washing a piece of choice yellowed lace to dip it in milk before ironing. Always place a piece of tissue paper directly over the lace, so that the warm iron will not touch the fabric.

There is no better way to scrub a clothes line to wind it around a board, such as dress materials are wound on, and then scrub with a brush dipped in rich suds.

When vegetables or other foodstuffs become scorched, remove the kettle at once from the stove and put it into a pan of cold water. In a quarter of an hour, you will be surprised to find the suggestion of scorch almost if not entirely gone.

Boil out the coffee pot at least once a week. Dissolve a tablespoonful of ordinary baking soda in enough cold water to fill the utensil two-thirds full, and let it boil for 15 minutes. Rinse it out most carefully and then wipe perfectly dry.

If a recipe for soup calls for cream, and it is not at hand, try a milk and egg substitute. Boil a cupful of milk and when it is cooled add a beaten egg. Strain and add a teaspoonful of butter. Add this mixture to the soup, bring to the boiling point, and serve at once.

The inside bark of a tree, with no other preparation than cleaning, is used for blankets in Equador.

Pedigrees and epitaphs are intended to perpetuate ready-made reputations.

O. A. LANGLEY IS APPOINTED TO LIBRARY BOARD

FIRST MEETING OF LAKEFIELD COUNCIL—SOME APPOINTMENTS.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 13. — The first meeting for 1917 of the Lakefield council was held in the council chamber on Monday, the 8th. Reeve Fitzgerald and Councillors Charlton, Hull and Madill were present.

The following committees were appointed:

Finance — Councillors Kennedy and Madill.

Roads and Sidewalks—Councillors Charlton and Hull.

Charity — Councillors Hull and Madill.

Property—The Whole Council.

On motion, the clerk was instructed to renew subscriptions to the Municipal World, and an order was drawn on treasurer to pay for same.

The finance committee presented a report recommending payment of the following:

Bell Tel. Co., rentals and tolls, $5.20; Electric Light Co., Dec. acct., $65.85; J. M. Bygott, acct., $2.30; A. J. Kidd, repairs, 70c; F. J. Moore & Son, $10; Municipal World, 6 copies, $5.

It was moved and seconded that the report of the finance committee be received and adopted.—Carried.

A bylaw to appoint municipal auditors, was passed.

Wm. Graham and W. G. Morrison were appointed.

A bylaw to authorize the borrowing of money from the Royal Bank to meet current expenditures of the corporation was passed.

A bylaw to appoint a board of health was passed.

A bylaw to appoint an official to combine the services of assessor, roadmaster, colector of taxes, constable, sanitary inspector and caretaker of the town hall and engine room of the village was passed. Joe Watson was appointed.

Moved by Conn. Hull and Charlton that Mr. O. A. Langley be appointed a member of the Public Library Board for 1917-18-19 and Mr. O. A Sawyer be appointed for years 1917-18 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late J. C. Balsdon. — Carried.

A skating party of young people drove up from Peterborough on Wednesday evening.

The regular consecration meeting of the Epworth League was held on Monday evening in the basement of the church.

The president, Miss Eva Jory, conducted the meeting. Mr. Barrett led in prayer. The corresponding secretary read letters from boys in the trenches and in England, a solo was rendered by Miss E. Webster, and the Bible lesson read by Miss E. Hull. A report was read by Mr. D. Frankish, who attended the boys' convention in Lindsay. Rev. Mr. Barrett gave a discourse on the work and purpose of the convention. The meeting was closed with the League Benediction.

WOMEN MIGHT TEACH DOCTRINE OF PEACE

Writer Thinks Wives and Mothers Partly Responsible For War in That They Glorify it

All thoughtful people must be profoundly saddened by the thought of how unavailing religion and civilization are to stem the tide of war. How is it that with all our peace conferences and societies the peace party in any country has so little influence to restrain the jingo party? The answer lies, I believe, in the fact that women have not thoroughly awakened to their responsibilities in this matter. Long ago, when first my eyes were opened to certain evils in the world, I realised, with the force of a blow, that we women were really responsible for them. It is in the hands of women that the destinies of nations lie, for they are the mothers of men, and the moulding of the childman is the responsibility and the privilege of motherhood. Think for a moment of our training of children. Do we teach them that war is cruel—that it is not only cruel, but unutterably stupid? Do we, in our schools, show the disastrous economic consequences of war, as we are belatedly beginning to teach them the disastrous consequences of alcohol? No; both in the school and the home war is glorified. We hush the baby's cries of pain by telling it to be "brave as a soldier." We feed the growing child's mind on tales of heroism, in which there are no heroes but soldiers. We give him soldiers and toy cannon to play with. We send him to schools where he is taught very little about his own country except the dates of its great battles. Then, when he grows up, we expect him to have sane views about war and wonder sadly why the world grows no wiser! How can it grow wiser when we persist in teaching it the same old follies? Women kneel to pray in cathedrals hung with banners that have been bathed in blood, and praise the Prince of Peace among monuments raised to those whose lives were spent in wielding the sword. Until we women practice what we preach, and insist that the education given to our children shall include right teaching on the subject of war we must hold ourselves responsible for the disasters that fall upon the world in war and carnage.—The Christian Commonwealth.

247TH CARRY OUT SUCCESSFUL BOMBARDMENT OF COBOURG

It was a bombardment that took place at Cobourg last night, not a hockey match in the strict sense of the word. The Soldier boys started in to see how many shots they could land, and their offensive was too much for the home defenders, but not without some damage being done to the invaders.

The neutral in the case was Dr. Jerry Laflamme, and he got so tired recording the fatal shots that landed properly that his scrap of paper gave out when he had twenty credited to the 247th. If he had allowed any more it would have been necessary to get a card to hold ten more at the least.

The fatalities credited to the home team were 13. They say this is an unlucky number, so the genial referee might have added one of Peterborough's unrecorded scores to get them away from the hoodoo.

The lineup of the teams was the same as in the game here with the exception that Lt. Barney Quinn replaced Thornton. The ice was fine, and, as the score will show, all the fast men had every opportunity to run up a high score.

The Soldiers, when they arrived home this morning, had nothing very much to say about the game, but they had a few uncomplimentary remarks to make about the Cobourg rink.

The teams were:

EXPRESSMEN ON THE RIGHT SIDE

Brock Street rink last night was the scene of the best (?) game of the season, when the expressmen defeated the car drivers by a score of 5 to 2. In the first period it was hard playing, the score being 1—1, but the last session completed the win for the expresers. The return game will be played nxt Thursday night.

The teams:

The War Record Office in London will publish a paper for the Canadians in England and France.

Today's Story

An enthusiastic young minister, who followed one of the old type in a sleepy country village, was thumping the rostrum a good deal, and disturbed a spider which had found peaceful refuge in one of the crannies for many a day.

Wandering up the aisle homeless, it was met by another spider, and the tale of woe was imparted.

"I can't stand this new minister thumping and jumping about. I have lived in the pulpit for many years, but can't stay there any longer."

Said the second spider, actuated by a fine spirit of charity:

"Come along with me, then; I havn't been disturbed for fifty years. I'm in the poor box."

Rich Red Blood Means Good Health

Just a Little More Rich, Red Blood Cures Most Ailments.

The lack of sufficient red, health giving blood does not end merely in a pale complexion. It is much more serious. Bloodless people are the tired, languid, rundown folk who never have a bit of enjoyment in life. Food does not nourish, there's indigestion, heart palpitation, headache, backache, sometimes fainting spells and always nervousness. If anaemia or bloodlessness be neglected too long a decline is sure to follow. Just a little more blood cures all these troubles. Just more rich, red blood, then abounding health, vitality and pleasure in life. To make the blood rich, red and pure, use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. No other medicine increases the pure blood supply so quickly or so surely. The cure actually begins with the first dose, though naturally it is not noticeable. This is not a mere claim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been doing this over and over again in Canada for more than a quarter of a century. This is why thousands have always a good word to say for this great medicine. For instance, Mrs. Alex. Gillis, Glenville, N. S., says: "I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. They are really a wonderful medicine. I was very much run down, suffered from frequent dizzy spells, and had an almost constant severe pain in the back. My homework was a source of dread. I felt so weak, and life held but little enjoyment. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and the result was almost marvellous. They made me feel like a new woman and fully restored my health. I would urge every weak woman to give these pills a fair trial."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A SOLDIER'S WISH.

The German Emperor recently paid a visit to his soldiers at the front, and, being in a friendly mood, he conversed with them and asked them to tell him frankly what they thought about the war, whether they thought they ought to fight on or if they thought the war should cease. The soldiers probably would have liked to express their opinion had they not been so timid. Rather than offend the Emperor, they stood there silent, each one busy with his own thoughts. But the bugle boy took courage. He stepped forward and began to play a favorite German song, "In die Heimath Mocht Ich Ziehen" ("Oh, Could I Be at Home Again").

The Emperor listened and, taking this as the answer for all, he turned and walked away. The soldiers were moved to tears.

This, indeed, is the one answer for the German soldiers, as well as the soldiers of other warring countries. If you would ask the wounded, crippled, blind and lame, what is their dearest wish, they would answer, "Our only wish now is to be at home again."

THE predominating feature of all 1917 models is the extensive luxury and increased motor efficiency.

While there are no radical revolutionary departures, the automobile of 1917 is as far ahead of the automobile of a year ago as 1916 was of its predecessor. And the outlook is most encouraging for the coming twelve months. Generally, the entire impression is that the automobile manufacturer has arrived close to the point of perfection in engine dsigning. In the main, effort seems to be directed toward ridding the motor of unnecessary parts, strengthening up the running gear, reinforcing fore construction and steering gear and developing exquisite bodies of almost countless styles. Beautifully upholstered limousines that are far finer than the drawing rooms of private railroad cars are seen in large numbers. There is everything in the equipment for ease and gorgeous array. Some of the finest closed vehicles cost as much as $10,000 while, of course, there are others that sell for as low as $395. So the man with the thin pocketbook has his chance just as well as the one with unlimited wealth. And in either case he gets superb value for his money.

Greater percentage of safety is noticed in much of the designing of the chassis. Many manufacturers, therefore, adhered for some reason or other to wheels that seemed too weak for the loads they were to carry. This was specially true of the rear wheels. Now there has been a noticeable advance, some of the rear wheels being built almost strong enough for locomotives. And in the front axles there is a great improvement, these generally being built now so heavy and strong that the possibility of fractures is almost definitely eliminated. Another excellent feature that has been developed is in the matter of the front floor boards, or, rather, the floor of the car where the driver sits. Leakproof transmissions and clutches and shifting levers have been devised, so that it is not necessary to remove the floor boards for months. This makes it possible to construct the front floor with an element of beauty to it. Some of the models have plush carpeted floors that would do credit to the lounging room of a yacht.

VARIOUS MOTOR TYPES

There are all types of motors, the twelve cylinder, eight cylinder, six cylinder and the four cylinder. An improved steam car is a feature of 1917. Opinion of car buildrs and owners is still divided on the merits of the several types, but the general impression is that multiple cylinders of small bore give increased smoothness. The six cylinder types seem to be holding their own, for while its percentage is slightly lower than for 1915, it is higher than for 1916. The sum total of the percentages of eight and twelve cylinder models is about the same as it was last year. The trend toward small cylinders continues. Practically fifty per cent. of all the motors now have a cylinder bore of less than three and a half inches, while a year ago the percentage was only thirty-seven and the year before that only ten per cent. Casting all the cylinders in a single block is now the accepted practice in four cylinder engines and is rapidly approaching the universal point in six cylinder construction.

Rather a remarkable feature of the 1917 automobiles is that although the price of everything that goes into the making of an automobile has gone up, only a few of the manufacturers have increased the price of their product for the coming season. Generally the prices are only slightly higher than they were a year ago, and when compared with almost every other thing sold today, much cheaper than a few years back.

Many new automobiles made their appearance this year, among them the Ben Hur, Bour Davis, Doble steam, Dey electric, Harroun, Jordan, Kent, Premier, and Drexel. The latter has an unusually fine body design, while the return of the steam car as exemplified in the Doble, created much interest. It is the first steam automobile that has been displayed in years.

International Roads Congress

The fourth Canadian and International Good Roads Congress will be held at Winnipeg Feb. 13-16. More than 20,000 have been invited. Good roads men from all over the Dominion and the United States have been asked to deliver papers. A special train will carry Eastern delegates to Winnipeg.

FIRST INTERNAL COMBUSTION ENGINE, INVENTED THEN, USED GUNPOWDER FOR EXPLOSIVE FORCE.

The first record we have of a vehicle travelling without animal power is found in the ancient Chinese records, which gives an account of the "kite carriages." These vehicles were driven by the wind blowing against a sail attached to the carriage. In the early reign of King James I. of England a patent was issued to Hugo Upton, reading as follows:—"For the sole making of an instrument which shall be driven by the wind for the transportation or carriage of anything by land." Some believe that Upton secured his idea from the "kite carriages" in old China.

However, the history of mechanically driven carriages dates back to 1680, when Sir Isaac Newton proposed a steam carriage to be driven by the re-active effect of a jet of steam issuing from the nozzle at the rear of the vehicle. Some years later, a crude carriage was built, an early record of which reads as follows: "Mr. Pinchbeck has recently built a curious steam machine that has travelled without horses for forty minutes and has covered a considerable distance." In 1759 there appeared an English advertisement reading as follows: 'Mr. Ladd's patent four-wheel carriage, that goes without horses and will carry four or five persons at the rate of six miles an hour, is built on solid mechan'cal principles."

In 1830 a horseless carriage named "the Automotion," was built by Walter Handoock. This was really the first steam carriage that proved at all practical. It covered 4,200 miles during its life and carried a total of 12,761 passengers.

The first internal combustion engine was invented by Abbe d'Hautefeuille in 1678, in which the explosive power of gunpowder was employed to drive a piston in a cylinder. This was the forerunner of the modern gasoline engine. Some years later John Street developed an engine operated by liquid air ignited by a flame. The first internal combustion motor which used gas was invented in 1884 by Gottieb Damier. In 1885 he successfully applied this engine to a bicycle, and in 1886 Carl Benz invented his single horizontal cylinder, water-jacketed engine, which he applied to a three-wheeled carriage. The first practical gasoline automobile built in America was constructed by C. E. Duryea in 1892, but it was found to be under-powered.

In 1894 he built a new four-cylinder car which proved quite successful in the Chicago Times-Herald race. The first automobile endurance race of international importance was held in France in 1894. Two Panhard machines contested. Both claimed a 3.5 horse-power, and were driven by Messrs. Panhard and Peugeot.

In 1895 the second automobile endurance race was held in France, and covered a distance of 1,780 miles at the then remarkable average speed of 15 miles per hour. Six years later, however, the same course was covered at the rate of 50 miles per hour.

In 1897 at the Paris-Trouville road race a speed was 29 miles an hour was developel in a gasoline automobile. What a difference today! Not long ago a 360-horse-power car raced at a terrific speed of 148 miles an hour. Even pleasure cars easily run off 50 miles an hour.

1916 were that car production passed the 1,000,000 mark and that the total value of motor vehicle production entered the billion dollar class. Chief items of 1916 compared with the preceding year are:

THE POWER AND BEAUTY IN ALL AUTOS TO-DAY

FURIOUS BATTLES HAVE RAGED CONTINUALLY AMONG MAKERS BETWEEN DIFFERING SCHOOLS OF DESIGN.

RAPID PROGRESS MADE.

"The March of Conscious Power," the expressive line of James Russell Lowell, I think expresses the march of progress made by the automibile, said Louis H. Perlman, the famous inventor of the demountable rim.

"It has ben my extreme good fortune," said Mr. Perlman, "to be a first-nighter, and indeed an every-nighter, at every automobile show held in America and if I were to write a brief epigram on the automobiles of today, I would say that they were ticketed 'hors concours,' above competition, like the famous paintings by the world's greatest artists in the Paris Salon.

"The chassis of today possesses conscious power, the work of the skilled artisan, and the body work of the motor car of today possesses conscious beauty, the work of the graceful artificer. And to these two essential factors has been added conscious comfort for the passenger.

"Now let us look backward and note the crude conditions that led up to the present-day perfect conditions.

Two Distinct Tendencies

"As in years past the art of motor car making exhibits two distinct signs of irresistable tendencies—one is toward fixity of type, the other is

DON'TS FOR OWNERS

(By H. W. Moore, of Moore & Freeman.)

BELIEVING that a few remarks on the running and care of motor car owner, we take pleasure in giving our actual ex- an automobile are always welcome news to the average periences as acquired in running a car in private service covering a good number of years.
receives. A car cannot possibly give good service if not kept receives. A car cannot possibly give good service if not kept clean, therefore it is primarily necessary to keep all parts of a car—body, gear and engine—as clean and free from grit and dirt as possible. Say once a week, at least, it should be thoroughly cleaned.

We all know that friction is detrimental to all moving parts. Where we have friction we have wear. Now, all moving parts of a motor car are provided with means of lubrication, and as the engine in most cars is the only part provided with mechanical means of lubrication, it is entirely dependent upon the driver for lubrication.

It is good practice to set apart a certain time for cleaning and lubricating, because it is absolutely necessary to the life of a motor car, as it is to the horse or the human body. We have found that the most annoying and irritating noises, such as squeaks and rattles, all originate from lack of oil or grease, and then excessive wear sets in, which causes big expense to the owner and means a ruffled temper. Therefore, your pleasure is turned to dissatisfaction with your car. We emphasize, then, the necessity of looking after the small matters in connection with your car.

Don't race your engine when it is not drawing the car. Don't neglect to keep the radiator filled with clean water. Also use a good anti-freeze alcohol and water mixture for cold weather. Don't fail to inspect the level of the liquid in your storage batteries every ten days. Don't let your car stand with the headlights full on. Don't drive fast around turns or over rough roads. Don't attempt to shift into reverse gear when you are going ahead, even if your clutch is out. Don't drive with your spark fully retarded. Don't drive fast on slippery streets.

Don't forget that lubrication is the essential element to a motor car, as food is to the human machine.

Don't fuss with your car. It is made to stand the maximum of strain and speed met with in general use. Don't run at racing speed. It is not a racing car. A racing car requires special construction.

Don't disturb the setting on the carburetor or ignition system, except you have a good working knowledge of both. Always count the number of turns to the right or left which you make on carburetor.

Don't run up to a point at which you wish to stop at high speed and suddenly apply your brake. It puts excessive strain on the driving mechanism. Consider yourself running fast, and try to stop suddenly. You probably weigh 175 pounds, and your car weighs about 2,000 pounds. Use common sense in all things, and remember, in an emergency a calm and quick thinker has the best chance.

The ignition system cannot be set by the measurement of the eye. It requires mechanical measurement. Do not let the engine pull down until it labors, on a hill. Because it pulls good is no reason why you should overwork it. The change speed gears are put on your car for use, and not for ornament.

toward reversion of type. Fixity of type means the conditions when there may be a number of widely different patterns of automobiles in use, but all of one pattern are substantially alike. For instance, if Henry Ford made all the automobiles of this country they would all be alike. Reversion of type—well known phrase of the scientific evolutionist—means here a return to earlier and once discarded forms of construction.

"A pertinent instance of this form of development is the use of wire wheels today, because they were originally used on the first automobile produced in this country, largely because automobiles were made by bicycle makers who used bicycle ideas and bicycle material then on hand. Take another pertinent instance: The first imported automobiles had hot tube ignition. Then followed battery ignition both by wet and dry cells, chemical it is true, but today the storage battery is in vogue on account of the electric starting and lighting idea. The later magneto which produced electricity mechanicaly is now being somewhat discounted in favor of the generator and the storage battery.

"The battle of the cylinders, then as now, raged furiously in the early part of automobile history, the one-cylinder, cylinder fired hydro-carbon type of motor, disputing the field with the steam engine and the electric motor. The latter two are here yet, even if not as prominent as they might and should be.

"Probably the greatest advance in the automobile of today is the elimination of friction, friction having only one place where it is of value in an automobile, and in this place friction produces traction between the tire and the ground.

"So, of course, all the motor cars of the Class of 1917 are fitted with either ball or roller-bearings—not all over, it is true, but somewhere in all the revolving parts, wherever their use is indicated. The American makers of ball and roller bearings now lead the world in the volume and value of their output, as their huge plants and their productive capacity testify to.

"The artillery wood and wire wheels, of course, are supreme in their order as named. Originally we used hose pipe tires cemented on; then followed the clincher type of tire, the detachable tire and rim, and last, but not least, the demountable rim; and so universal is the use of the demountable rim today that all the American makers fit demountable rims to their cars, with the exception of two makers. The clincher type of tire rim might be said to be almost past excepting in the smaller and cheaper cars and sizes of tires, the straight-side tire having gradually come into its own.

"The matter of demountable rims is of more than passing interest, my own elementary foundation patent having ben filed in 1906; and as a matter of fact the rib problem has engaged the attention of automobile engineers ever since the advent of the automobile. The U. S. Patent Office reports show nearly 1,500 patents of all classes dealing with demountable rims of one kind and another. In 1916 the American tire industry alone consumed one half the world's 1915 production of crube rubber and 85 per cent. of the United States Sea Island coton product, besides which it is estimated that 25,000,000 tires will be made in 1917.

"Meanwhile, the non-skid tread leads them all, the cord tire is the popular high priced one, and motor car makers everywhere are adopting the S. A. E. standards for regular tire sizes, over-sizes and rim-sizes.

"I merely mentioned thes rim and tire facts to give the reader some idea of the inventive activity in this particular field, and to show how firm a grip the demountable rim has upon the motor car manufacturer and the motoring public.

WELDING BY
Millard's Oxy-Acetylene
Process

An ugly patch or the complete dismantling of an automobile to repair a broken frame is unnecessary if you use our modern method. Smashed cylinders, cranks and gear cases are made as good as new at a cost, but a fraction of a new part.

The intense heat of the Oxy-Acetylene flame melts together the iron, steel or aluminum parts, thus making a repair which is as good and as strong as when new.

Why do You ask Us for so Much Money

— FOR THE —

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND?

This question is often asked, by persons and by municipal councils, when the matter of liberal giving to the Fund is brought before them.

They are entitled to the most complete answer, for the Fund is the people's. They created it, and it is they who must maintain it.

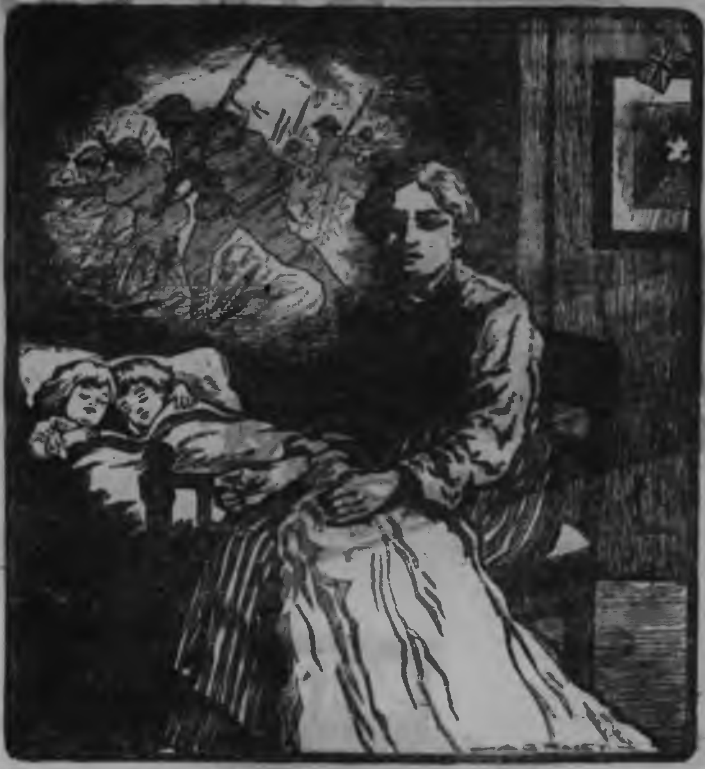
Now for the reasons. There are 149,230 of them.

The Fund asks for so much money because Canada has given her men so lavishly to the Great Cause. Between 300,000 and 400,000 have volunteered. If their families need help, this Fund provides it. In October 53,693 families did need it. These families comprised 149,230 persons nearly all either mothers, wives or children. Is it any wonder that so Great a need requires so Great a Fund?

HOW GREAT IS THE NEED OF MONEY?

The sum expended in October, 1916, was......	$891,814.00
The average payment to each family was..............	16.29
The average payment to each person was	5.73
The cost of administration was....................	15,464.00

(In above averages, sums paid for broken periods not included.)



THE CANADIAN SOLDIER'S WIFE

Her husband is fighting for us, so that we may live in peace, comfort and security at home. Are we going to let his loved ones want!

Pay special attention to the figures concerning cost of administration—including expense of campaigns for raising money. It is the ambition of the managers of the Fund to keep the cost of raising and disbursing it below that of any voluntary fund ever created in Canada. Their aim is to hand to the soldiers' families as nearly as possible one hundred cents for every dollar subscribed. They succeed in handing 99½ cents. The sum received in October as interest on moneys in banks was about $11,500. Take this from the cost of administration. The remainder is $4,000. And that, therefore, is all that had to be deducted from sums paid in.

That is to say, of every $100 subscribed and paid out from the inauguration of the Fund to Oct. 30, 1916, $99.46 reached the families.

Is not that economy which should give confidence to every subscriber?

Does the magnitude of the Fund, as well as its importance, begin to impress you, Mr. Citizen-who-is-being-asked-to-subscribe-$100, or you, Gentlemen of the Municipal Council, who are being urged to vote $100,000 for 1917? Does the REQUEST look as large as it did now that you know something more of the NEED?

Since the war began the people of Canada have subscribed to this Fund............	$16,495,000
For 1917 they will be asked to give—and will give..................................	12,500,000
Of this sum Ontario is being asked to guarantee—and will guarantee—at least.......	6,000,000

This is one million more than in 1916, but every dollar will be required for Ontario's families. Not much chance for individuals or counties to economize by cutting down their contributions, is there? On the contrary, the giving must be on a scale more generous than ever. And why not? If we can't FIGHT, isn't it a Privilege rather than an obligation to PAY?

One Word More:

No man should ignore his personal responsibility towards the families of those who are fighting for him, simply because his Municipal Council is taxing him slightly for the same object. He owes these people far more. Perhaps he is too poor to pay more. If not, it is up to him to give a generous cheque to his local Patriotic Fund Committee, or mail it to

NO RUBBER USED IN THESE TIRES.

Wire, Leather, Wood and Canvas Are Substituted in Germany.

NO RUBBER IN THESE TIRES

Several substitutes for rubber are being used in Germany in the manufacture of bicycle and light automobile tires. Steel wire, leather, wood and prepared canvas has been resorted to.

The steel wire tire was the first to appear. It is three-sixteenth of an inch thick and made up into a very close coil, the two ends being welded to give it the proper shape. Its greatest fault is that it cuts the pavement and is noisy.

Some wooden tires are made of a single piece of wood and others are sectional. One is composed of 47 parts. The single piece of wood is covered with a strip of leather, and between the under surface and the rim are several steel springs which give elasticity. In addition, on bicycles, springs are attached to the front and rear forks.

NEW SAFETY IDEA

"With the idea of promoting safe automobile driving at night, why would it not be feasible to paint the telegraph and telephone poles near to a dangerous curve, railroad crossing, bridge or fill, thereby decreasing the danger to motorists?" says Wallace C. Hood, president of the Wallace C. Hood Service Bureau, Dime Bank Building, Detroit.

"This plan would, I believe, effectively serve to warn the automobile driver of danger and enable him to avoid it.

"My idea would be to paint both the telephone and telegraph poles about ten feet from the ground and a five-foot strip. This entire strip could be painted white with a strong red strip in the centre, and say about ten poles or so painted on each side of the point of danger."

The young lady across the way says she's been having a good deal of trouble with her eyes lately, but the doctor assures her the retinue isn't affected.

Michelin Tires

For the past two years we have been sole distributors for the World famous Michelin Tires.

These are the tires that were used on the first automobiles manufactured in France, 26 years ago, since that time these tires have been recognized as the Worlds best tires.'

Our sales in Peterboro, last year, trebled the first seasons sales, due to the fact that every buyer became a booster.

There is a mistaken impression that Miceelin Tires are more expensive than other makes, such is not the case, in fact in the larger sizes, the price of Michelins is lower.

Buy Your New Car On Time Payments

Intending purchasers of Automobiles, that have been postponing the purchase of a car, until ready to pay the full purchase price, will be pleased to know that it is possible to own a car by paying 40 p.c. as the initial payment, the balance in eight monthly payments.

This plan of time payments on cars is made possible by The Guaranty plan, which has been in operation in the United States for the past two years.

Briefly the plan is, as follows, supposing the car sells for $1000.00, the purchaser pays 40 p.c., $400.00 cash and $27.00 for the accomodation, which includes insurance against Fire and Theft for one year, and the balance in eight monthly payments of $66.75

Mr. Banks will be pleased to explain this plan in all its details to interested parties.

There is no reason why you should wait any longer for that Overland.

BOUGHT FIRST MOTOR CYCLE TO REACH CANADA

"CHARLIE" BANKS HAS HAD LONG EXPERIENCE IN MOTOR CARS.

BIG SEASON AHEAD.

Mr. C. R. Banks, known by his friends as "Charlie," owner of The Banks Garage on Charlotte St., can claim to have a longer experience in the automobile business than any man of his age in Canada.

This at first may seem to be an exaggeration, but his experience with motor driven vehicles dates back to 1899, when he bought the first motor cycle that ever came into Canada. This was a Cleveland bicycle fitted with a De Dion motor which was built in France, and upon which he appeared at the Toronto and London fairs of that year.

Becoming imbued with the enthusiasm that seizes all who take up automobiling, he spent the following winter in Los Angeles, and can claim the honor of driving some of the first cars in that city, during the winter of 1899-1900.

From there he went to the Oldsomobile Co., of Detroit, who were making a car at the price of $650. After serving through the various departments of that factory, including the road test, in order to become thoroughly acquainted with the vagaries of the horseless carriage, which was the name that all cars went by, he served with the Thomas Automobile Co., of Buffalo, still absorbing automobile lore.

Returning to his business in Galt in 1904 he was appointed agent for the Ford car, one of the first in Canada, selling during this year four Model C. two-cylinder Fords. When it is considered that the Ford Co. of Canada only built 107 cars during this year, this was a good record.

Charlie can tell some good stories of automobiles during those early days. On one occasion he motored from Galt to Rochester, and returned, ing any duty in crossing into the States. People were so surprised to see a car that any person owning one was welcomed everywhere.

It is small wonder that with the intimate knowledge that Mr. Banks is a live wire agent for the Willys-Overland Co.

Mr. Banks is planning some good things for the coming season, one of which is that he will have an all-night service, which will make it possible for auto owners to leave their cars in at nights for washing; also in case of trouble on the road, phone Banks Garage, No. 582.

Just a word re the new 1917 models of the Willys-Overland Co. There never was a year when this company was in better shape to give the public the wonderful choice of cars.

Their range of cars include all models, from the small 5-passenger touring, to the supreme 8-cylinder Willys-Knight, with every type of body design, and when an Overland car is bought the buyer has the best car in the world.

The local service is the best possible, as Mr. Banks has a lease of the curling rink, which is the largest space in Ontario used for this purpose.

"We sold 30 Overlands during the past season, and we have thirty satisfied customers, which is something to be proud of," says Mr. Banks.

The Banks Garage have sold three 1917 models since the New Year, and they are aiming to make fifty sales during the coming season.

ADVENT OF WOMAN MOTOR CAR DRIVER

"The advent of the woman motor car driver and enthusiast is one of the most important developments that has occurred in the automobile business in recent years," was the comment of John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Limited.

"In fact, the active participation of women in any proposition is a noteworthy event, as Adam and other millions of men since his time have acknowledged.

'To make a motor car which could be driven with equal facility by men or women has long been the inspiration of automobile engineers and the incentive automobile manufacturers to spend millions of dollars in experimental work.

"As long as the usefulness of the automobile for the women of the home stopped for the day with the departure of the man for his business duties, the field was restricted; but build a car that can be operated by any member of the family and a wonderful field of new prospects is opened.

"While they could not possibly anticipate the far-reaching effect women motorists would have on the whole industry, a few instinctively felt that once automobiles were refined and simplified so women could drive, they would become personally interested in motor cars and the market would be increased just so much.

"To appreciate just how this method of reasoning on the part of the motor car manufacturer has worked out, just stop where you are and watch the procession of machines go by.

"You will notice more women driving automobiles today than ever before. On the busiest streets, on the boulevards, in the small towns and on the country roads far from home, you will find women—thousands of them —driving all kinds of motor cars with as much confidence and skill as any man.

"The automobile has brought greater contentment into the lives of women than possibly any other one thing in recent years. It has shattered the shackles of custom which kept them in the narrow confines of the home, entirely dependent upon men, and has opened up a new world filled with a welcome variety of constantly shifting scenes and new experiences—a world of better health, wholesome recreation, self-confidence, convenience, independence, joy, pleasure and contentment."

60 CENTS ASKED FOR STRICTLY FRESH EGGS

BUTTER 45 cts.

Business was brisk on the Peterborough market all week, particularly in hay, straw and wood, and in each item sales were readily made. There was an exceptional demand for dry mixed wood and green hardwood. Many of the housewives deciding to protect themselves next winter against a possible scarcity of coal.

In the hay market the good timothy sold almost as quick as offered. There did not seem so great a demand for the mixed grade.

In the live stock section the drovers were all anxious to take advantage of the high prices prevailing in the outside marts, but one and all complain of the scarcity of cattle in this section and the butchers are also wondering where the supply is going to come from for local consumption.

Veal and good lambs are also hard to find and the price of meat in these sections has made a considerable advance. In Toronto ordinary butcher heifers and steers sold at $9 to $9.25 while the real choice sold at $10 to $10.50.

The hog market was unusually firm and the tendency is for higher prices. The local quotation is $12.50, with a tendency for still higher prices next week.

There was the usual offerings of dressed beef, pork and lamb on the outside market. The variance in price was caused by the great variance in the quality of some of the dressed beef offered. There was little difference in the prices for quartered pork.

The upstairs market was not very large and what supplies were offered were quickly grabbed up. Eggs of the realiable kind sold at 55c to 60c per dozen, while some that were not so fresh sold at 50c. Butter was plentiful and sold for 45c generally with 43 paid for other lots where a quantity was purchased.

The fowl that were on sale lacked finish in many cases, but the prices asked were high enough for real good birds.

Chickens sold at 90c to $1.25 each or about 22c per lb., while the few turkeys on sale sold for 25c to 28c. Geese sold at 20c per lb., and the few ducks offered sold at 90c to $1.25 each.

HOW TO CUT ON THE HIGH COST OF OPERATION

The average motorist who is constantly complaining about the high cost of operating his car, probably does not stop to consider that he is largely responsible for such a condition. He would do well to study the problem and see if there are not ways and means of affecting a saving of gasoline, oil, tires and lessening the general wear and tear on the car. After sixteen years of experience in the automobile business B. W. Twyman, general manager of the Interstate Motor Company, has picked out some of the more important causes of the high cost of motoring which can be overcome by each individual.

The motorist who has his car at his door practically all of the time, and who jumps in and uses it to run 100 yards down the street, or on quarter or half mile trips to execute little household errands, or deliver messages, must realize that such driving can produce nothing but waste and high average cost of depreciation. With gasoline soaring as it has lately, it behooves every driver to cut out short trips. The biggest expense in running is the starting and stopping. The largerthe car the more expensive it is to start and stop it.

Again, economy can be affected by an amendment of driving methods. Tire economy is secured by moderate driving, by careful starting and stoping and by close scrutiny of the road. Drivers who are in the habit of speeding up between street intersections and slowing down abruptly at the street crossings are abusing their tires.

A maximum of 25 miles per hour, when such a speed is permissible, is judicious driving. Perfect control of every adverse circumstance without injury to the passengers, tires or mechanism, can be maintained if this speed is never exceeded. It has very wisely been said that any old car can go fast, but it takes a good one to run slowly.

War Hits Autos in Portugal

Statistics show that the automobile trade in Lisbon, Portugal, was hit hard by the war, and the well known European makes which previously had a monopoly of this market have almost disappeared, says a U.S. Consular report. American cars have the market to themselves.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD and PINE LIMIT

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to and including the 1st day of February, 1917, for the right to cut pulpwood and pine timber on a certain area situated on the Black Sturgeon River and other territory adjacent thereto, in the District of Thunder Bay.

Tenderers shall state the amount per cord on pulpwood, and per thousand feet board measure, on pine, that they are prepared to pay as a bonus in addition to dues of 40 cents per cord for spruce, and 20 cents per cord for other pulpwoods, and $2.00 per thousand feet, board measure, for pine, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque, payable to the Honorable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten thousand dollars ($10,000), which amount will be forfeited in the event of their not entering into agreement to carry out conditions, etc. The said $10,000 will be applied on account of bonus dues, as they accrue, but the regulation dues, as mentioned above, will require to be paid in the usual manner as returns of cutting of wood and timber are received.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

ROUMANS THROW BACK ENEMY

INVADERS HURLED BACK FOR NEARLY ONE MILE

Russ-Roumanians Have Success on Northern Front—Heavy Losses for Teutons.

MACKENSEN MAKES ADVANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, January 15.—In the course of violent engagements yesterday near Kasino River, on the northern Roumanian front, the Roumanians threw back their opponents two-thirds of a mile, the war office announced today.

Teutonic attacks northeast of Fokshani were repulsed by Russians, who inflicted heavy losses on their opponents.

Field Marshal Von Mackensen's army has made further advance toward Galatz, causing the Russians to withdraw towards the north in the vicinity of Vadeni.

BERLIN, January 15. — Strong attacks were made yesterday yesterday by Russian and Roumanian troops on recently-captured Teutonic positions north of the Suchitza valley, ou the northern Roumanian front. Today's official announcement says th eattacks were repulsed.

North of the Somme lively artillery fire continues, while at several places advances by hostile patrols were repulsed. Our reconnoitering detachments in a successful enterprise brought in prisoners and machine guns.

TWO93RD SOLDIERS ON LIST OF WOUNDED

The fourth casualty in the Taylor family of Chemong is officially announced today. Pte. Russell Taylor has been admitted to hospital at Camieres with a gunshot wound in the left foot, which he sustained on Jan. 5.

Ptes. Isaac, Charles and Hiram Taylor were previously reported wounded.

Pte. Guerin Wounded

Dennis Guerin, 120 Sophia St., Ashburnham, was officialy informed today that his son, Pte. Martin Joseph Guerin, of the 93rd Batt., entered hospital at Camieres on Jan. 5, having been wounded by gunshot in the back and right elbow.

Gunner Arnott Ill.

Gunner James Alex. Arnott, who was wounded several months ago, is today reported dangerously ill with pneumonia, January 1th. His wife, who resides at 319 Charlotte street, but is now visiting in Toronto, has not heard from her husband for some time.

For 74th Battery.

Young men who are looking for a quick trip overseas with the artillery service have a few days left in which to join the 74th Battery. A draft of fifty men will be sent overseas within the next ten days. Officers of the battery may be found at the recruiting station, Simcoe street.

Two More Recruits.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman and a number of other speakers interested in the success of the 247th Battalion will address a meeting in Norwood tonight. The band went down at noon.

Two more recruits have been taken on the strength of the 247th today. They are Pte. Melville Stanley McCurry, of Millbrook, and Pte. Milton Noble Clydesdale, of Norwood.

There will be a meeting in the interest of recruiting at Millbrook tomorrow night. The band will attend and will no doubt be warmly received as they were extremely popular with the villagers when attached to the 93rd.

Bandsmen Home.

Sergt. Grange and Ptes. Gilbert, Doughty and Woods arrived home on Saturday. They are former members of the 93rd Band, but have been given their discharge.

POLICE RAID SUFFRAGETTES' HEADQUARTERS

PUBLICATION AND DOCUMENTS CONFISCATED.

TOO MUCH CRITICISM.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The printing plant and headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union and the homes of several of Mrs. Pankhurst's supporters in London were simultaneously raided yesterday by the police and military authorities, under the Defence of the Realm Act. The suffrage publication Britannia, and two taxi-cabs full of documents were confiscated. Britannia has been criticizing the Government, protesting that there were in reality two Governments, one of Premier Lloyd George and the people who wanted to win the war, and the other, a remnant of the late Government, which favored peace compromise.

BRITAIN HAS ALL THE LIGHT GUNS REQUIRED

Increase in Production of Weapons and Ammunition is Illustrated.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 15.—An official of the ministry of munitions illustrates the increase in the production of weapons and ammunition in Britain by stating that as many of the smaller sizes of shells are now turned out in one week as were produced in the whole of the first year of the war, and one week's production of large shells is from three to five times as great in one week as formerly in twelve months. The whole reserve of shells at the outbreak of the war was considerably less than one week's output today.

Thirteen times as many heavy guns are now being turned out as in the first year of the war, and of lighter guns there are as many on hand now as will be wanted. Sixty times as many machine guns are being produced as two years ago.

For every ton of explosive employed in the first month of the war, 13,000 were employed in July last.

FOLLOW BATTLE SCARRED LEADERS HON. G. P. GRAHAM'S APPEAL TO MEN

CAPT. BURNHAM RETURNS TO CITY THIS MORNING

Thursday He Goes to Toronto to Address Public Meeting.

Capt. J. H. Burnham returned to the city this morning after an absence in Europe of over six months. He reached Canada about two weeks ago and has been in Ottawa ever since, leaving that city only at intervals to address recruiting meetings in other places. The captain will be in this city every day this week except Thursday, when he goes to Toronto to address a public meeting there.

Capt. Burnham, as reported from time to time, has visited the Canadian troops in the trenches and brings from them the message "Don't see us stuck" to the people of Canada. He has been detailed for recruiting duty in Ontario, and his services in this capacity should certainly be effective.

ARTILLERY FIGHTING

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan 15.—There was artillery fighting last night in the vicinity of the Avre River and in the sector between the Aisne and the Argonne. Otherwise, the night was uneventful, this afternoon's War Office announcement reports.

"What Would You do if a Bunch of Mauraders Attacked Peterboro?" He Asks—Must Reinforce the Boys at the Front.

VOLUNTEER SERVICE ON TRIAL

The appeal made by the Hon. Geo. P. Graham to the young men of Peterborough last night was extremely forcible and there was no getting away from the questions aptly put. "What would you do if a bunch of mauraudero attacked the city of Peterborough?" "Would you fight or crawl," It was delivered straight from the shoulder and, as the speaker stated in opening, he was going to get the eligible men angry and the more angry they got the better he would be pleased.

The Grand Opera House filled up rapidly as the hour for the meeting to open approached, and at 8.30 few, if any, seats were available for the tardy ones. Those who came early were entertained to some splendid music by th 247th band.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, the chairman, opened the meeting by an appeal for the boys in the trenches. Our hearts must turn to them. They are doing their duty, sustained by the knowledge that those at home still love and think of them and that there were others ready to stand by them to the last. It was the speaker's opinion that thousands of Canadian men would answer the call before spring, and take part next summer in the last great drive that will cause victory for our side and the downfall of Germany for all time. It was his hope and wish to see the 247th leave Peterborough complete as a battalion. It would gladden the hearts of Lt.-Col. Ackerman and his officers if a hearty response was made by Peterborough boys to the call for help.

In closing his remarks the chairman thanked Mr. W. F Turner for his generosity in allowing them to engage the Opera House for this and other recruiting meetings.

The 247th band played as the opening number Upholding Freedom's Flag, a selection comprising all the patriotic and appealing music of the different Allied nations.

Major O'Flynn

Major O'Flynn was introduced by the chairman as a real lovable fellow and he certainly made a hit with the audience with his sharp heart-to-heart talk and his earnest appeal to the men. The major was quite strong on the absolute necessity for the bttalion to have the support of the civil population The cry of the men in the trenches was for men, and more men. The French wanted to be relieved of the care of part of their line now held, so as to be prepared in case Germany volated the neutrality of Switerland and made the protection of that part of the French border line necessary.

It was only fair to the boys who had been so long in the trenches that they me given a rest and given a chance to freshen up in order to be ready for Haig's great offensive in the spring.

Better Men

Man for man, the British could beat the Germans, but we are not giving man for man, and, as Kitchener had said, "The side will loose who has one men too few." With men available the British Empire can beat them. The great brotherhood of the officers and men who fought side by side was related.

No matter what was said of a man at home, when he got into the fight the true nature of the man was exposed. The handshaking by the surviors which followed a battle was an evidence of the brotherly feeling that existed among those in uniform.

Everyone must bear his share of the sacrifice. It was unfair that one man should make great sacrifices and the other man none at all. The burden must be equally borne. If Germany and her allies were to win the war, they would dominate the world and the Monroe doctrine and all the power of the U.S. would be of no avail in protecting Canada, which was the colony most desired by the Gemmans, owing to the vast wealth contained in the Dominion. This was Canada's hour of need and the speaker was confident that the men would not go back on her.

Women to Have a Say

The only place a man can do his bit is by getting into khaki. A woman can take the place of every men who is eligible. There were 10,000 women making munitions in Canada today and there were 100,000 ready to do the same and the major stated that after the war, the women who had assisted would have more right to a say in the Government of the country than the men who would not go over and fight.

The men in the trenches are keeping a score of what we are doing at home. They appealed for help. Let us answer their call to protect posterity from Germany and shout back to our brothers, "All's well."

Miss Emma Worth contributed a very pretty and patriotic vocal selection, The Call of the Motherland, and its appropriateness after the previous address more than delighted the audience.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, was introduced by Mr. Wearing as one of Canada's public men who had given more than ordinary time and attention to recruiting work in Canada, and when the hon. gentleman started to address the meeting he denied being entitled to such an introduction, as he had only done what he thought was right. It was a pleasure for him to come to Peterborough as he had been here once before to deliver an address on Canada's part in the war. The speaker started in to give the men present a straight talk, telling them that he was not talking to the men on the outside, but to the men in the Opera House. He was not a bit particular if he made them angry if that anger resulted in their enlisting. It was one way of making people see their duty. He pointed out the pride Peterborough should have in the officers in charge of the 247th Battalion, men who are not on parade, but men who have suffered in the field of battle and who say to the eligible men. "Come with us." They do not ask you "to go." Ackerman was made of the right stuff. He had been wounded and was ready to go back instead of looking for some soft place to fall on. Major O'Flynn had seen service of the worst kind and had brought back the message from the men in the trenches, each appealing for help.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JANUARY 15, 1917

MR. GRAHAM AND CONSCRIPTION.

THE POSITION which Hon. George P. Graham holds in the public life of the country adds a special significance to certain statements that he made at last night's recruiting meeting when dealing with the probability of conscription. When he quoted the remarks of Premier Borden on this subject he practically endorsed Sir Robert's stand with regard to the matter which is looming up more and more as an issue in Canada every day.

The voluntary system will be tried to the limit, and if it fails to produce the half million men the Premier has promised to send to the front, then conscription must be resorted to in order to redeem the country's pledge as made by Sir Robert. On this issue the leaders of the parties seem to be a unit, to judge from what was said last night, yet men of all positions hope that Canadian young men will save their country from the reproach of anything like military compulsion.

Mr. Graham last night certainly stated the case clearly. The future of Canada was threatened in the dark days of 1775, when so many left the United States in order to escape a change of allegiance, and again in the War of 1812. But the danger to which the country was exposed then was trifling to that which hangs over it today. The loss of Canada to the United States would have meant nothing more serious than a change of government from the best to the second best form in the civilized world. The conquest of Canada by the Germans would make Canadians a nation of serfs.

As usual, the eligible young men of this city were not in evidence in the audience, but public sentiment is being educated, and if the slacker does not learn his duty from the recruiting officer he is likely to hear it from those who do listen to those Sunday night addresses.

WOMEN'S REWARD.

THE WOMEN of Canada are looking for no reward for the work they are doing in the war, for the sacrifices they are making in parting from their relatives or that are involved in their ceaseless exertions on behalf of the sick and wounded in the military hospitals. Women are making sacrifices, too, when they leave their own walks of life and take up some line of work formerly done by men who are now in uniform.

But women's work in the war is appreciated. Major O'Flynn, at the recruiting meeting last night, voiced the sentiments of the public when he spoke in high terms of what the women are doing.

A man engaged in work made necessary by the war, provided he is of military age, cannot claim that he is doing his bit, so long as his place can be filled by a woman. Such a man can do his full duty only if he is in uniform. There are ten thousand women engaged in munition making in Canada, and, according to the estimates of Major O'Flynn, there are at least one hundred thousand more ready to take up that work and so release that many men for the service.

What recognition are the women of Canada to receive when the war is over? Major O'Flynn indicated the present trend of public opinion when he declared that the women should be given a greater part in shaping the government of the country for which they have done so much more than the men who refused to turn out and help save the nation.

This was no mere pleasantry or empty gallantry. It was an assertion based on solid facts and conceived in a spirit of common justice.

TODAY'S ELECTION.

THE BYE-ELECTION in West Simcoe to choose a successor to the late James Duff who was Minister of Agriculture in the Hearst cabinet, is in progress today, and the result will be known all over the country before 7 o'clock tonight. The riding is a rural constituency nearly four hundred square miles in extent and with a population of 25,000. It has always been solidly Conservative, with a normal majority of about seven hundred, but in the election of 1914 the late Minister of Agriculture carried it by a margin of 1,085 votes, a signal triumph, due both to his own popularity and that of his then leader, the late Sir James Whitney. The riding has just been made the scene of one of the fiercest campaigns ever carried on in a bye-election, especially in a constituency where the voting strength is so one-sided.

What is the hope that has inspired the Liberals to carry on a fight that under ordinary circumstances the most optimistic in the party could hardly dream of winning. The record of the Hearst Government is all to the good. It has made itself solid with the people on account of its patriotic and able management of all matters connected with the war. The nickel question has been decide to its credit by the statements issued on the subject by the British Government. The Administration's attitude on the hydro-electric problem is popular with the people. What secret force, then, is working against the Government?

Prohibition was the undercurrent in the campaign. That was the real weapon which the Opposition used upon Premier Hearst and his Cabinet in the campaign which closed Saturday night. The Oppoosition did their most effective work, not on the platform, but in a gumshoe canvass that they carried on from one end of the riding to the other. The constituency has been under local option for several years, but local option and provincial prohibition are vastly different propositions. The temperance Liberals will not vote as they petitioned. The anti-temperance Conservatives have been besought by the paid workers of the Liberal party to vote against the Government candidate. Mr. Rowell denies that he is in league with the liquor interests in this fight. A cast-iron agreement is not necessary. No one knows better than Mr. Rowell himself that if he gains a supporter in West Simcoe otday he will have the co-operation of the liquor element to thank for it.

The result of the elections in Perth and Southwest Toronto, solid Conservative strongholds that were lost to the Government on the temperance issue, is all that buoyed up the Opposition to make a fight in West Simcoe. With the temperance question left out, the Liberals would either have let the election go by default or would at the most have carried on a desultory campaign for the sake of appearances only.

Allan, the Conservative candidate, is a lawyer; Scott, the chosen of the Opposition, is a farmer. In a rural constituency, a popular farmer may succeed in cutting down an adverse majority. But if the normal majority in West Simcoe is reduced to the vanishing point, the personality of the two candidates will not account for the change. The temperance issue will be the deciding factor.

IS THE SECRET BALLOT A FAILURE?

PETER McARTHUR, the sage of Ekfrid, whose homely philosophy is coming more and more before the public as a subject for discussion, is always starting something that tends to set the people thinking. In his rural environments Mr. McArthur has opportunities to evolve theories and to work them out uninfluenced by anything that he may see done or hear around him.

Mr. McArthur's latest venture is to question the success of the secret ballot as a means of expressing the opinion of the voters at an election. He believes that this plan of registering the popular will very often conceals more corruption than it prevents. If men have been intimidated into voting a certain way, there is no way of proving it by seeing how their votes are cast. The man who sells his vote does not have it put on record in such a way as to invite criticism. Anyway, the so-called secret ballot is not really secret, as nearly everyone talks openly on how he means to vote.

Again, we are gradually finding out that secrecy is the curse of the world. Secret diplomacy ties us up in bargains of which we know nothing, and secret deals defeat the will of the people. We are asking for publicity as to the raising of campaign funds and everything else that has to do with elections and government, and yet our whole system is based on the secret ballot.

Mr. McArthur might have gone further. Members of an elected body are required to vote openly. They cannot hope to avoid either responsibility or criticism by recording their wills in secret. Why should the man at the polls on election day be placed on a different footing than the very men whom he votes into office?

Nearly ninety per cent. of the voters of Ontario signed the petition for war-time prohibition. There is no doubt that the majority of the residents of this province are, and have been for years, in favor of prohibition; yet the large percentage signing the petition was a surprise to everyone.

Everybody knows that hundreds signed that petition who did not believe in prohibtion. They did it simply because the majority of the people in their neighborhood were doing likewise. It may be, too, that they were prominent in church work and that was the course expected of them. When it comes to an election by secret ballot, how many men will vote not as they petitioned but on the opposition side? They will thrust a knife, while working in the dark, into the back of the Administration which gave the people of the province what they themselves joined in asking for.

If the vote, which is always interpreted as an endorsation or a condemnation of politicians, was taken openly as petitions are signed, the disparity so often noticed in the results would not be, at least, so wide. It requires some moral courage for a man to refuse to sign a petition to which the majority of his neighbors are affixing their signatures, but it requires none to vote as his inclinations dictate when he steps behind the curtain in the polling booth and marks his ballot.

Few would be willing to go back to the old style of voting openly, yet the objections to the secret ballot pointed out by Mr. McArthur show that the secret ballot is not an unmixed blessing.

PENSION LAWYERS.

AFTER THE CIVIL WAR in the United States a new professional cult sprang up, known as pension attorneys, who devoted all their energies to securing pensions for the veterans of the Northern army. So many were the abuses under the system, the lawyers in a good many cases getting all or nearly all of the money designed for the heroes, that Congress came to the rescue of the latter and passed a law setting the maximum fee of the professional gentleman who made a specialty of this line of work at $10. No lawyer could legally charge more for getting a man a pension. This, of course, helped some, although veterans were still victimized by being compelled to pay for "extras" on the quiet.

The pension rules drawn up by the Canadian Government are so clear that he who runs may read. No man need go to the expense of hiring a lawyer to get him a pension. If, however, the pension lawyer does arise in this country, his fees should be set by the Government just as were those of the operator across the border.

We believe that any lawyer in Peterborough will give a returned soldier free advice and other assistance in securing a pension, but all the lawyers in Canada may not be up to the high standard maintained by the local fraternity. No profession in this city has done more than the lawyers to induce young men to enlist. The same professional men have so far shown themselves solicitous for the welfare of the soldiers when they return to Canada sick or disabled.

THE KAISER'S VIRTUES.

For some time past the American "Puck" has been advertising a great German number. This has appeared. The following is a sample:

Who soothes the infant in his cot
And feeds the starving orphan tot
(Whose parents he has hanged or shot)?
The Kaiser.

Who cries: "Peace is my heart's desire;
I weep to see this carnage dire"?
(Who first used "gas" and "liquid fire"?)
The Kaiser.

Who, when the fight is raging hot
Leads on his men through shell and shot?
(Whoever it may be, it's not)

TALES FROM THE TRENCHES

A BIT OF HUMOR.

Once when we were in mess billets I went to dine at another mess, writes a subaltern officer.

It was very late when I started back to billets, and the night was so dark I lost my way.

Suddenly a figure loomed up through the darkness, and I was just able to distinguish the khaki of a British private.

I halted him and inquired the way back to ——.

"Lumme, guv'ner, you drunk too!" was all he said.

A very tall, thin English boy, reported to a Canadian battalion in Flanders. His colonel was bald and elderly, but adored by his men.

After a few days' experience of his new command the sub. approached the O. C. and asked permission to ventilate a grievance.

"I wish you would use your influence, sir, to restrain my platoon from referring to me as 'Legs,'" he said.

"Sure! my lad, sure!" replied the colonel, solemnly, "if you'll use yours to stop my whole damn battalion callin' me a bald-headed old ——!"

"To the German soldier war is a serious business. To the Frenchman it is sublime devotion. To the Englishman it's bully sport." This from Capt. Patrick Corcoran of the Royal Engineers, hero of a dozen "Somewheres" in France, twice wounded and now on permanent leave in New York City. "And to the Irishman?" "Fighting always was the Irishman's great amusement," he said. "The English are good sports, but they never did get the fun out of their fun that the Irish do."

◆ ◆ ◆

Fun in the trenches! With shells dropping all around and blowing the bodies of your comrades into red fragments! What do the soldiers do, I wondered, when this is happening? The Frenchmen sing, this captain told me. Not to keep up their courage, but joyously, exultantly. "And the English?" "Sure, they lay bets on what the next shell will do."

◆ ◆ ◆

"SAFETY FIRST!"

When my own battalion first "went over" we were put into the trenches with other regiments for four days to "try us out."

The second afternoon we were in the Boche shelled us hard for two hours, which was rather a severe ordeal for troops who had only just left England.

When the shelling ceased I walked down the trench to see how the men had stood the test.

"Well, Morton," I said, as cheerfully as I could, "what do you think of it?"

He looked up at me with an inexpressibly humorous twinkle in his eyes.

"My Gawd, sir," he exclaimed, "do you know, I don't think it's safe!"

WHEN THE WEATHER IS COLD

"Back to the sunny Southland for me!" observed the fair-haired boy as he purchased a mild cigar.

"Neither can I," retorted the tobacconist, "but I do, and so does everybody else. It's the only thing you can do with cold. Sooner or later it comes down to that. The janitor becomes absorbed in a checker game or a political discussion or the boss instructs him to go slower on the fuel, and you have to stand the cold, dont you? There are millions of people in this country, north, south, east and west, who have to stand the cold when the janitor lays down on the job——"

"But in the land of flowers and sunshine, where bad weather is very unusual for us, we burn our own fuel——"

"Forget it," snapped the tobacconist, like a lawyer rising to object to testimony and impeach a witness. "There's lots of times when your fine climate fails to show up on the job, laid up with rheumatism or a bad cold or something, and then, as you say, you burn fuel.

"Now, there's a funny thing about fuel. There are four kinds: gas, coal, wood and electricity, and each one is more expensive than the other. You might as well burn gold nuggets as coal, and wood costs a dollar a minute, and electricity—why, I know a man who used electricity to warm his bungalow and—oh, well. That's the point I wish to make clear. You are cold, anyway. It doesn't make any difference whether you burn coal or gold nuggets, brisquettes, punk or old rocking-chairs. It's all the same. It costs you a fortune and you are cold.

"You hear a lot about climate and houses hard to heat, high ceilings and low ceilings, and big, airy rooms. But all houses are hard to keep warm."

"Well, you must admit," hissed the fair-haired young man, like a cat in a corner, "that there is some difference between a high, wide, double-jointed, old-fashioned sitting-room with a northern exposure and no sun, heated by a pocket oil stove, and a small, low-ceilinged, tight little two-by-four apartment that is heated by steam!"

The young man smiled triumphantly when the tobacconist did not reply.

"Excuse, me," murmured the latter politely, at length. "I've got to get more wood and coal and a little bit of coke. If I try to explain this thing to you I'll freeze to death. I say it doesn't make any difference what latitude you live in or what kind of a house you have, or what fuel you burn, you're going to be cold during a cold snap and it's going to cost you a mint of money. Don't I know who buy the most and best cigars? It's the fuel sellers! That's why they call it a cold snap, it's such a snap for fuel dealers."

Wit and Wisdom

"Waiter," roared Col. Tippler as he mopped a pint of perspiration from his bald head. "Fetch me a drink."

"Yes, sir," said the waiter, and a few minutes later returned with a glass of water.

"Waiter!" yelled the colonel again glaring at the glass. "I said I wanted a drink. I'm thirsty, not dirty!"

Little Margaret lived in a gossipy neighborhood and being an observant child, she had got some ideas into her curly head. One day, having done something naughty, she was sent upstairs to confess her transgression in prayer.

"Did you tell God all about it?" asked her mother when she came down again.

Margaret shook her head decidedly.

"'Deed I didn't," she declared. "Why, it would have been all over Heaven in no time!"

At a church adjacent to a big military camp service was recently held for soldiers only.

"Let all you brave fellows who have troubles stand up," shouted the preacher.

Instantly every man rose except one.

"Ah!" exclaimed the preacher, peering at this lone individual. "You are one in a thousand."

"It ain't that," piped back the only man who had remained seated, as the rest of his comrades gazes suspiciously at him. "Somebody's put some cobbler's wax on the seat, and I'm stuck."

Today's Story.

An old Scotsman was threatened with blindness if he did not give up drinking.

"Now, McTavish," said the doctor, "it's like this: youv'e either to stop the whiskey or lose your eyesight—and you must choose."

"Ah, weel, doctor," said McTavish, "I'm an auld man noo, an' I was thinkin' I hae seen about everything worth seein!"

Waiter — Alas, Monsieur, the war ——"

THE HEAD OF THE HOUSE

By ELENOR HOLMES

"Martha," said Mrs. Bumbleton, "how long are you going to let your husband tyrannize over you?"

"Tyrannize over me? Why, mother, what do you mean?"

"I mean just what I say. William is a tyrant. Didn't I hear him refuse to give you the money you needed for your fall hat?"

Martha thought a moment, then smiled. "You heard me ask him for $5 for a hat. He said he would not give me $5, for I couldn't get much of a hat for that. He gave me $10."

"Oh, he did, did he? He probably did that to make you feel easy at having to go without a new cloak. Ten dollars for a hat saves $40 for a cloak."

"But I don't need a cloak. I spent $200 for one last November."

"Why, mother, dear, that collar is mink, and the cloak is as good as new."

"That's not saying much for it. You are the shabbiest dressed woman I know of. When I was your age I made your father pony up for what I wore. I told him it would be time enough for me to dress shabby when I'd got old. I didn't intend to look like a bundle of rags when I was young and handsome. As soon as we were married I let him understand that I wasn't to be his slave. And that's what every wife needs to do right off. The longer she puts off the harder it's going to be to get the upper hand."

"But, mother, I don't want the upper hand. Will and I manage our affairs jointly."

"If your father would have listened to me we would have been rich today. Of course I couldn't go into his store and run it; I had too much to do at home. The consequence is he was always buying goods he couldn't sell and trusting persons who wouldn't pay, and that's the reason I've had to be contented to be a poor man's wife. But when I had him at home I tell you I made him toe the mark."

The young wife smiled. She knew her mother's idiosyncrasies, and she knew, too, that actors are not usually talkers. She considered her mother harmless, and instead of being influenced by her she humored her.

"You must remember, mother," she said, "that all women don't have the firmness that you have."

"All right, if you want to take a back seat and let a man ride roughshod over you. For my part, I don't intend to let any man boss me."

Now, during the last words of this dialogue Mr. Bumbleton came into the house and walked upstairs. His wife's hearing was not of the best, and she was not aware of his approach. On reaching the door of the room where mother and daughter were talking he paused and looked in. His wife's back was to him, while his daughter faced him. When his wife spoke her last sentence he smiled at Martha, then, assuming a severe expression, walked into the room.

"Amelia," he said to his wife sternly, "I thought I told you to have the lock on the front door fixed. I've been fumbling with it for a long time. I come home tired with business, thinking I have a wife at home to attend to these little necessities, and, behold, nothing is done. Why didn't you do as I told you?"

"Why, Henry, I forgot it."

"Forgot it! Do you consider that any excuse for neglecting your duties?"

"Now, Henry, I'm awful sor"—

"Sorry! Does being sorry prevent my struggling to get into my own house half the afternoon? Hereafter I'd have you to understand that when I tell you to do anything I want you to do it."

"I'll telephone for the locksmith at once." And she started for the booth.

"Come back here. Don't you know you can't get a workman after 5 o'clock? What's the matter with you, anyway?"

During this storming the father cast occasional glances at his daughter, who frowned her orders for him to desist. At this point she broke in:

"Papa, you are very unkind. Mother didn't feel well this morning and I told her she had better lie down and take a rest while I made her a cup of tea. She didn't eat much breakfast, you know. There now; that's a good papa! Don't scold any more."

With this she went to her father and put her hand over his mouth.

"Very well; for your sake, my dear, I'll overlook your mother's negligence this time, but if it occurs again"—

He got no further, for his words were stopped by a kiss from Martha.

At that moment Martha's husband came in.

"What's up?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing much," replied his father-in-law. "I just found it necessary to exercise my authority as head of the house. I would recommend you to begin your wife's training early."

"That'll do, papa," said Martha. "You needn't trouble yourself to instruct my husband as to how he shall treat me. I'll attend to that."

"Just so." Then to his wife, "Is dinner ready, dear?"

"I'll go and see."

The poor woman hustled out and in a few moments called for the others to come to dinner. Mr. Bumbleton opened a bottle of wine and called to the others to join him in drinking the health of the best woman in the world, though he confessed that at times she was a trifle forgetful.

Enough.

"My dear, do you want to go to the movies tonight?"

"No, I've got enough of the movies. I've been watching two families go out of the block this morning and three coming into it."—Exchange.

Omelette

Break six eggs into pitcher. Beat just four minutes with dover beater. Add pinch of salt. Place omelette pan or skillet over slow fire. Put into it one heaping tablespoon of butter. Allow to melt slowly and turn pan so every part will be covered with the melted butter. When butter is hot, but not brown, turn in the beaten eggs. Tilt or turn pan so the eggs cover entire bottom. Have gas low or, if using coal or wood raise from blaze. When eggs begin to thicken run a knife or spatula around the edge. When eggs are nearly firm turn the cream lobster onto one half fold other half over until sides meet. Slip onto hot dish and serve with buttered toast.

Lentil Croquettes

Wash 1 cup of lentils and ½ cup of dry kidney beans. Put over slow fire in 3 cups of cold water. Allow to heat slowly and when nearly at boiling point add 1 stalk of celery and ½ a small onion. Cook until soft enough to be forced through a sieve. Salt to taste, dash of pepper and 1 teaspoon of minced parsley. Beat together, then fold in 1 scant cup of fine bread crumbs. Make thick white sauce by creaming 2 tablespoons of flour with 2 teaspoons of butter. Add this mixture to 1 scant cup of milk. Cook in double boiler until thick and smooth. Stir in lentils. Mix thoroughly. Shape and set aside for 3 or 4 hours. Dip in egg. Roll in fine crumbs and fry in deep hot fat.

Preserving Citron Rind

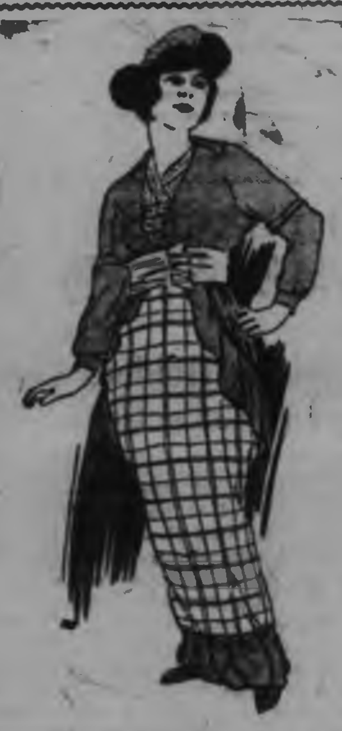
Peel and cut the rind into pieces of uniform size, rejecting all the seeds. Lay the rind in salted water for two hours, then drain and lay in cold fresh water for six or seven hours, changing the water three times during that period. Drain, put the citron on to boil in a gallon of water, to which you have added two teaspoonfuls of alum. Stew until tender, drain, and lay in cold water.

Make a thick syrup of sugar and water, and when it boils cook the rind for fifteen minutes. Remove the rinds, pack in jars. Add to the syrup in the kettle enough lemon juice and ginger root to flavor it. When very thick, fill the jars with the boiling syrup and seal.

Macaroni and Oyster Croquettes

Cook ½ cup of macaroni that has been broken into quarter-inch pieces, in salted water until tender. Drain in colander. Turn cold water over it to "plump it." Clean and parboil 1 pint of oysters in just enough water and oyster liquor enough to cover. Remove oysters. Chop fine, mix with macaroni. Make thick white sauce using in place of 1 cup of milk, ½ cup of the oyster broth and ½ cup of milk, 1 tablespoon of butter and 2 even tablespoons of flour. Cook 15 minutes. Salt and pepper to taste. Mix white sauce with oysters and macaroni. Spread on plate. Allow to cool for 3 hours. Cut in shape. Roll in crumbs. Dip in egg and crumbs again. Fry in deep fat. Drain and serve with cucumber sauce.

FASHION HINTS



A Plaid Gown

If you are too stout to wear a full plaid costume make the skirt like the one illustrated of plaid with a ruffle of the plain goods about the bottom. A tunic of the plain goods can be made, using a contrasting belt.

Fish Timbales

One-half pound of halibut or any other white fish. Put through the meat chopper. Make a paste of 1 cup of milk and two tablespoons of flour. Boil until perfectly smooth. When cold add to the minced fish. Add 1 even teaspoon of salt, a saltspoon of white pepper, 6 tablespoons of cream. Beat all this thoroughly and allow to cool. A little minced parsley may be added if liked. Fold in the whites of 5 eggs that have been beaten to a stiff dry froth. Grease small timbale molds with butter, fill with fish paste putting in a few green peas or mushrooms. Set the molds in pan of boiling water, cover tops and bake in a moderate oven 25 minutes. Serve with relish.

Cabbage

Cabbage contains no starch and its greatest food value is in the bulk it gives.

Cabbage should be put into salted boiling water, a little at a time so as to reduce the boiling. Cook in an uncovered kettle, pushing the cabbage under the water several times during the cooking.

Rice With Cheese

Wash 1 cup rice and cook in 2 quarts boiling water. Boil hard to keep grains separate and lift occasionally with a fork to prevent sticking. Drain in a colander and set in the oven a few minutes to dry out. Put a layer of cooked rice in a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of grated cheese, then add a layer of grated sauce, made by melting 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan, adding 2 tablespoons flour and stirring until smooth, then pouring in 1 cup of milk and boiling 5 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Alternate layers of rice, cheese and white sauce until materials are used, then cover with buttered crumbs, and bake until crumbs are browned.

TRUE FRIENDSHIP

HELPFUL HAND FOR OTHERS BRINGS RICH BLESSINGS.

In the strenuous days in which we are living, do we take time to cultivate friendship?

Would we feel it a privilege to help nurse a sick child through a long siege of fever because the mother is our friend, or would we salve our consciences by saying that we know nothing about nursing?

A gentle sage said: "The end of friendship is for aid and comfort through all the passages of life and death. It is fit for serene days and graceful gifts, but also for rough roads and hard fare, poverty and persecution."

Look about among your acquaintances and see if with any of them you would be able to endure "rough roads and hard fare, poverty and persecution."

If you can find one who means this much to you, you are fortunate, indeed. You not only have a friend, but you have a mind broad enough to encompass the real meaning of the word friendship and a soul big enough to enjoy "serene days and graceful gifts," as well as staunch enough to stand beside your friend, shoulder to shoulder, when trouble comes.

Because you have a friend to whom you give of your best is no reason why you should have nothing to do with his commerce with others. The only thing that you can ask is that he shall be honest with you.

He may not even be honest with others and still you can have nothing to say, although it may grieve you to the heart. If he be true to you, then friendship demands that you help to make him be to the world what he is to you.

In doing this, you not only help him, but you help yourself a thousandfold and you taste one of the greatest blessings given to man—the joy of true friendship.

A Day at a Time

Every day is a fresh beginning.
Every morning is the world made new.
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you.
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done, and the tears are shed.
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing which night hath shed.

Let them go, since we cannot relieve them,
Cannot undo and cannot atone;
God in His mercy, receive and forgive them.
Only the new days are our own;
To-day is ours, and to-day alone.

WHY NOT USE FISH?

Splendid and Inexpensive Substitute For High-priced Meat

Two statements that should attract the attention of the housewife are often heard—one that the cost of living is rapidly increasing and the other that most people eat too much meat. It must be remembered that meat is one of our highest-priced food products, and therefore, if it is overused, it behooves the housewife to study the question of possible substitutes.

Such animal foods as oysters and fish of various kinds, especially if combined with cereal products containing protein, offer desirable substitutes at a somewhat lower cost than meat. Oysters, of course, are not high in food value, since they contain so much water, but their flavor is characteristic, and, combined with macaroni and milk, or creamed and served on toasted bread, they are savory and nutritious, and the cost is not prohibitive.

KITCHEN HINTS

If a gloss is desired on linen add a teaspoonful of salt to the starch when making.

Before frying the breakfast bacon, cut off the rind and dip each rasher in flour; then fry or grill quickly. This prevents the fat from running and gives the bacon a better flavor.

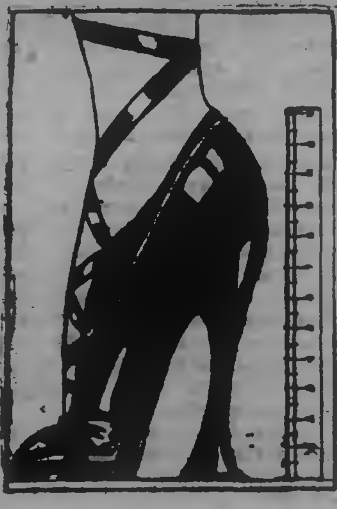
When using dripping for making a cake, add a few drops of essence of lemon, and it will be found that this will not only remove the fatty flavor which cakes so often have when made with dripping—especially mutton—but will very greatly improve the flavor.

If bright saucepans and kettles have to be used over a smoky fire, smearing a little grease over the bright part will prevent the smoke from blackening the metal. If washed after use in hot water, the van will be as bright as ever.

If the disagreeable smell of frying pervades the house examine the bottom of the frying pan and you will find it covered with burnt fat, which smells as soon as it is hot. To prevent the smell, besides washing the pan with strong soda water just after it has been used, it is necessary to boil it out in a larger vessel with soda in the water. Rinse, put in some clean water, and the small will no longer exist.

The cooler eggs are the quicker they will froth when whipped, so they should be beaten in a cool place. A pinch of salt always cools and freshens them.

Vegetables and fruit stains on the fingers can be removed by dipping the fingers in very strong tea for a few minutes and then washing them in clear, warm water.



New Stilt Heel

Sometimes it's called the "suffragette heel" because it makes the wearer look so high and mighty, but the eight and a half inch heel on some new pumps is really the stilt heel. It's safer than stilts, however, as there isn't so far to fall in a tipover. This picture is reproduced from a London fashion journal.

Laying New Linoleum

To prevent new linoleum wrinkling, and to eliminate the possibility of dust collecting under the edges, proceed in this way: The linoleum should be cut one-half of an inch smaller than the size of the room. This will leave a space one-quarter of an inch wide on the four sides to allow for stretching, which always occurs with new oilcloth of any kind. This gap is covered with a three-quarter-inch quarter-round moulding nailed to the floor around the edge of the room, overlapping the linoleum. As there are no tacks around the edges, the linoleum is free to move one-quarter inch in all directions. At the same time the moulding prevents the dirt from working in between the floor covering and the wall.

MAKING SALT BEADS

Necklaces Made From Very Ordinary Household Articles

Fudge making as a popular pastime appears to have been abnegated in favor of "salt beads." The recipe is herewith given.

Take 1 cup of fine table salt and heat it very hot. Dissolve ½ cup cornstarch in ½ cup water. With the cornstarch solution mix the coloring matter, which may be bluing, Easter egg dye or red ink for salmon pink. To make black beads, use black ink.

Remove the salt from the fire, and add the colored mixture. Work with the hands into a smooth dough. Wrap it in a damp cloth, and break off pieces of equal size, molding them into beads. String beads on hatpin, a knitting needle, or a fine wire, and dry several days. They shrink in drying. To polish, rub the beads with a cloth which has been dipped in sweet oil.

Burning Rubbish

Do not allow combustible rubbish to accumulate in or about the house, but do not burn quantities of paper, or other rubbish in a fireplace or in the firebox of a stove or furnace. The ashes clog the flue passages, and the long flames are liable to overheat flues or start soot fires. Burn such material in the ash box below the firebox, where it can do no harm.

Rather Inconvenient

A little slum child was enjoying his first glimpse of country life. He sat by the farmer's wife just as the sun was setting, watching her pluck a chicken.

He was gravely silent for a long time, then asked:

"Do you take off their clothes every night, lady?"

BATHE HEALTHY BABY EACH DAY, IS RULE

Complete Directions For Child's Bath by Mother---The Temperature and the Objector.

A healthy baby should be bathed every day. During the first two weeks these and all matters pertaining to the care of the baby are usually under the doctor's or nurse's supervision. When the mother takes charge of the baby she will find it convenient usually to give the bath before the mid-morning feeding. The room should be comfortably warm—about 72 degrees. It is better for the baby to have its bath in a room at ordinary temperature than in a bath room which is heated by oil or gas. The baby should be protected from draughts by screens, or by a shield made by hanging a blanket over the backs of two chairs.

Avoid Delay

An infant bath tub serves every purpose for the first year of a baby's life. The water should be at body heat, or slightly above—that is from 96 to 100 degrees. A bath thermometer is inexpensive, but if none can be had the mother may test the temperature with her elbow. When the water feels neither hot nor cold it will be comfortable for baby. It should be tested after the baby is undressed and ready to get into it. No unnecessary exposure or delay should take place, for in cold or cool weather the baby is quickly chilled. To prevent this, all necessities, such as soap and towels, clothing, bath apron for the mother, tub, water, powder and the like should be at hand before beginning to undress the baby.

Before the baby is completely undressed, his scalp should be washed, the head lowered a little to avoid getting soap in the eyes. Use a pure bland, non-transparent soap. Very little soap is needed for cleaning a baby's skin. It is most important that the skin be thoroughly rinsed. After the head and face have been washed and dried, remove the clothing and soap the entire body. Then place the baby in the bath, holding him with the left forearm under the neck and shoulders, the hand under his arm, lifting the feet and legs with the right hand.

Then use the right hand to sponge the entire body, and lift the baby out and wrap him at once in a warmed towel. Dry carefully with soft, warm towels, patting the skin gently. Never rub the baby's tender skin with anything less smooth than the palm of the hand. Dress as rapidly as possible if the weather is cool.

Use Powder Sparingly

If the skin is carefully dried after the b. . there will be little need for powder. It should never be used as a cover for careless drying. It is well to use a little pure talcum in the creases of the skin, but it should not be used generally so as to fill the pores. It should be applied only after the skin is dry.

For one reason or another a baby sometimes objects to his bath. Judicious coaxing may be employed. Toys which float will often divert his attention and make him forget his objections, lowering him into the water wrapped in a towel will accomplish the result. Or let him dabble in the water with his hands and feet until he is reassured. Sometimes he will cease his objections if his face is not washed until after the tub bath is over.

WORTH REMEMBERING

To keep a nice comfortable or blanket clean on a child's bed, turn the upper sheet over about one foot and pin with safety pins.

A quick frosting may be made of powdered sugar and cold milk worked together till smooth and of proper thickness. Add a little piece of soft butter and flavor to taste.

To bleach flannels, dissolve an ounce of powdered ammonia in two quarts of water to which has been added one ounce of salt. Soak the article in this for an hour or more. To soften flannels, add a little glycerine to the washing water.

WOMEN WHO USE THE WEED

Quite a Common Custom in England and Quite Expensive

London, so far, has not followed the example of some other large cities in opening a clinic for the treatment of the thousands of girls and women who desire to be cured of the cigarette habit; but the cigarette habit, none the less, is apparently becoming a confirmed one among the women in England, according to a writer in an English magazine.

The manager of a leading firm of cigarette makers in Piccadilly confessed that he had a large and increasing number of women clients on his books.

"Women smoke as a matter of course now," he said, "and it is the fashion for them to have their cigarettes especially made for them. Turkish tobacco has held the field until lately, but fashion is tending toward coarser-cut Russian tobacco made into cigarettes with maize paper, which slows down the combustion.

"Women are more luxurious smokers than men. They are now going in for most elaborate holders of amber and ivory, inlaid with gold, or studded with diamonds and other jewels. And, of course, they have their gold and silver cigarette cases specially made to hold the particular size of cigarette they smoke, and charming little jewelled match boxes.

"Physicians have something to do with the growth of smoking among women. In prescribing for nervous women they often include one or two cigarettes a day as part of the treatment, and so the habit starts until you find a woman smoking half-a-dozen cigarettes with her coffee after lunch."

Several London hotel managers unanimously agreed that for a woman not to smoke in the restaurant after lunch and dinner was now the exception, and that smoking with afternoon tea was not unusual.

The old social traditions and laws of etiquette are dying out. On the Continent women have smoked for years, and it is from them that the women of England have caught the habit.

PLUM PUDDING KEPT

For a Year, Under Lock, After This Recipe

For old fashioned plum pudding: One cup each of chopped suet, rolled bread crumbs, light brown sugar, seeded raisins, well washed currants, chopped nuts, citron slices or chopped bits of citron, and one cup of New Orleans molasses, containing one level teaspoon of soda. With all this combine half a grated nutmeg, a teaspoon each of salt, cinnamon, cloves and half a teaspoon of ginger. Add the yolks of four eggs and a half of sweet milk, add flour enough to make all adhere and pour into buttered molds or bowls. Tie a cloth over the top and steam four hours. Keep in the containers until used, reheating as it is called for. Serve with a hot rich butter sauce. This will keep a year (under lock and key).

Piquant Sandwiches

Dried beef, chipped and moistened slightly with mayonnaise, makes a piquant filling for white bread slices that is hard to identify and exceedingly nice. Indian sandwiches are fishy affairs; the filling is sardines, salt, pepper, crushed hard-boiled eggs and the oil from the sardines. Mix this to a paste with a little cream cheese. Spread on buttered, whole wheat bread. The mixture is said to much resemble pate de foie gras or imported goose liver. It is much cheaper and probably not more indigestible than the real pate.

Curried Eggs With Rice

Boil hard as many eggs as you need, and while they are boiling make a cream sauce, adding a teaspoon of curry powder to a pint of sauce. Then slice the eggs in the middle of a platter, pour over the sauce and surround with canned peas heated and flavored.

BATHING HOUSES AT OTHER PLACES WELL PATRONIZED

Local Committee Have Plenty of Ammunition for Meeting With City Council.

The first Monday evening in February is the date suggested by Mayor Duffus and members of the City Council for the consideration of the question of supervised public bathing houses. On this occasion petitions will be presented on behalf of many local societies and citizens who have an interest in the moral and physical development of the youth of our city. So without doubt favorable action will be taken by the city fathers toward solving the bathing problem.

Mr. C. N. Meserve, chairman of a special committee of the Playgrounds Association, has corresponded with the mayors of a number of Canadian cities and towns, and submits the following information regarding what public bathing provisions are being made in other centres:

Guelph—Population, 17,000. Poor water facilities, but one public bathing house with several dressing-rooms.

Hamilton — Population, 100,000. One public bath house under city management. Two under private management. Council contributes $3000 for playgrounds.

Kingston — Population, 21,000. Two public bath houses, with caretaker; city management. Facilities to be increased this year as a bequest of $5000 from the late Capt. Richardson is to be devoted to this purpose.

London — Population, 55,000. Two bath houses; four employes. City controls, and pays all expenses.

Montreal — Population, 600,000. Fourteen public bath houses, including indoor baths, open all the year. Thirty-seven employes. One bathing house alone cost $87,000. Number of bathers in 1915, 1,683,589.

Orillia—Population 7,400. Two houses in public park. Supervised by town employes.

Regina—Population, 45,000. One outdoor and one indoor bath house. City management.

Toronto — Population, 450,000. Several supervised bathing beaches, to which children are carried free in summer by street railroad. Two large indoor baths, including showers and plunge. One bathing house cost $46,000. Annual cost of operation $20,000, less revenue of $3500 from lockers and towels.

Vancouver — Population, 100,000. The most progressive public bathing and playground program in Canada is being worked out by the park commissioners. Three public bath houses now built, and one other to cost $75,000, to be built. Number of employes at the three houses, thirty. Twenty-three parks and playgrounds, acreage 1,4415. Cost of parks to 1915, $1,494,764. Maintenance to 1915, $469,553.

Winnipeg — Population, 300,000. Two public indoor baths cost $100,000. Fees pay 50 per cent. operation expenses.

Fort William—Population 22,000. One public indoor bath house, open the year round. Supervision, superintendent, matron and towel attendant. Wages $1000.

Victoria—Population, 50,000. One free public bath house with attendant. Several privately managed bath houses.

St. John's—Population, 50,000. One large scow in the harbor fitted with dressing rooms. One employe in charge. City pays expenses.

Now regarding Peterborough. Several individuals and organisations have been investigating the needs, sites and cost of bathing facilities, so the information is at hand ready for action.

The Playgrounds Association have had a special committee go thoroughly into the whole subject, and will co-operate with the Council in any way. This organization use their male and female supervisors jointly in directing the playgrounds and teaching swimming. The Association had on its staff last summer two ladies and two men, who were competent swimming instructors, but who could not do their best work, as both boys and girls were compelled to dress and undress in the open.

If the Council will erect buildings, provide caretakers and welcome the co-operation of the playgrounds staff, a most modern and efficient policy can be carried out, and the swimming problem will be largely solved.

The following letters have been received from Kingston and Regina by Mr. C. N. Meserve, of the local committee:

Kingston's Facilities.

Kingston for a number of years has rented some water lots, upon which public bath houses have been erected. A caretaker is appointed who goes on duty from May 1 to Oct. 1, and is paid $1.25 a day during that time. He has the entire supervision of the bath houses, keeping them clean and in repair and supervising the order and conduct of the patrons. He is allowed $15 for services as watchman during the winter months. The late Capt. George Richardson, we are unofficially informed, left in his will a sum to provide bathing facilities for Kingston, and negotiations are now on foot with a view to utilizing this bequest.

I shall be pleased to furnish you with any other information in our possession.

Yours respectfully,
Alex. W. Richardson,
Mayor.

Public Bathing at Regina.

The bath house at Wascana Lake was opened June 1st and closed September 15th. The attendance of bathers for the season was as follows: Males, 9,287; females, 2,301. Total, 11,488. The mixed bathing was a success, and I am pleased to state that quite a number of both sexes have learned to swim under the instruction of the caretaker. The increased attendance on special ladies' day (Thursday afternoons) shows their appreciation of the advantages provided for them at the bath house. The equipment consists of a one-storey building 85 x 30 feet, one anteroom, one reception room, ten lockers for females and 70 lockers for males. No accidents of any kind have occurred during the season.

OBITUARY

MRS. HUGH MACKEY

Mrs. Margaret Mackey, widow of the late Hugh Mackey died at the Nicholls Hospital on Saturday night after a severe attack of pneumonia. The deceased was born in the township of Smith over sixty-three years ago. After her marriage in 1879 she lived in Douro, later moving to Otonabee. She is survived by two sons and two daughters, Mrs. Jas. Thompson of Otonabee, Mrs Alton Wood of North Monaghan, George of Humboldt, Sask., and Hugh who lives on the homestead.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, Concession 11, Otonabee (west of Curtis's brick yard), on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30, to the Little Lake Cemetery. The funeral service will be conducted by Rev. W White of St. Luke's at 2 o'clock.

MRS. MARGARET COLBERT

Mrs. Margaret Colbert, who had spent the last four years in this city, died at the residence of her grandson, Mr. Claude Brady, 14 Aylmer Street, yesterday morning. She was born in Ireland 76 years ago and is survived by her two grandchildren, Claude and Margaret Brady.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock to Sacred Heart Church and St Peter's Cemetery.

The Y. M. C. A. Annual Meeting and election of directors will be held Tuesday evening, January 16th, at 8 o'clock. Every member who is also a member of an evangelical church should be present.

ALD. LANGFORD PLACES THE BLAME AT 50-50

Garbage Collectors and House Holders Contribute to Unsatisfactory Collections.

Ald Saunders holds the honor of presiding over the first committee meeting of the 1917 council. The property committee met on Saturday night, the members present being Ald. Saunders, Smith, Duncan, Taylor and Langford.

The chairman stated that the meeting had been called to investigate the complaints regarding the collection of garbage. He personally had seen evidence of the failure to collect ashes, and Ald Duncan also voiced a similar complaint.

Fire Chief Howard gave an outline of the result of his inspection of the yards in the rear of stores in the business district. Some of the yards were all right, and others, particularly the Lu[illegible]y block, were in a very bad condition. This was contrary to the fire protection ordnance and he had complained to the merchants, who in turn blamed the garbage collectors. Mischievous boys had caused a lot of trouble in some instances by scattering the rubbish around.

Receptacle Too Heavy

Ald. Saunders complained about St. Andrew's Church ashes not being taken, but was informed by Mr Graham, the garbage collector, that the receptacle was too large for one man to handle, which was contrary to the city by-law.

A number of other complaints were referred to and Mr Graham, while admitting that in some cases his men were wrong, in most cases it was the fault of the people themselves. Very few had proper cases for ashes, using boxes or baskets, which were easily broken. Others expected the garbage man to handle a box weighing 200 lbs. He also pointed out that the garbage often was frozen in the cans and impossible to get out unless damage was done to the can.

Ald. Smith thought the people should get proper receptacles for garbage and ashes and that the committee would know how to act.

Blame Everybody

Ald. Langford was of the opinion that both collector and the people were to blame. He moved that the sanitary inspector investigate and report. This carried.

The night soil collectors complained that house owners did not pay them for work performed. This led to a number of complaints that collections were not made. If they were paid the work would be done. One collector stated he had $58 on his books.

The committee will meet again next Saturday to hear further reports.

JAPANESE WOMEN COAL STEAMERS

There is at least one place in the world where a woman may earn as much as a man for the same labor and where the two sexes work side by side. This is at Nagasaki, Japan. When a liner comes into port the passengers who have been viewing the beautiful harbor observe a fleet of barges laden with coal which are lying in wait near the anchorage. On most of them are twenty to thirty men and women, the latter predominating.

In contrast with the kimono-clad women you have seen at Tokio and Yokohama and Kobe, these wear short skirts with cloth stockings and their heads are covered with thin cotton cloth bearing a peculiar Japanese design in blue print. Some of them have babies with them, and as the ship draws near they hastily bind them on the backs of little girls and boys and make ready for work.

In a trice, it seems, at each of the coal ports a pyramidal series of platforms is rigged up, the lowest level being just above the deck of the barge. Then on each platform two women, or a man and woman, take their position while a lot of men hurry down to the bunkers of the ship to receive the coal after it has been passed in and stow it away. From the end of the platform a double line extends to where men do nothing but throw big shovelfuls of coal in a shallow basket, which holds about a peck or a peck and a half.

The basket travels from hand to hand, but part of the effect of gravity is overcome by the forward motion, for the receptacle does not stop from the time it is once in the air until it reaches the ship's side. The empty basket is dropped with the same swing that discharges its contents, and an old woman on the top platform does nothing but toss the baskets to the barge below.

Nagasaki has the name of being the "fastest" coal port in the world, though the labor there is all done by hand. An army captain tells of being on a transport at Nagasaki when she took 2,400 tons in seven and a half hours.

To count the workers who are engaged on the job is difficult. Fresh barges keep coming up all the time, and fresh workers. There are about 900 men and women engaged at this work. The pay for this labor is by piece. Workmen and workwomen each get 1 yen, or 50 cents, for a day's work of eight to nine hours.

It is bewildering to watch the workers, for the baskets come up so steadily it looks as though they must be moved by machinery. Practice has taught men and women to make each motion count, and the whole effect is that of clockwork.

SUNDAY'S DINNER COOKED SATURDAY

TOMATO JELLY SALAD IS VERY ELABORATE

In our modern dietary an unusual salad is always at a premium and the clever cook or housekeeper is the one who can give an unusual twist to a very usual combination of lettuce, endive or chickory, oil and vinegar and the rather limited fruits and vegetables that are available in winter for salads. Following is an unusual tomato jelly salad which requires fresh tomatoes.

Small, firm tomatoes must be selected and boiling water poured over them. As the skins crack, lift them out quickly and drop into a bowl of ice water. In ten minutes drain and skin them, then place on ice until firm. In the meantime make a clear, quick aspic jelly by soaking one-half of a package of granulated gelatin in one-half cup of cold consomme, which may be made with beef extract; when soft, stand at the side of the fire until dissolved. Season one cup and a half of consomme with salt, tabasco and one tablespoonful of lemon juice, and add a few drops of kitchen bouquet, if necessary, to tint slightly. To this add the dissolved gelatin and set aside. Cut the chilled tomatoes in thick slices, remove the seeds and cut in cubes. Heap them lightly in small timbales or fancy molds, pour the jelly consomme over them until the molds are filled and put in the refrigerator.

To Keep Grapes

Select choice bunches. Seal the ends of stems with sealing wax and pack in cotton batting. Keep in a cool place.

Never use a wooden spoon for stirring anything flavored with onions, as wood absorbs the flavor of the onion, and for some time after, whatever the spoon is used for, will be flavored with onion.

"CIRCULATE THE GOOD"

Ideas as Well as Books Should be Passed Along

Have you a circulating library in your town? asks Ada Paterson. A good thing for the town and for everyone isn't it? That it broadens the vision of all, adds to the fund of information of all, gives an impetus toward better and higher things no one can deny. Life is made more useful, as well as more livable, by a new library in town. A circulating library sends into the community good ideas, new ideas, helpful ideas.

Very well, being convinced that a library is a good thing, why not be a circulating library yourself? A joke? Not at all. I am most thoroughly in earnest. Good things should be put into circulation. I have known a whole neighborhood to be heartened by a new idea, a strong, constructive idea. So have you.

A lamented philosopher said that ideas are like hay. They become musty if not shaken up. Discussing an idea is shaking it up. I am not inclined to counsel a gale of talk. I believe in doing. My creed includes a great deal more doing than talking about it. But, it doesn't require much talking to start the golden coin of a helpful idea on its rounds. Place it on the counter and it will be on its way.

Ideal Sponge Cake

This is all its name implies. Beat 4 eggs very light, yolks and whites together, then beat in a little at a time, 2 cups granulated sugar, then 1 cup sifted flour, a little at a time, then another cup of flour with which 2 teaspoons of baking powder have been mixed; lastly, a small or scant cup of water, almost boiling. Stir in a little at a time. Flavor with lemon. Follow directions closely and your cake will be a success.

Lemon Pie

Soak one cup of stale bread crumbs in a cup of milk. In 30 minutes add a half cup of sugar, the yolks of three eggs, a tablespoon of butter and the juice and grated rind of one lemon. Bake with one crust about 30 minutes. Squeeze the juice of one lemon with enough confectionery sugar to make a thick paste. To this add the stiffly beaten whites and spread over the top. Bake in a hot oven.

Solomon was the wisest man of his day, yet he was hopelessly married.

Never judge women and cigars by their wrappers.

NO GAME TUESDAY.

The Queen's-247th Battalion exhibition game for Tuesday night will not materialize as the students are unable to fill the date.

To make Sunday a day of rest for the busy housekeeper, without curtailing the quality of one's Sunday dinner, that important meal can practically be cooked the day before, especially if such dishes are selected which are just as good, if not better when reheated. Pot roast, stuffed veal, chicken or filled meat loaf, all are excellent if reheated, and potatoes or Italian pastes, noodles, etc., can be made ready for the finishing touches and fruit compotes, light deserts and salads, all prepared the day before will round out a most appetizing dinner. If you have the knack of systematising your work half an hour will be sufficient to heat and serve your dinner, and if you expect company this method of meeting the dinner question without the help of a maid, is especially to be recommended, as nothing is more agreeable for guests, than to see the hostess cool and unruffled, serve a meal without apparent effort.

Filled Meatloaf

Ingredients: Two pounds of chopped beef; one pound of chopped veal; one-half pound of sausage meat; one tablespoonful of minced onions; one egg; two rolled crackers; salt and pepper as needed.

Method: Beat the egg and combine with rest of ingredients kneading and mixing until all material is well blended, have an oblong bread tin greased then press meat into bottom and along sides of pan, now place the filling in center fitting it in well so as to have a thin layer of meat on all sides and press rest of meat on top of dressing, bake in moderate heat until meat is done, but do not get too brown or dry.

Ingredients for filling: One-half loaf of white bread; one small onion; one-half teaspoonful of powdered sage; one-quarter teaspoonful of salt; a liberal shaking of pepper; two eggs; one tablespoonful of butter; water as needed.

Method: Cut bread into slices and trim the outer crust, pour cold water on and as soon as soft press out the water and pick soaked bread apart, beat the eggs well, add seasoning and eggs to bread, heat butter in pan, pour in the dressing and let heat through, then use as directed.

Home-made Egg Noodles

Ingredients: Two eggs; three tablespoonfuls of cold water; a pinch of salt; flour as needed (about three cupfuls in all).

Method: Beat eggs well, add salt and water, then begin to stir in the flour gradually, when mass leaves sides of pan take onto floured board to make a rather stiff, but not elastic dough. Long kneading makes them tender. The amount of flour depends somewhat on the size of eggs, dough must be tender enough to roll very thin but not soft. Now divide the dough into three parts, roll each portion into a very thin sheet, lay on clean cloth or paper and let them dry, when dry lay the sheets one on top of the other, cut into quarters then place the sections with cut edge close together and begin to cut into strips about one-half inch wide. Toss these strips about to separate and let them get dry, then place aside until next day. When ready to cook, place in a kettle of slightly salted boiling water, cook rapidly for fifteen or twenty minutes, drain, let a little cold water run through, then pour some melted butter over and keep hot until ready to serve. A crown of toasted bread crumbs, or chopped parsley is an improvement.

Cure For Hives

Hives is a skin eruption usually due to some food toward which you have an idiosyncrasy. The medical name is urticaria. Wholesome food for one person may cause another to have hives, so no hard and fast diet can be prescribed to prevent it. The only wise method is to find out what food it is which causes this condition of the skin and then eliminate it from your food supply.

Hives is a frequent trouble among children and very often is the aftermath or accompaniment of a severe bilious condition. The proper treatment for relief is the use of purgatives. Care should be taken that the person having hives should not take cold, as that might drive the hives inward. In the latter case the simple ailment may become dangerous.

SPECIAL SERVICES ARE HELD IN CHURCHES

SIXTH ANNIVERSARY OF ALL SAINTS' CHURCH; WINDOW IS DEDICATED

Special Sermons by Professor Griffith Thomas D.D.

Bright and successful anniversary services were held at All Saints' Anglican Church on Sunday, the special preacher for the occasion being Rev. Prof. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D.D., of Wycliffe College, Toronto, who delivered two stirring and effective sermons. Special music was given by the choir. The anniversary, the sixth of the church, was used as the occasion on which to dedicate a memorial window, the gift of the late Benjamin Cooney. The window is of three panels and represents the Ascension. Lit up by the morning sunlight, it was the admiration of all who attended the morning service. The inscription is: To the Glory of God and in memory of Benjamin Cooney and his wife Margaret.

The congregation feel very proud of the beautiful addition to their church. The window is the largest of its kind to be found in this part of the country. Mr. Harry Long and Mrs. Mensies, executors of the estate of the late Mr. Cooney, have evinced much interest in carrying out Mr. Cooney's wishes in regard to the window.

Preceding the dedication service, the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., addressed the congregation and spoke appreciatively of Mr. Cooney's generosity to the church. In addition to the memorial window, he had given the chancel furniture, and the church had also been indebted to him for flowers on many occasions. Mr. Grobb added that Jordan Bros., knowing of Mr. Cooney's deep interest in flowers, had presented the flowers for the chancel. The congregation, he said, deeply appreciated the spirit which prompted the giver of the window, and "that we should always rejoice in anything that added to the beauty of our place of worship and was something that tended to life up our hearts to God."

The Rich Young Ruler

Matthew, 19.22: "And he went away sorrowful," was the text taken by Prof. Thomas for his morning discourse. The sermon centred about the rich young ruler's questioning of Jesus, the answer he received, and the effect it made on him. The preacher drew the conclusion that it was not the young man's wealth that made him turn away sorrowful; it was his refusal to accept Jesus. Such refusal many persons make today—they refuse to put Jesus Christ first.

The young man had expected something so different. St. Luke says he went away scowling. His sorrow was mixed with annoyance as if he would say: The idea of asking me to do this. "I have often wondered why he did not argue the point," said the preacher, "but he went away. Then comes the question: Why did he go away? Some people say he went away because he would not give up his money. I suggest that his riches was not the cause. Christ's words were 'Come and follow me.' He was asked to cast in his lot with the Disciples, to put Jesus Christ first."

Prof. Thomas said that many think the story is one only for the wealthy, but it was for those people who haven't a cent.

The cause of the refusal is the irregenerate heart. In the case of the rich young ruler it was a good man who was not good. He had the opportunity to say "I will" or "I won't." This man said "I won't." Quite likely some of his companions laughed at him and said, "you have came back to your senses." and perhaps when he died he had a fine funeral, and yet that man was never the same. His life was wrecked, for one thing, because he would not let the Lord Jesus Christ be the Lord of his life. There are many others like him—they have everything but Christ. Intentions, reflections, aspirations and resolutions are good in themselves but by themselves they are useless.

A Contrast

In his discourse at the evening service, Prof. Thomas placed as an example before a large congregation the man who went on his way rejoicing, the preacher relating the story of the Ethiopian who was baptized by Philip. He brought out the contrast in decisions arrived at by the subject of the morning sermon and the Ethiopian, and commended the latter's decision to his hearers in a forceful manner.

The anniversary services were marred by the tragic accident to James C. Blake, who was one of the active young men of the church. Rev. R. B. Grobb, in referring to his death, said: "Mr. Blake was one of the most faithful members of my Bible class. Last Sunday he led us in the singing and it was always a source of joy to me to see the interest he took in the class. The church has experienced a loss and I feel a personal loss. He has one brother at the front and another brother, Leonard, has been missing since last June, so you will see the way the family has been bereaved."

Mr. Grobb announced that the funeral will be held on Tuesday at 2.30 from the church.

REV. DR. SCOTT FINDS THAT WE ARE MUCH IN DEBT; SAYS WE SHOULD PAY IT

The First Anniversary of Trinity Church.

The first anniversary of the opening of Trinity Methodist Church was held yesterday and the congregation turned out in large numbers, both morning and evening to hear Rev. Dr. C. E. Scott. B.D., pastor of the Bridge Street Methodist Church, Belleville. The rev. doctor at the morning service complimented the congregation on the beautiful edifice which they had erected, and he felt gratified at being accorded the honor to take charge of their first anniversary services.

The text chosen by Dr. Scott for his morning sermon was taken from the 21st verse of the 22nd chapter of Matthew: "Render unto Caesar the things that are Ceasar's, and unto God the things that are God's."

This adroit answer to an adroit question given by the Pharisees to Our Lord in order to place him in a dilemma taught them to be loyal to God and their king. Speaking directly to the congregation, Dr. Scott told them that they were under great obligations. They looked like a prosperous people, but were in debt to the world, and he then went on to point out the manner in which they had incurred the indebtedness which, like honest men and women, they must pay.

Organized Government

Organized government had preserved the rights of the people and given them a protection. The spirit of democracy was necessary under the spirit of God. The people should foster democracy. The people's lives were not worth five cents if it was not for the law which secured life and property and furnished the authority to punish the transgressor. Therefore it was essential that they tax themselves to keep up the government that protected them from trespassing and tyranny, greed and selfishness, and if necessary lay down their lives to maintain your rights and liberty. In the olden days a man who did not uphold the government was a traitor and he was given a traitor's death and buried at the cross roads so that the people could walk over his grave. If all men who had fostered personal gain and individual ambition were traitors, then the cross roads would be cemeteries.

Debt for Great Association

The debt which the people owed for great association was dwelt on. The happiness accorded by the Romans to the Pharisees by introducing sport and amusement, thereby causing happiness to the conquered, was one. A comparison of this condition today was made. Every man, matter how destitute had someone trying to make him happy. The instinct for happiness was growing. Some of the greatest humor in the world was coming from our boys in the trenches, and it was the duty of all to lend a hand to the individual who is carrying a load.

Inheritance

We were indebted for the good that we had inherited. The people before him today were wearing garments worn only by Royalty a hundred years ago. Everything was easier. The news of the world was before them at the breakfast table, gathered from all parts of the world, and it cost two cents. Parents would tell us that it was easier to be good today than it was fifty years ago. In order to pay this debt it would be necessary for us to put a brand on sin so that the next generation would benefit by our follies and get in closer touch with Jesus Christ. The Hebrews at the time in which the text was written had paid more allegiance to Ceasar than to God and Jesus had laid bare their failings to them. The Jews were using the money that was pledged to God for speculation and Dr. Scott said: "You don't have to go a thousand miles to get a modern illustration." God wants you to recognize his right over your material goods, and has placed his stamp of ownershop on our lands and labor. The use of 5,000,000 lbs. of chewing gum in Canada last year was an illustration of the grotesque way we were using God's gifts.

Plan of Our Lives

The planning of our lives was another debt that we owed. The resolutions made as to what we would do in the coming year was referred to. Did we do anything for God? The guiding hand of the Lord was seen in fashioning the lives of men on land and on sea and it was our duty to render unto God the things that are God's.

Personality

There was something unique about all personalities. The diversity of character of two children of one family. Heredity could not explain it. The great diversity of character of children of the same school and the same environment does not explain personality. There was always a distinguishing mark that places God's claim on you. Sacrifice your ambitions and selfish ideas so that you may partly pay this debt that you owe. Be honest above all things. Honest to your fellow-man, for an honest man is the noblest work of God.

In closing, Dr. Scott appealed to the congregation to consider what God had done for them and to render unto God the things that are God's.

$25.00 FOR A LETTER

Can You Write One?

Thirteen Prizes To Be Awarded in a Letter Writing Competition.

Some years ago the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., offered a series of prises to residents of Ontario for the best letters describing cures wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Hundreds of letters were submitted in this competition, and yet there must have been thousands of other users of the pills who did not avail themselves of the opportunity to win a prize. To all these another letter writing competition is offered. Thousands of cures through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have never been reported. These will furnish the material for the letter to be written in this contest. There is no demand upon the imagination; every letter must deal with facts and facts only.

THE PRIZES:

The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., will award a prize of $25.00 for the best letter received on or before the 17th day of February, 1917, from residents of Ontario, on the subject: "Why I Recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." A prize of $10.00 will be awarded for the second best letter received: a prize of $5.00 for the third best letter, and ten prizes of $2.00 each for the next best ten letters.

THE CONDITIONS:

The cure or benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills described in the letter may be in the writer's own case, or one that has come under his or her personal observation.

More than one cure may be described in the letter, but every statement must be literally and absolutely true.

The letter should be no longer than is necessary to relate the benefit obtained from the remedy in the case described.

Every letter must be signed by the full name and correct address of the person sending it. If it describes the cure of some person other than the writer of the letter, it must also be signed by the person whose cure is described, as a guarantee of the truth of the statement made.

The writer of each letter must state the name and date of the paper in which he or she saw this announcement.

Fine writing will not win the prize unless you have a good case to describe. The strength of the recommendation and not the style of the letter will be the basis of the award.

It is understood that The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. shall have the right to publish any letter entered in this contest if they desire to do so whether it wins a prize or not.

The contest will close on February 17th, 1917, and the prizes will be awarded as soon as possible thereafter. Do not delay. If you know of a cure write your letter Now. Observe the above conditions carefully or your letter may be thrown out.

Address all letters as follows:

MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH PEOPLE PRESENT PASTOR WITH ADDRESS

Congregation Warmly Appreciate the Ten Years of Faithful and Successful Service of Rev. J. R. Webb---Special Service Commemorates Occasion.

Yesterday the congregation of the Murray Street Baptist Church celebrated the tenth anniversary of the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb. The morning service took the form of an expression of appreciation of the pastor's untiring efforts, kindly sympathy, and fidelity to the Word of God during the decade in which he has ministered to this people. The whole service was marked by a simplicity and dignity becoming to those who meet to thank God for an overflowing cup of blessing.

At 10:30 the officers of the church met for a brief season of prayer, after which they followed into the auditorium the pastor and Rev. H. E. Stillwell, the preacher for the occasion. Mr. Stillwell, a close friend of Mr. Webb for twenty years, paid a tribute to those qualites of the pastor which have endeared him to his people.

REV. J. R. WEBB

To get a conception of Mr. Webb's work here one had but to look around at the beautiful building erected under his leadership and the active and growing membership of the church. The speaker referred also to Mr. Webb's services to the denomination as a member of the Western Mission Board, the Grand Ligne Board, the Home Mission Board and the Finance Committe, services which naturally led other churches to covet such a pastor.

The Model Life.

The subject of Mr. Stillwell's sermon was "The Life Approved of Jesus." He based his remarks on the third chapter of the letter to the Colossians. The life approved of Jesus is the one in which the exalted deal of Christ life is accepted, the life in which all antagonistic tendencies are strangled, and in the third place the life approved of Jesus is the life which is consecrated to unselfish service.

Presented an Address.

After the sermon Dr. W. D. Scott, chairman of the board of deacons, addressing the pastor, assured him in a few well-chosen sentences of the gratitude of the church for the ministry of the past ten years and their joy in the assurance of a continuance of the work, in spite of recent calls to other and perhaps more important churches. He then called upon Mr. A. J. Raddon, church clerk, to read the following address:

Dear Pastor:

To few churches, in these days of hurry and change, is it given to enjoy an unbroken and increasingly useful pastorate of ten years. Such, however, has been the privilege of this church and congregation.

The seed of Christian fellowship, planted ten years ago and nourished by mutual sympathy, has grown into a hardy plant, blossomed into love, and borne fruit in Christian service. For, by that organizing ability which you possess in so large a measure, you have done much to co-ordinate the different phases of our work and have assisted materially in the extension of our activities. By the fearless stand you have taken upon public questions and moral issues you have set us an example in true manliness. By your teaching you have led us out into broader places of Christian knowledge and usefulness; and by the cheerfulness with which you have entered into our joys and the unfailing sympathy with which you have shared our sorrows, you have won a large place in our hearts.

We wish, therefore, on this your tenth anniversary, to express our gratitude for your devotion and sacrifices on our behalf and to assure you of the fact that passing years but increase our affection and our debt to yourself and Mrs. Webb.

Peterborough, January, 1917.

Signed.

Benj. R. Mathews, Wm. Aldridge, Geo. Cochrane, W. D. Scott, R. E. Harding, V. Eastwood, C. B. Routley, P. S. White, Thos. Distin, H. G. Webber, T. G. Gillespie, R. C. Read, Deacons.

The address was beautifully illuminated, bound in blue morocco and enclosed in a mahogany case. After a few words of appreciation by the pastor, the congregation sang "Blest be the tie that binds."

CHURCH UNION

Is Discussed by Rev. R. G. Peeve.r

At George Street Methodist Church last evening Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., replied to several arguments used against the consummation of church union, first referring to the Bonne Entente between the two provinces at the present day, by which it was desired through a common understanding to create a better atmosphere between the provinces, to remove distrust and break down the old prejudice and unite all in the common brotherhood. [illegible] was the desire of the true patriot [illegible] the true Canadian.

Mr. Peever referred to the accomplishments of the Committee of One Hundred, in which the temperance question had been lifted out of the old channels and a great victory won for the morals of the Canadian people. Thus, by this spirit of get-together, the people of Ontario and Quebec would be welded together so that there would be no French-Canadians and English-Canadians—all would be Canadians.

The preacher believed that there were evidences of the desire for a similar atmosphere in the Christian Church. He told of how last week a committee had been appointed by the Vatican to look into the question of Angican Orders which would possibly result in a better understanding, and of how in Great Britain last year there was a get-together movement to make the Church adequate to the great opportunities of the present time, and of how in Canada similar evidences were to be seen between the three great churches.

On the non-success of church union in the past, Mr. Peever said God had allowed it. But he had no changed his mind, neither had he made a mistake. All great movements of God must wait the mental and spiritual preparedness of the people.

Mr. Peever discussed some of the so-called difficulties in the path of church union.

FOLLOW BATTLE SCARRED LEADERS

Let Us Help

Let us go in at 1,000 strong and help the boys at the front. Some men asked, "Why should I go to the front? What have I got to do with the British Empire; I am a Canadian." The speaker then elemiated all the excuses and then took up the answer from a Canadian's patriotic standpoint, showing the obligations that Canada was under to Great Britain from 1775 to the present day. The protection that the Motherland had given us, and the promises made by our ancestors, which we should not go back on. In 1812 and 1837 fights had been made for the retention of the present form of Canada's government and if our forefathers fought for it, surely it was no more than right that we should be worthy of them.

It was a million times better that we lost the war in 1812 than lose in 1917, because the worst that could happen then was that Canada would be part of the U.S., which was a democratic form of government, second only to our own, while if we lost in this present war we will lose everything that is dear to us and become a nation of serfs rather than a nation of free men.

In some parts of Canada, men have stated that they would fight if Canada was invaded. That was all the old military regulations called for, but Canada had changed. At that time Canada was going along under the protecting hand of the Motherland, while now we are a young nation. We are now part proprietors of the British Empire, and proprietorship brings responsibility.

What Would They Do

Mr. Graham placed the supposition before them that the city of Peterborough was invaded by a thousand marauders; they were on the outskirts of the city, ready to attack. What would you do? How many of you would crawl under the barn? Out you would go, every one of you. Perhaps some might say, "Don't be in a hurry; wait till they get here". Another might say, 'Wait till they get to the back kitchen;" another, "Let Bill Smith and my cousins get after them." This was not the spirit of a true Canadian. Get out and fight!

The young man who is eligible and does not fight for Canada is in the same position as the man who would not protect his home. He is a crawler. He might go to the United States. Canada is the most reveted part of the British Empire and if they valued their liberty they would go to Flanders and help the men now in the trenches. There was no excause. Should Canada remain neutral at any time when the principles that we value so highly are in danger. Every instinct in us should force us to go and help our brother nation.

Our Freedom

It was a wonderful thing to belong to the British Empire. Every individual right was guaranteed and the freedom of the whole world assured. The British drumbeats circle the world and no matter where you go the nation's martial strains are to be heard. It was a mean thing to have citizenship and not fight for it. The law of compensation must come. We must make some sacrifice in the cause of right.

Referring to the peace proposals, Britain would say how the war would end and not be dictated to. Canada had promised 500,000 men and must give them. It was up to Peterborough to give another battalion. If you were in Germany you would not be asked to volunteer, but told to go. Free service was on trial in Canada. Hon. Mr. Graham appeal to the men to do their part.

A 500 Club

Lt.-Col. Ackerman, in closing the meeting, told of the formation of a Five Hundred Club in Peterborough and Hundred Clubs in the country. Every member guaranteed to bring a recruit.

Ideas of Peter Veregin Made Doukhobors Wealthy

Peter Veregin, a Doukhobor, came to Canada in 1903, just after a 15-year exile in Siberia. For a time he endured the hardships of a pioneer's life on the prairies. Thirteen years later he lived for the time being in a suite in the Fort Garry hotel, and headed a community of 7,000 Doukhobors, possessing property value at about $2,000,000. Although he says the idea is as old as the hills, Mr. Veregin claims credit for promoting this community idea which has proved such a wonderful success. As a young man he endeavored to get his brother Doukhobors to band together in Russia and form a community settlement, but he alleges that the Russian government viewed his efforts with suspicion, and, regarding it as a political offence, sentenced him to 15 years' imprisonment in Siberia. On obtaining his release he joined a colony of his kinsmen who had located in Saskatchewan, and he directed all their efforts along community lines—the one working for the good of the whole. By 1916 there were three settlements—at Veregin, Saskatchewan, one in Alberta, and one at Brilliant, B.C.

THEY ARE RICH WITHOUT GOLD

PEOPLE WHO HAVE REFUSED TO ACCEPT PROFITABLE NOTORIETY.

Many recipients of the coveted V. C. have in the past had tempting offers from music-hall managers to go on the stage and tell their tale and "fight their battles o'er again." A few have succumbed, but the rule has been refusal.

The famous Jack Binns of wireless fame, who kept the S.O.S. signal going when the liner was sinking, might have made a fortune many times over if he would have consented to exploit his bravery. But he wouldn't. He said: "I'm a wireless operator, not a music-hall artiste. I'll stick to my job." And, to his lasting honor, he did.

At one of the big exhibitions in America the enthusiastic Scots built a replica of the birthplace of Robbie Burns, the national poet. Then they sent a request to a certain old lady in Scotland, who claims descent from the poet, to come over and sit in the house as a bit of "real local color."

Needless to say, the golden bait was a fine one, especially to an old woman who had never been overburdened with "this world's gear." But she said "Na, na. I'm no gawn tae be stared at by a lot o' silly gowks wha tak' me for a new kin' o' wild beast. I reckon I'll stay in Auld Scotland." And that is what she did.

At the other end of the social scale Royalties who have seen trouble have often been importuned by publishers to pen their experiences. Sometimes the bait has been taken, with a consequent loss of caste.

Some years ago the present King of Spain's mother, Queen Christina, was offered a "king's ransom" by a Yankee editor if she would only consent to allow her son, then under age, to sign an article which would be written for him. She refused, of course.

The Dignified Course.

An army examiner once had a candidate before him who apparently was unable to answer the simplest question. At last the examiner lost his temper and, with sarcastic emphasis, lost on the youth before him said:

"Suppose, sir, that you were a captain in command of a company of infantry; that in your rear was an impassable abyss; that on either side of you towered perpendicular rocks of untraversable heights; while before you stood the enemy, a hundred men to each one of yours. What, sir, would you do in this emergency?"

"Sir," said the aspirant to military honors, "I should resign."—Pearson's Weekly.

The Old Man and the Young Witness

The case, as a matter of fact, was of quite a trivial nature; but, for all that, the lawyer, who happened to be a young man, and ambitious, determined to get at any rate some kudos out of it for himself.

So when a diminutive, ragged little urchin took his stand in the witness-box, he decided to make the most of an opportunity and establish a reputation for brilliance at that small boy's expense.

"You say you are fifteen years old?" he scornfully inquired. "Have you got an occupation of any sort?"

"You just loaf about—stand at street corners, and so forth?"

"That's about it, mister."

"No," replied the youth, with lazy indifference.

"Hum! And what does your father do?"

"The old man? Oh, 'e don't do much." And the boy smiled as he drawled out the words.

"You mean," said the lawyer, "that your father is like you—a lazy, worthless, good-for-nothing idler; one of those men who——"

"Maybe 'e is—maybe 'e ain't," interrupted the witness. "Anyway, you can ask 'im yourself. 'E's sittin' there on the jury!"

The Aurora Borealis.

The aurora borealis, or northern dawn, is an electrical phenomenon which in high northern latitudes, especially in winter, illuminates the skies with streamers of light. As the streams of light have a tremendous motion, they are called in many places the "merry dancers." They assume many shapes and a variety of colors, from a pale red or yellow to a deep red or blood color, and in the northern latitudes they serve to illuminate the earth and cheer the gloom of the long winter nights. The connection of the aurora displays with the disturbance of the magnetic needle is now regarded as an ascertained fact.

LEAVES SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND

PRINCIPAL GARDINER, OF BRANTFORD, RETIRES AFTER LONG SERVICE.

Mr. Herbert F. Gardiner, Principal of the Ontario School for the Blind, Brantford, has resigned his position to devote the closing years of his life to literary and other congenial pursuits.

Mr. Gardiner, in severing his connection with the School for the Blind, states, in a letter to the Minister of Education: "Work for the blind has been to me a labor of love. I am pleased with and proud of the improvements that have been made to the buildings and appliances of the school during my term of office—with special satisfaction I refer to the point-print textbooks and music which are to a large extent the result of the work of my own head and hands. In severing my official relations with the school, I shall not cease to be interested in its prosperity, and I shall always be delighted to hear of the success of its pupils. I am pleased to testify to the uniform courtesy shown me by yourself and the members of your official staff in our frequent consultations on matters relating to the management and improvement of the school; and I have to thank you for the kind interest you have always taken in the blind, and for the liberal support you have given from year to year to measures which I have recommended for the amelioration of their condition."

Mr. Gardiner has issued an address to the pupils and ex-pupils of the school of which for so many years he has been the head, in which he wishes them a kindly farewell and impresses upon them the necessity and the value of the training given in the school.

The Minister of Education has placed Mr. Clarkson W. James, Secretary of the Department of Education, temporarily in charge.

MEAT SUBSTITUTES

One Way to Serve Wholesome Food in Tasty Manner

It has been well said that it was not a study of what the family wanted to eat that was needed, but a study of what the family ought to eat and how to get them to eat it. The latter part of the problem might be easily solved if the food were more attractively seasoned and served. To say to people that they were eating too much meat and then to serve in its place an unsavory concoction, even though it be equal to the meat in food value, would not be convincing. It is unreasonable for the housewife to ask the family to accept as a substitute for a favorite dish one which is not especially palatable, and it might be added that the less the substitution is discussed the less likely are there to be objections. Europeans are much more familiar with cheeses and their uses than Canadians, and many travelers find their prejudices against cheese disappearing as they taste the dishes prepared by foreign cooks.

Cut 3 large slices of bread, measure 3 tablespoons butter, 5 tablespoons cheese, 1¼ cups milk, and 1½ eggs.

Butter the slices of bread and cut into inch squares. Fill a buttered baking dish with alternate layers of the bread and grated cheese. Moisten thoroughly with a mixture made of the milk and eggs, seasoned with the salt, pepper and mustard. Bake in a moderate oven until the mixture sets, like custard, and brown it on top.

"Remember, the eyes of the nation are on you," exclaimed the constituent.

"I know it," replied Senator Sorghum. "And the nation's getting more acutely discerning every day. The time is gone when a man can assume an impressive pose and get by as an optical illusion."

There seem to be a good many misdeals in the game of matrimony.

Boil hard fifteen minutes, adding the juice of half a lemon for every two cups of sugar. Roll the cans in hot water before putting in the apples. Fill at once with the boiling syrup. Set in a bake pan of hot water, and then in a hot oven. When the syrup is again at the boiling point, seal immediately. If larger apples are used it is possible to can them the same way, only quarter them first.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.
N.B.— Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.

The Pastor—So God has sent you two more little brothers, Polly?

Polly (brightly) — Yes, and He knows where the money's coming from. I heard Daddy say so.

CURLING

There were no scheduled curling games at the rink on Saturday night but a few scratch matches were indulged in.

The inter-rink games scheduled for tonight are:—

Best vs. Matthews.
J. H. Ferguson vs. Dela Fosse.
Waddell vs. Taylor
Campbell vs. Giroux
McDermid vs. Brightman

The competition for the group in the Ontario Tankard will open at the curling rink tomorrow afternoon at 1.30.

Three rinks of Lakefield curlers are playing a friendly game with Peterborough at the rink this afternoon.

When George V. Was a Boy.

George V., who was crowned King of England in the grand old abbey of Westminster, had rather strange school days. From the time he was 12 years old his school was a ship, and many of his teachers were naval officers. Sometimes his schoolroom rolled so much that it was impossible to read or write, to sit or stand comfortably, and this was "very trying to the temper." But whether the weather was windy or rainy, calm or rough, "school went on like clockwork," and the Prince soon learned to adapt himself to changes. Their first school ship was the old man-of-war Britannia, lying in harbor at the little Devonshire seaport of Dartmouth. There the Prince lived exactly like the other "naval cadets," as the boys training for officers are called. They studied and they drilled, writes Emily P. Weaver in St. Nicholas. They learned to handle ropes, shift sails, and use carpenter's tools. They darned their own socks and mended their own clothes. If they got into a quarrel (which, I fancy, was not very often), they were left to fight it out themselves. In cricket and other sports they learned to "play the game" and to take a beating manfully. They worked hard enough to find a real zest in holidays, and lived so plainly that when they went on shore they often spent some of their pocket money like the other boys, on tarts and cakes. In 1879, after two years on the stay-at-home old Britannia, they were promoted to the cruiser Bacchante, and for the next three years hard work and some "roughing it" was sweetened by plenty of fun and change. Their two long voyages in the Bacchante, taken together, made a journey of over fifty-four thousand miles, during which they landed in many different countries and saw many strange sights.

Willing To Tell.

Sometimes it is a pleasure to answer questions, even if the questioner may put them in an unpleasant way.

"What do you do for a living?" asked a lawyer, frowning horribly at a hatchet faced young man who was undergoing cross-examination.

"I, sir," answered the witness, hastily diving into his side pocket, "am the agent for Dr. Korker's celebrated corn and bunion destroyer, greatest remedy of the age, used by all the crowned heads of Europe, never known to fail to remove the most obdurate corns in less than twenty-four hours or money cheerfully refund"— Here the court interfered.

Metals Active, Reports Humorist.

The Brazier, published by the Canadian Scottish troops at the front, says in its "market report": Metals have been quite active, especially steel, lead, brass, copper, and aluminum. Howitzers soared. Shrapnel broke suddenly and nearly caused a panic. Whizz bangs are very lively. A quantity of first-class bayonet steel was traded to Germany for a supply of live and dead stock."

Three million song-birds are killed every year for their plumage.

OLD "MAC" RETIRES

AFTER 30 YEARS, FAMOUS G. C. I. CARETAKER GIVES UP POST.

"If any of you gentlemen desired to put Mac out, you have put Mac in," was David MacGeorge's cryptic jest when a new janitor was appointed at the Galt Collegiate Institute, of which MacGeorge had been caretaker for more than 30 years.

In rewarding MacGeorge's long and faithful service, the trustees, intentionally or otherwise, had appointed a brother Scot, and they laughed heartily at MacGeorge's pawky humor and his national pride of birth.

"Old Mac" will remain as florist and landscape gardener, and one hopes that still another generation of the G. C. I. will admire his flowers, scan his poetry, and listen to the school's anecdotal past.

Born in Scotland, he married a Highland lassie, and, ultimately, crossed the sea to Canada and to Galt, then the auld Scotch toun, and now a city.

In April, 1864, he became caretaker of "Tassie's Grammar School," known in later years as the G.C.I.

Eminent Canadians have graduated from the old G. C. I. in MacGeorge's day, and, according to the loyal old man, few schools, if any, have produced more useful ones. In peace and in war, they have played a creditable part.

Years ago, MacGeorge found a very young lad with torn knickerbockers, and, with deft needle, the caretaker-gardener-poet - theologian stitched him up in time for his classes.

Mac can relate schoolboy tales by the mile, and the subjects of these reminiscences have affection for the relator.

A pailful of new Canadian coppers went to MacGeorge on his thirtieth anniversary, the students proceeding on the theory that a true philosopher would prefer bonnie cents to sordid siller, even if he was Scotch. Then, too, the total was a tidy one.

Mac has evolved a beautiful rose, he has written books, and he has angled for bass in the Grand River at the foot of the G. C. I. hill these many years.

Of his six children, five have homes of their own. His busy, rational life is written on his face in lines benign. May his declining years be tinged with the mellow light that heralds the approaching eventide.

Bullets Spoil Garden.

A rather unique action has been instituted at Ottawa against the Government in the Exchequer Court, two French-Canadians claiming $40,000 and $10,000 respectively. They allege that since the war began their market gardening business has been destroyed on account of a daily storm of bullets ricochetting across from the Rockliffe Ranges, where the School of Musketry is located.

A Scheme That Failed.

Mother—What are you doing, Harry?

Harry—I'm countin'. You told me when I got mad to count a hundred.

Mother—Yes; so I did.

Harry—Well, I've counted 237, and I'm madder'n when I started.

Unspeakable.

Anxious Author—What do you think of this play?

Manager—You had better send it to a movie concern.

Anxious Author—Why?

Manager—Words cannot express the sadness of it.

YELLOW PERIL NOW BANNED

HEARST PAPERS CEASE TO CIRCULATE IN THE DOMINION.

Many Canadians have felt in recent years that in a country which wished to keep the minds of the people decent it was a pity to allow the circulation of a certain type of American yellow journal. However, nothing was done to prevent the importation of the contaminating papers, as our people do not like to take steps that look like restricting the liberty of the press. Even after the war began American yellow journals that systematically attacked and misrepresented the Empire to which the Dominion belongs were allowed the privileges of our mails, though some of them went so far as to use mourning borders after the death of Sir Roger Casement. The Hearst papers did not see anything worthy of death in the act of a traitor who had caused the death of fellow Irishmen in Germany because they would not join the Teuton armies. But when these papers began to garble British official despatches they went too far, and the ban has now been placed upon the circulation of all the Hearst papers in the Dominion. For the good of the newspaper standards of Canada, it is to be hoped that the ban will be continued even after the end of the conflict.

"The Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, Postmaster-General of Canada, has issued a warrant under the authority of an order-in-Council, No. 94, assented to on the 6th day of November, 1914, under and in virtue of the provisions of section 6 of the War Measures Act, 1914, whereby the following newspapers known as the Hearst papers), have been refused the privilege of the mails in Canada and are prohibited from circulation in Canada in any way—New York American, New York Sunday American, New York Journal, Boston American, Boston Sunday American, Chicago Examiner, Chicago Sunday Examiner, Chicago American, San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco Sunday Examiner, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles Sunday Examiner, Los Angeles Herald, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta American.

'Owing to the garbling of telegrams, the British authorities decided to cut off all facilities for the transmission of news to the International News Service and all Hearst papers, and upon examination of these papers here similar action is being taken in Canada. It is considered desirable that all relations with Hearst should cease, owing to the danger of his papers causing ill-feeling between the United States and Canada.

"Under the terms of the order-in-Council above quoted, no person in Canada shall be permitted on and after Saturday, the 11th day of November, 1916, to be in possession of such newspapers or of any issues thereof already published or hereafter published, and further, any person in possession of any such newspapers shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or imprisonment for any term not exceeding five years, or to both fine and imprisonment."

War Crosses.

War crosses are far older than war medals; the latter are, in fact, a comparatively modern innovation. The oldest of these decorations is the Austrian Cross of Gold, and curiously enough it bears a similar inscription (but in Latin) to our Victoria Cross. The first Gold Cross was awarded by the Empress Maria Theresa in 1757. The next oldest European battle cross is the Russian Cross of St. George, which is of gold with a fine medallion of St. George slaying the dragon. It was founded by the Empress Catherine II. in 1769. The French Cross of the Legion of Honor was instituted by Napoleon in 1802, at the time when he was First Consul. Germany's famous—or infamous—Iron Cross was instituted by Emperor Frederick William III. of Prussia in the year 1813. The cross is of iron, but it rather heavily edged or bordered with silver.

ANECDOTES OF FAMOUS MEN

The death of "Buffalo Bill" severs another link with American pioneer days. The extraordinary skill with the rifle from which he received his best-known title was the least of his achievements. He graduated in the Kansas of half a century ago, which was an extremely hard school, served with distinction through the Civil War, and it was not until after these episodes that he earned his nickname by killing 4,280 buffaloes in eighteen months. This feat was achieved in connection with a contract he held from the promoters of the Kansas Pacific Railroad to provide meat for the construction gangs.

But all thes things are long since forgotten. His most enduring claim to fame, certainly so far as the present generation are concerned, is his leadership of the famous Wild West Show, with which he toured the world. There are people living in Canada today who saw the veteran hunter and fighter of Indians in countries thousands of miles away from their present location. The news of his death will come as a personal shock, recalling memories of boyhood days which had apparently been completely buried by the passing of the years.

To many boys the Colonel was a positive inspiration. His tall, soldierly figure, his manliness in so many appealing forms of action, his heroic record, all combined to make him a veritable Bayard to the younger generation among his vast audiences. That his influence was good is a matter that admits of no question. If it encouraged some young harum-scarums to fly from the monotony of Europe to the happy hunting grounds of this side of the Atlantic, so much the better for this side of the Atlantic. The fact that most of these Cody-inspired immigrants to Canada and the United States have settled down to the hunting of dollars instead of Indians does not affect that pont at all.

PRIVATE WHO BEHAVED LIKE A GREAT LEADER

Victoria Cross For Lancashire Lad's Decision and Courage—Wonderful Feat Modestly Told

This is the story by Private James Hutchinson, a Lancashire lad, of an attack on the German trenches. After describing the terrible rush over the bullet-strewn No Man's Land, he says: "Soon afterward I reached the German trenches, quite breathless, but was soon through a gap in the wire, which our artillery had cut for us. The first thing I saw was a big German firing down the trench and knocking chalk off the side. When he had finished his little game I rushed around the traverse and put my bayonet through him.

His Blood Was Up!

"There was another Boche there, and when he saw me he commenced to run toward a dug-out, but seemed to slip back a step, so I promptly got him through the head. Another was resting on one knee, and started shouting for mercy, but he paid the same penalty. I next went around another traverse, and found three more Germans, and they all met with the same fate, either with the bayonet or rifle bullet. Hurrying round the next traverse I saw about seven Huns throwing hand grenades at the lads who had not got in the trenches, but were fighting along the top.

Covered the Retreat

"There was one German left to guard the traverse, and he tried to throw a hand grenade at me, but could not get it ready in time, so I fired a round at him and hit him. I was dazed for a second and did not know whether to rush him or not, so I shouted to my party to get round the traverse. I then reloaded and kept guard while the officers and men behind threw bombs at the enemy. A little later we got word to retire, so I kept guard while my party got clear of the trenches, and then mounted the ladder and made my way back, covering the enemy while the lads got the wounded in. Of the sixty-three men in the whole raid twenty-one were reported missing, twenty-one got back wounded, and twenty-one answered the roll call. After the shelling had subsided I was able to get back to the village, and the next day had an interview with the Major General in charge of the division. An officer took my name and number and said that I would soon have something to wear on my breast." That something is the Victoria Cross—with its inscription, "For Valor."

In a remarkable 584 mile road run from Springfield, Mass., to Montreal made last week by Edgar Buck and Howard Passmore, in a motorcycle with side car, a new record of 19 hours 27 minutes was established. Although very much of the trip took them over very rough roads through the Adirondacks, the former record was beaten by 39 miles. The riders used an Indian machine equipped with Goodyear Bluestreak tires.

SOME BORROWED WORDS.

The English language is always growing. Words that were once in common use become obsolete and are dropped; new words are coined or borrowed from other languages, changed and adopted, or adopted without change in form. For example, "Kultur" is a word which has found its way into the English language. Everybody seems to know that there is a difference between "culture" and "kultur"—and a difference not merely of spelling.

Britain's sixteenth century war with Spain was responsible for several words being added to the language. "Embargo" and "contraband" are two of them, while to Britain's campaigns in the Low Countries we are indebted for such words as "freebooter," "furlough," "cashier," "sconce" and "domineer."

"Forlorn hope" is a military phrase borrowed from the Dutch "verloren hoop," hope meaning troop, and although "comrade" is a Spanish word, it came to us through the soldiers who fought in the Low Countries.

The word "khaki" was not used in the way it is today until the Boer war. The term "die hards" came to us from the Battle of Albuera in 1811 in the Peninsular War, when Colonel Inglis, addressing his men, cried, "Die hard, my lads, die hard!"

The term "free lance," now meaning a literary man who is in no one's employ, is a relic of the Crusaders, when companies of knights roved from place to place, offering their services to any one who would pay for them.

Only one-third or less of what a man positively knows is the truth.

Any man may be justified in blowing his own horn, but not in going on a "toot."

WAR PICTURES AT THE ROYAL

WITH RUSSIANS AT FRONT MAKES EXCELLENT BILL.

"With the Russians at the Front" is the film that runs tonight and tomorrow at the Royal Theatre. As usual the house is packed at every performance, for beyond a doubt the Royal gives one of the best shows in the country for the price. Even Toronto can produce nothing in this line to excel it as a place of entertainment.

The Russian war pictures were taken by a staff artist of a Chicago paper by special permission of the Czar, who has inspected and approved of them. They show the vast Russian army engaged in actual warfare at different points on the far flung battle line, and cannot fail to appeal to anyone interested in the war.

The performance closes with pictures from the million dollar serial, "The Scarlet Runner," and with several excellent comedies.

St. John Ambulance Course

Dr. Harvey will be unable to give his lecture on home nursing tonight at the Y.W.C.A., but it will be given Tuesday night at 8.30.

CHOIR OF MALE VOICES AT KNOX CHURCH.

Singing by a male choir was a unique and interesting part of the services at Knox Church last evening. Familiar hymns were sung enthusiastically by the choir and the congregation caught the spirit of the occasion, the result being all that could be desired.

The soloists were Mr. V. Morphet and Mr. H. J. McCannan.

MUSIC'S MISSION.

Subject of Mrs. Johnston's Address Tonight.

Mrs. Blanche Johnston, one of the oldest women officers of the Salvation Army in Canada, was the chief attraction at the S.A. Temple yesterday, and despite the inclement weather, splendid crowds gathered to greet her. Her presence in the Sunday School was the symbol for great rejoicing and her afternoon address in the auditorium was listened to with rapt attention and enjoyed very much.

The evening service was a splendid one and Mrs. Johnston's effort was brilliant and deep spiritual truths were imparted and had telling effect on every listener.

Her address bristled with anecdotes of an illustrative character, and revealed the truths splendidly.

Tonight Mrs. Johnston will give an addres on Music's Mission and a good program, instrumental and vocal, will be rendered by the musical side of the Temple Corps.

George Street Church

The Epworth League of George Street Church will pay a friendly visit to the young people of Murray Street Church this evening. Mid week service Wednesday night. DIRECTORS RE-ELECTED

Annual Meeting of L.L. Cemetery Company.

The annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company was held this afternoon in the Council Chamber. Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., president, presided. The following shareholders were present: Messrs. T. H. G. Denne, W. G. Morrow, E. H. D. Hall, T. A. S. Hay, J. J. Howden, Geo. Duncan, Wm. Langford, B. F. Ackerman, E. A. Peck, A. Sawers, A. L. Amys, W. Menzies, D. Drummond and others.

Secretary-Treasurer's Report.

Mr. E. A. Peck presented the following financial statement, showing a balance to credit for the year of $3129.31.

Report to Directors

Your directors beg to report that during the past year no very expensive work was undertaken, but only general, careful superintendence exercised in an effort to bring, if possible, the cemetery grounds into a yet more commendable condition; nevertheless, some improvements have been made, such as the new stone steps leading to the display fountain, improvements in the south greenhouse, painting the inner side of the iron fence, and rip-rapping on the eastern front of the cemetery to prevent erosion of the banks, which, with the former like work done, has had an excellent effect. Other work was directed to be undertaken, if possible, but was not, on account of the difficulty in obtaining labor. Probably the most important proposal was the building of a serpentine driveway from the south gate along the lower part of the hill, about five or six hundred feet in length. No doubt this will be taken up by the new board during the current year, and, it is hoped, completed.

Your directors beg you to remember that the following permanent works have been executed within the period of about nine or ten years, costing approximately as follows:—New gateways and iron fences on stone, concrete and foundations, $5,000, superintendent's dwelling house and company's office with fire-proof vault, $5,000; brick stable and shed, $2,000; receiving vault under chapel, $1,000; two greenhouses, $1,000; total, $14,000. It may be noticed that lands to the value of at least $10,000 have been reclaimed by the removal of the wooden barns, stables and sheds from and the levelling up and terracing of the grounds and from the ground where the old vault stood; also all betterments having been quite or nearly completed, that from this time forward the attention of the board may be solely directed to efficient maintenance.

It has been urged that the company should, out of income alone, maintain the cemetery, and that capital from the sale of lots should not be trenched upon. In the future that probably can be accomplished, although in the past it has been necessary to resort to it. Within thirty years there has been a much greater demand than previously for lots in the cemetery, which are readily taken, and the value has doubled or trebled in that period. The increased revenue from such lots as have been sold for the period mentioned has more than equalled the capital used. This has come about. It is perfectly clear, from the large expenditures that have been made by the company in improving and beautifying the cemetery in many ways, and providing permanent additions which have enhanced the demand. The board may be considered to have borrowed the capital for these purposes, and when we consider the wonderful advance in charm and attractiveness today, the partial use of capital from year to year in the past has been in the best interests of the company, and will, the board believes, be approved.

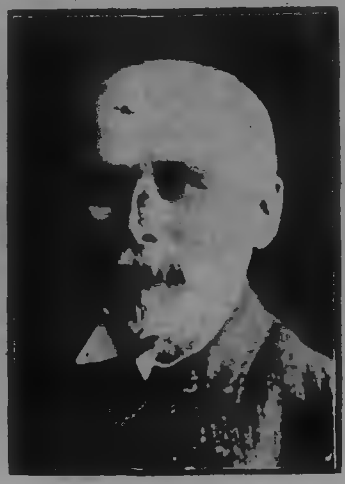
At the close of 1916 the company owned city debentures to the value of $15,417.31, as investment for perpetual maintenance. There was at the same time and is now to the credit of the company in the bank $3,129.31, and there are book debts to the amount of $2,000 owing to the company. The company will therefore be in a position to make further investments for maintenance to the value of at least $3,000 which, if done, will increase the reserve for this purpose, to $18,546.62.

During the twenty-eight years that your present president has been on the board of management (sixteen years as president), he and the board and lot owners have observed a wonderful transformation in the grounds, which, from a rough, undrained, uninviting and unfinished character are now, in summer time, adorned with artistic flower beds, interspersed with vistas of rich, well-trimmed lawns, with shade and ornamental trees in great variety, and fine driveways, the whole giving a harmonious symmetery and beauty unsurpassed and probably unequalled in Ontario. Your directors are proud of what, by their efforts and the support and co-operation of the shareholders, has been achieved.



W. H. MOORE, K.C.
Twenty-eight years on the Board of Management of the Little Lake Cemetery Co., and this afternoon elected president for the seventeenth term.

Superintendent's Report.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I beg to submit a report of work done in your cemetery during the past year.

A block of land in section O containing about 50 burial plots of 116 superficial feet each was graded and seeded and will be in a condition for burials the coming season. It was my intention to proceed with this work as soon as possible, as this is practically the only ground available for family plots at present. It will be speedily taken up.

It was the intention of your board to open the piece of ground known as section L, but owing to delay in getting a survey and the difficulty of obtaining laborers at the wages paid it was impossible to undertake it in any case.

The open drain running through the southeast section of your cemetery was thoroughly cleaned and banks sloped back last year, but owing to the nature of the ground and the action of the frost it had to be all done again this year. Nothing but a large tile or cement drain will answer to carry off the water that accumulates in the single grave section.

The set of stone steps leading to the display fountain at the entrance was taken out and replaced with cement 12 feet wide, which will be found of great benefit and also add to the appearance of the approach.

It was found necessary to overhaul the south greenhouse and rebuild the old wooden benches. When at this work I excavated under part of the centre bench and built a cement pit for the storage of soil and pots, which will not only be a great convenience to the florist, but will be a saving on pots as there is always a considerable loss from frost if piled outside or in a damp shed.

The inside of the iron fence surrounding the west side of the cemetery was given a coat of paint. This work should be completed in the spring.

Owing to the high water in the river during the past season, not much of the riprapping was done, but as this work is absolutely necessary to save your banks, it should be proceeded with as soon as possible.

The coping around the Nicholls plot was removed, and a cement footing put in and the coping reset. The plot was also stripped of sod and regraded, giving it a much improved appearance.

All of which I respectfully submit.

F. WISE,
Superintendent.

Messrs. F. J. A. Hall and T. A. Quartermaine were re-appointed auditors, on a motion of Messrs. Denne and Hay.

Election of Directors.

The election of directors was then proceeded with. Mr. J. J. Lundy asked that his name be not placed in nomination as a director. The shareholders declined to accept Mr. Lundy's resignation, and the president was, on motion, instructed to cast one balot for the old directors, as follows: W. H. Moore, K.C., T. H. G. Denne, W. G. Morrow, T. A. S. Hay, A. Stevenson, E. H. D. Hall, J. J. Lundy, Dr. Burnham, B. Shortly.

General Business

President Moore asked for suggestions as to improvements to the cemetery.

Mr. A. Stevenson suggested that repairs be made to the chapel.

The meeting adjourned and the directors met.

ENGAGED COUPLES ON TWO WEEKS' HOLIDAY

Quarrelling Inevitable, Argues a Woman—Better Try a Week-end —The Reasons

Madge Arthur suggests: Perhaps on the whole, it isn't wise for engaged couples to take holidays together. A summer holiday lasts too long. A week-end might be satisfactory, but a fortnight or a month gives too much scope. It takes Dick quite a couple of days to get over the delight of having Dorothea all to himself, and thus a week-end proves satisfactory; for by the time he is prepared to quarrel the holiday is over. It is different with a longer holiday. Maybe it rains on the third day, and the boarding house drawing room is full of visitors, who eye Dick and his sweetheart because they sit very close toegther. Or they go out, and it rains, which makes Dorothea very cross.

Jealousy and Anger

"Oh," says Dick to himself savagely, in the shelter of his bed room, "if that's her temper, it's just as well to know it before marriage!" Naturally, the unattached spinsters on the promenade and sands will admire Dick in his holiday clothes, and Dick, having an eye for all feminine beauty, will observe this attention. Do you suppose Dorothea is going to put up with this? She will sigh, and quote the verses about men being "deceivers ever," and ten to one, if words pass, but that Dick will say that she is "unreasonably jealous."

Faults and Tests

Nobody's disposition is perfect, and constant companionship is the surest way to discover failings. Dick is disappointed to find that Dorothea is not an angel, and when Dorothea sees that Dick has blemishes, the revelation for the time does not please her. The quarrel comes and rages fiercely—so fiercely that soon after it is over each is anxious to be friendly again. "I suppose I was in the wrong," Dorothea will say to herself, full of remorse. While Dick, supposing that Dorothea is in tears of anguish because of his cruelty, feverishly awaits the moment when he can rush to her and beg forgiveness.

When the first joy of the holiday is over, each likes to test the other, in order to discover what kind of a life marriage will prove for them. No doubt Dick has made up his mind to be master. Dorothea may have decided not to be under her husband's thumb. So Dick's experiments are not likely to be a success.

Every time a man hears his name mentioned in connection with a political office he imagines that the world is growing better.

SUCCESS TO SOUTH OF PRALEA

SOLDIERS BACK FROM THE BATTLE FRONTS DINED BY THE LADIES

Capt. Burnham Pays Tribute to the Nursing Sister.

Peterborough's soldiers who have returned from overseas will long remember the gathering at the Armories last night. As many as possible of the heroes, who did or tried to do their bit, were gathered round a sumptuous festive board prepared by Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E. Boys who bear the scars of St. Julien, Ypres, Givinchy, and the Somme were present.

"I saw that fellow in the hospital," "I saw this fellow in France," "I went over on the same ship with that young fellow," "We were together at Ypres,' were some of the expressions heard.

His Honor Judge Huycke presided and seated with him were Major O'Flynn, Capt. Burnham, M.P of the 93rd, Capt. Belton of the South African Veterans; Lieut. Brittain, of the Princess Pats.; and Lieut. W. Quinn of the 2nd Batt.

During the course of the dinner music was furnished by Gliddon's orchestra and Mr. Asa Huycke sang. When everyone had satisfied the wants of the inner man, Judge Huycke, on behalf of the Daughters of the Empire, cordially welcomed the return men. The ladies appreciated the sacrifices that they had made, said the judge, and they were all men, all heroes, all gentlemen and King's soldiers, He envied them the privilege of having offered their lives in the greatest cause since the days of creation. Honor was given to the men who would never return. Peterborough was proud of them and the part that they had taken in upholding Canada's part would be history for the world for all time. Those present who carried scars will carry badges of heroism as long as they live. He felt sure that one and all had enjoyed the good dinner given by the best and loveliest ladies of Peterborough as a mark of honor and gratitude.

The Nursing Sister

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., paid great praise to the part played in the war by the ladies and gave particular attention to his observance of the nursing sisters. He had fallen in love with 3,000 of them for the tenderness, fortitude and devotion shown to the wounded heroes under all conditions. Every wounded or sick soldier always welcomed the nursing sister. He was half cured when sight was got of one approaching. The captain closed with the message from the Canadians at the front to the boys at home: "Tell them to come on; come on."

Pte. J. P. O'Leary, who enlisted with the 52nd but was transferred to the 59th Batt., delighted the gathering with a song, "Pat Fagan."

Major O'Flynn expressed the regrets of Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, who was unable to be present owing to the call of duty elsewhere. The major touched on a few incidents at the front and asked the returned men to use their influence to get recruits for the 247th.

Pte. Horace Urquhart entertained splendidly with a selection of songs that were sung to the boys in France.

Pte. C. J. Wilcox recited and Pte. Sid. Jollop sang selections that were loudly applauded.

Sergt. Victor, president of the Returned Soldiers Association, thanked the ladies of Otonabee Chapter for their very delightful as well as satisfying dinner.

Capt. Belton told of an incident of Canadian enthusiasm witnessed in London, when the "Maple Leaf" was played by an orchestra and at the same time regretted that there was not more enthusiasm to go to the aid of our country by the men at home.

Someone whispered to Judge Huycke that Sergt. Victor could sing and the popular president promptly responded with two vocal selections.

Dr. Park, father of Capt. Maurice Park, assured the returned heroes that their entertainment last evening was not a temporary outhurst of feeling but one that would last for all time. The people of Canada would take care of them.

After giving a hearty cheer for the ladies and the singing of Auld Lang

Minister on Munitions

A Kingston despatch says Rev. A. J. Wilson, of St. Andrew's Church, Napanee, has been given permission by the congregation to work four half days weekly at expert employment in munition works there, his earnings to be devoted to patriotic uses.

Band Appreciated.

Mr. R Gliddon has received the following letter from Lieut.-Colonel Ackerman: I wish to thank you and the members of the band which you so kindly placed at the disposal of this battalion to assist in the work of recruiting. The trouble you have taken in giving us this assistance has been very productive, and it is a source of satisfaction to me, as commanding officer of this battalion, to feel that we can rely upon your assistance when required.

Pte. Hampton Wounde.

Pte. Henry Hampton, a Lakefield soldier with the Mounted Rifles, is officially reported wounded.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman will form a "One Hundred Club" in Millbrook tonight, and at the same time make an appeal for recruits. The band went down on the noon train.

The battalion still holds its record for one a day, the latest recruit being Pte. Herman McMillan, of Norwood.

Major Keith Lech of the 93rd Battalion has been transferred to the 27th Battalion somewhere in France. He writes to Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, wishing the 247th every success. The weather is bad and there is lots of mud there.

The formation of a "500 Club" in this city will be taken up next week. The idea is meeting with every encouragement.

Sergt. J. B. Watson, who recruited for several battalions in Peterborough, has written to the commanding officer of the 247th asking that his transfer home be secured if possible. Sergt. Watson went over with the TROPHIES OF THE FIELD.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman and Mr. R. R. Hall addressed an organization meeting in Norwood last night and the great enthusiasm displayed by the citizens in anything that would help recruiting was more than gratifying to the 247th's commanding officer.

The train carrying the speakers did not arrive in the village till after nine o'clock, but the town hall was crowded with people who had been entertained by the 247th band and were all attention for the addresses to be delivered.

O.C. Gives Address

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman gave a very interesting address on what is happening at the front and he gave practical illustrations of the use of gas helmets, bombs, and how they were thrown, besides showing many interesting trophies taken from the battlefields of Flanders.

At the conclusion of the meeting the first of the Hundred Clubs was formed and fifteen citizens signed, each pledged to try and secure a recruit and the Citizens' Recruiting League promised to assit Lt. Bosdet in every way to get a full local platoon.

Mr. R. R. Hall gave one of his splended addresses, giving a review of the war and the incidents leading up to the recent peace proposals.

Rev. A. M. Irwin also spoke very enthusiastically for the success of the 247th Batt.

SERGT. DUGGAN REACHES CITY; IS INSTRUCTOR

WAS TWICE WOUNDED IN THE FIGHTING IN FRANCE.

GOING TO WINNIPEG.

Sub-Staff-Sergt. Patrick Duggan, who went overseas in the first contingent with the 14th Batt. of Montreal, was twice wounded at the fighting front, and from training received in England is now qualified as an instructor, arrived in the city last evening for a visit with Mr. C. Duggan.

On Thursday he goes to Toronto, en route to Winnipeg, where he will be stationed for instructional duty. Thirty-eight other Canadians who passed the school in instruction overseas came to Canada on the steamship that brought Sergt. Duggan. They were sixteen days on the ocean, due largely to the course being changed. At one time they were far south and enjoyed bright summer weather on Dec. 23.

Coming through the English Channel, the liner passed over the spot where a steamer had been torpedoed a few hours earlier.

Sergt. Duggan was first wounded in the foot and after returning to the front was caught in a shell explosion and was injured at the base of the spine.

When he reached the city last evening he was met by Mr. Duggan and Ald. A. H. Stratton, a member of the reception committee of the city council.

SAYS WOMEN ARE ENTITLED TO MANAGE THEIR OWN AFFAIRS

Discussing Franchise for Women, Capt. J. H. Burnham Says Raid in London on Monday Was Very Significant.

A Review reporter saw Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., today and asked him if he had any observations he cared to make upon questions outside the war, now more or less agitating the public mind. He said there should not be anything but the war agitating the public mind, but, unfortunately, the people had other business that must be attended to, consequently such questions as women's suffrage and prohibition, etc., etc., were very much to the fore. The latter, no doubt, could be classed as a war measure, but the former was a different matter. The numerous delegations visiting the government, both in Britain and in Canada, in this regard must be treated seriously and courteously. The raid in London on Monday was very significant. Women do not see their franchise in any after-the-war reconstruction program, and they are getting anxious.

Manage Their Own Affairs.

In response to an invitation to express an opinion on women's franchise, Capt. Burnham said that he had made up his mind that women were as much entitled to manage their own affairs as men were to manage their affairs. Men should not legislate for women or deal with women's property. That they have done so for centuries does not make it logical at the present time or in the near future. While it must be considered as one of the after-the-war measures, manifestly it is just as illogical for women to vote away men's property and men's lives as it would be for men to vote away women's property and women's lives. Therefore, he was in favor of granting women the right to manage their own affairs, entirely separate from men and men's affairs, and any other machinery which men use for their affairs, business or political. This meant a separte franchise and a separate parliament.

He could not see that the matter could be treated in any other way, logically. For a parliament composed half of men and half of women to decide that property owned wholly by one or the other should be made use of for the benefit of those who did not own it, was an impossibility. There might be some other way of treating this question, but he had not come across it—that is of a satisfactory character, in which women would be treated on identical terms with men or as if they were men.

Same Pay as Men.

Women should receive the same pay as men in all walks of life, end it would in all probability be found that the complete separation of the two sexes would be the only satisfactory way in matters political. However, we will see what the future will bring forth, said Capt. Burnham, who added that he was open to conviction. It is not likely that the measure will be considered at the present session of Parliament, and it will probably be left over for future consideration, but it is looming up more rapidly and largely every day.

Entitled to K.C.

"I am very sorry to see that Mr. D. O'Connell is leaving Peterborohgh," remarked Capt. Burnham. "It will be a great loss to the intellectual life of the city, and I hope that the Government will give him a K.C., because he is entitled to it and it would be in the interests of the people."

NO ATTEMPT WAS MADE BY AUBURN WOOLEN MILLS TO CHEAT GOVERNMENT

Sir Charles Davidson Says There Was no Shoddy in Khaki Furnished to Military Department---Sample Analyzed Slightly Below Standard.

Sir Charles Davidson's report on the investigation he held into the charge that the Auburn Woollen Mills Co were furnishing inferior cloth for the soldiers' overcoats has been handed to the Government. The Commissioner says that the khaki cloth was free of shoddy, the charges to the contrary being thus disproved. At the same time, the goods furnished were not quite up to the standard contained in a sealed sample. The Auburn Mills people are absolved from all suspicion of an attempt to defraud the Government. If there was any deficiency the whole was due entirely to the workmanship.

It seems from the published statements at hand that Sir Charles Davidson bases his finding on the evidence submitted to the commission by Dr. Milton Hersey, a chemical analyst of Montreal, who passed judgment on one square inch of the khaki furnished, comparing it with the sealed sample, which was the standard. This analyst gave it as his opinion that if there was any shoddy in the cloth the percentage was infinitesimal and that its presence might be accounted for by its being picked up by a machine that had been used for the manufacture of shoddy goods and then not properly cleaned.

Experts in Canada and the United States testified that the khaki was up to the standard besides being free of shoddy. The idea of submitting one square inch of cloth to a chemist for analysis was a new one on the experts. The Government inspectors, too, declared that the goods furnished were fully up to specifications.

The charges against the Auburn company were instigated by a designer who had been discharged. After a thorough investigation at a heavy cost to the country, the company are found guiltless of any intention or attempt to profit at the expense of the Government, and another graft bubble is burst.

WEST SIMCOE STANDS PAT.

WEST SIMCOE VOTERS have endorsed the Hearst Administration. In the bye-election held yesterday, Mr. Allan was returned by a majority of over five hundred, which, when all the returns are in, will probably be found even greater than that. The nominal majority in the riding is about seven hundred. The late James Duff carried it by over one thousand votes in the election of 1914, but this was due to his personal popularity and other local causes.

The Liberals have been read their lesson. They put up a strenuous fight in West Simcoe and have been routed. Even those highly vaunted campaign and organization methods of our own representative, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, failed to show anything in the way of results.

When a man attempts to ride two horses at once he is certain to come to grief between the two animals. No political party that essays to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds can hope to succeed for long. The Opposition have in the past resorted to desperate efforts to achieve victory, but in West Simcoe they exceeded even their own record for duplicity. It was a double-faced campaign from the start, led by the two outstanding figures in the party, Mr. Rowell, to catch the temperance vote, and Mr. Dewart, whose presence was supposed to extend hope and comfort to the anti-prohibitionists. Seldom has a like situation ever arisen in politics Rarely have the scheme of the campaigner come to disaster so swift and consummate.

No such double-barreled fight was attempted either in South Perth or in Southwest Toronto. In both of these the antis were in the majority. The temperance plank of the Liberal party was not in evidence in either, but reliance was placed entirely upon the liquor vote. Mr. Rowell, it is true, was in Europe at the time, but he sent no word of cheer to his supporters engaged in a fight against heavy odds. It was only in a temperance constituency like West Simcoe that the double game was palyed.

The Liberals would never concede that the temperance question was the deciding issue in Perth or Toronto. They figured that the Hearst Government's general policy, especially with regard to hydro-electric and the nickel situation, was in disfavor wth the voters. Accordng to this argument, they will now be forced to admit that on neither question is the Administration at odds with the public.

One point is settled once and for all by the election of yesterday. The Opposition have not even the shadow of a chance against the Hearst Government in any constituency where the conditions are at all normal. In a temperance riding the voters have as little faith in the professons of the Liberals as they ever had. The Ontario Temperance Act was given a fair trial in West Simcoe yesterday, and the result proves that that legislation has made Premier Hearst stronger than ever with the people.

The Opposition played their trump card just at the close of the campaign in Collingwood Saturday night. They hoped to carry that town, where the temperance vote is in the majority. Hartley Dewart, in his last address to the electors, declared that there was only one leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, and that N. W. Rowell was that man. The announcement had been deferred until the eleventh hour, but even this play to the voters in the temperance gallery failed to work. Collingwood was carried by the Government candidate.

Mr. Rowell during the campaign denied time and again that he had gone back on his former professions by working in league with the liquor party. He was never able to deny, however, that he had favored what was really an unholy alliance by appearing on the same platform with Hartley Dewart, a man well known as an anti-prohibitionist, a man chosen and endorsed by the liquor element and elected to the Legislature by the votes of that party.

If the Liberals were unable to make gains in West Simcoe, what chance have they against W. D. McPherson, the new Provincial Secretary, in the election in Northwest Toronto next Monday?

REV. J. R. WEBB.

THE CYNIC who says that the ministers of the present day are mercenary or otherwise self-seeking can come to Peterborough for his answer. He will find here pastors who are more concerned with their work than with material rewards. Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray Street Baptist Church, has twice within the past twelve months received a call to a wider field with larger emoluments, and twice he has declined the offer, to the universal and twice he has declined the offer, to the universal

It is seldom that so kindly a relation exists between pastor and pew as that which unites Mr. Webb and his people. This was shown by the courtesies which were extended to him last Sunday on the tenth anniversary of his pastorate and by the compliments paid him by Rev. H. E. Stillwell, a brother pastor who has known Mr. Webb intimately for the past twenty years. In all the expressions of esteem Mrs. Webb was not forgotten, because the congregation realize that no small measure of their pastor's success has been due to the co-operation of his life partner.

The Peterborough church people, without regard to denomination, will join with the congregation of Murray Street in congratulating Mr. Webb and in gratitude that he has decided to remain here. He is something more than the pastor of a Baptist church. He is a good citizen, interested in the genral welfare of the city, and a sane counsellor on all public questions. He is known in church work all over Canada and has brought honor to the city of Peterborough by his record, not only here but in every place where he has appeared as a speaker or a worker.

MR. BLONDIN AND KITCHENER.

THAT PARTISAN SPIRIT that leads our contemporary to slam the Conservative Government on every occasion, to suspect dark design in every order issued, possessed it again last night and inspired an ill-judged and utterly uncalled-for attack upon Hon. P. E. Blondin, the new Postmaster-General.

When the name of Berlin was changed to Kitchener the late Postmaster-General, with a view to give official recognition to the change, ordered that all mail addressed to Berlin be sent to the Dead Letter Office. Residents of the baby city, without regard to party, objected to this ruling as tending to work an injustice, especially to the business interests. The change of name was not generally known in the United States or in Europe. Correspondence with residents of these places was practically stopped by the order from Ottawa. Young men in the trenches in Flanders were really prevented from writing home, as their letters, improperly addressed through lack of knowledge on their part that the name of their home city had been changed, were returned to them.

Mr. Blondin in issuing his new order is complying with the request of the resdents of Kitchener as well as following the custom always adopted when the name of a post office is changed. Mail is forwarded to such places as usual until the matter adjusts itself and the fact of the change becomes generally known. This is the only way in which business can be carried on as usual and in which the public can continue to enjoy the privileges of the postal service.

If our contemporary had been fair it would have stated the case fully, but the blind partisan rarely concerns himself with that quality. Any letter addressed to Berlin is to be stamped at the post office where it is mailed with the new and proper name of the city for which it is intended. In this way the department emphasizes the fact that there is now no such post office as Berlin in Ontario.

The Examiner scouts Nationalism and treason in the new order, which will appeal to all fair-minded people as a perfectly businesslike adjustment of the problem. It alludes again to an utterance that is invariably quoted by the enemies of Mr. Blondin, a statement he made in regard to the trouble that arose in this country in 1837.

Hon. George P. Graham, a man, we take it, in whom our hair-splitting contemporary sees no guile, referred to the same disturbance at the recruiting meeting in the Opera House on Sunday night. He spoke of the militant struggle made by our forefathers for responsible govenment, something the people of Canada enjoy today. There was a similarity of the conditions existing in 1837 with the Prussian militarism which it is the object of the Allies to overthrow today.

Mr. Graham's remarks were certainly not offensive. No man could fairly charge him with the treason our contempoary weakly and ineffectively attempts to fasten upon Mr. Blondin. The latter's famous expression and the utterance of Mr. Graham really amount to the same thing. The only difference consists in the choice of words, the statement of one being less violent than that used by the other.

GARBAGE COLLECTION.

IF THE MEMBERS of the Property Committee are really in earnest with regard to the proper collecting of the city's garbage, how would it do for them to be just to both parties to the contract and insist that the people as well as Collector Graham obey the law? The Health Act distinctly requires all householders to have two metallic receptacles, tightly covered, for their garbage, in one of which ashes shall be placed. This provision was designed in the interests of the public health.

How many residents of Peterborough have complied with the law in this respect? The Act has been in force here for the past five years, ample time in which the people could realise what is required of them and in which the inspector could enforce every clause of the provision, especially one so essential as that which is designed to protect be atmosphere from the fumes of decaying garbage.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WHEN THE LEGISLATURE meets, where will Mr. Dewart sit?

• • • •

• • • •

THE BROAD PATH leads to disaster in politics as well as in everything else.

• • • •

• • • •

• • • •

IT IS NOW up to G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., to tell us who it was that threw the monkey wrench into the machinery.

• • • •

AND WITH ALL their intrigues and alliances, they could not cut down the normal majority to any noticeable extent!

• • • •

DR. JEKYLL ROWELL and Mr. Edward Hyde Dewart. The drug at last failed to work and the latter personality brought discredit upon the other.

• • • •

MR. DEWART SAYS there is only one leader of the Ontario Opposition and his name is Rowell. Well, the job hardly appears worth quarreling about.

• • • •

THE EARNEST MINISTER remains at his post, no matter how loud may be the call or how tempting the offers to remove to a new field.

• • • •

BUT EVEN IF the "sick man" is chased out of Europe, he may find the Asiatic climate little more salubrious, and the old trouble will continue on a different continent.

• • • •

THE ERSTWHILE champion of the heavyweights, Mr. John Lawrence Sullivan, too, had a habit of persuading his opponents to quit before they had him beaten for fair.

• • • •

FOWL ARE reported scarce in Germany. The male portion of the feathered tribe have probably worked themselves to death attempting to crow every time some man in authority told a lie.

DELIVERING GOODS ADDS OVER EIGHT PER CENT TO COST PRICE

With regard to the price of daily necessities, did you ever think how much it is costing you to maintain the army of delivery wagons that brings them to you?

Realizing the importance of cartage as a factor in the cost of living, the secretary of commerce has set on foot an investigation which has for its object to find out exactly how large this factor is and how it may best be reduced. Eugene F. Hartley of the census bureau has charge of this investigation, and he has already completed a preliminary survey of his field of action, which is the city of Washington.

A very brief examination of the facts shows what a formidable burden of expense the retail delivery system imposes on the public, for in Washington there are no fewer than 5,000 retailers who make deliveries. It must be taken into account that many of the large retailers maintain a number of vehicles, so that the average number of vehicles engaged may be safely said to be at least two. This means that the 250,000 people of Washington are maintaining a delivery army of at least 10,000 men, with necessary equipment. The burdens of European militarism are not much greater than this.

Average Cost 8 Per Cent.

The average cost of this delivery system to the retailer is found to be 8 per cent. of his gross sales, which means that you pay just that much more for all necessities than you would if everyone took home his own purchases. It also means that the man who takes home his own purchases now is helping to pay for the food of the man who insists upon delivery. Improvement may be brought about in various ways.

The first of these is educating the public to keep deliveries down to a minimum by carrying home whatever can be carried without inconvenience. The resurrection of the old fashioned market basket would save the nation millions. Likewise, if you go out and buy your food instead of ordering it by telephone, you are sure to get more and better things for your money.

The unreasonable attitude of the public is what the retailer complains about most. For example, a leading Washington dairyman tells of the wife of a president who gave him an order for a quarter of a pound of butter to be delivered to the white house every morning. Despite the high place from which it came, the dairyman declined the order, because he could not make a profit on a quarter of a pound of butter if he had to cart it from his dairy to the white house. Another high government official wanted a gill of cream delivered every morning for his coffee. He didn't get it either.

That a delivery service, if well organized and kept within reasonable limits, may be operated at a small percentage of cost has been proved by the department stores. Mr. Hartley found that it costs them less than 2 per cent. of their gross sales to deliver the goods. They do not, however, have to deliver everything, as does the dairyman, or nearly everything. A woman seldom returns from a tour of the department stores without a number of packages containing things that she needs at once. Furthermore, the department stores have their delivery service admirably organized. They know that a certain amount of goods every day will go to a certain section of the city and have a truck service to carry the packages to a central point, from which smaller vehicles distribute them.

Expense Up to 45 Per Cent.

The highest cost of delivery applies to certain things. It costs 12 per cent., for example, to deliver dairy products, 19 per cent. to deliver coal and wood, and 45 per cent. to deliver ice.

An obvious remedy for the problem is to divide the city into districts for the distribution of all standardized products and so avoid the waste of duplicated effort. Whatever legal difficulties might be involved in establishing such a system, no one can question its economic soundness.

Mr. Hartley finds that each retailer has a different problem to face in maintaining his delivery service. The coal man, for example, finds that when the sun goes behind a cloud and it looks like snow he can hardly find enough telephone clerks to take down the orders that come in, but during a long sunny spell his whole delivery force is idle. If you would order your coal when the sun is shining you would get it quicker and make the problem simpler for the retailer.

The iceman has the most difficult problem of all. His business is about twenty times as great in the summer as it is in the winter; yet if he lets 80 per cent. of his employes out during the cold weather he cannot organize a competent force in the spring.

BE COURTEOUS TO PATRONS

General manager C. F. Sise has issued the following address to the employes of the Bell Telephone Company throughout Canada.

The year opens with hundreds of our fellow-workers serving in the trenches and in training camps. Twenty-six of our numbers have laid down their lives for the cause.

To us who remain behind the call to service comes with no less insistence than to those who have enlisted. We, too, are called upon to serve, and our obligation at this time is two-fold:

First, as good citizens those of us who come within the terms of the Act should loyally support the Government in its campaign for National Registration by promptly filling in and returning the registration cards sent out.

Second, as loyal telephone workers, all of us should see that in our dealings with subscribers and the public, we are courteous, obliging, tactful, considerate. Every subscriber has a right to expect no less than this from each of us.

Let us begin the year right by cultivating from the start the spirit of service and of unfailing courtesy to the public.

Charles Powres, a Sarnian, who brought over from Port Huron several copies of the New York Staats Zeitung and the Fatherland to be mailed to other persons was arrested and was fined $5 and costs.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: Why all this talk about the high cost of living? Better call it the high cost of bad management on the part of the housekeepers. Let me tell my experience.

I was married on Oct. 21, 1916, and went to housekeeping immediately, an inexperienced housekeeper, having previously spent all my time in the schoolroom or office. Up to and including Jan. 5, a total of seventy-six days, our total table expense—that is, all groceries, meat, milk, butter, eggs and laundry supplies—was $63.22, about 83 1-5 cents a day, for two people, with three meals a day, as I put up my husband's lunches.

My husband has gained twenty pounds in that time.

During that period we have been invited out to a few meals, but to balance that have entertained guests at dinner twice, besides the Thanksgiving dinner, and at Sunday tea twice, besides a big New Year's eve supper.

It must be remembered that I started with a bare pantry, so these figures include everything. Gas and electric light bills were for the first month 80c and 71c, and for the second month 96c and 72c respectively.

EXPERIENCE.

Even when a girl turns a young man down he can't help but admire her judgment.

A TWICE TOLD TALE

By SADIE OLCOTT.

Lieutenant Colonel Beverage, commandant of cadets at the West Point Military academy, had been busy all day with his duties pertaining to the graduation of the first class of the corps of cadets and in the evening strolled up to the West Point hotel.

Colonel Beverage had met so many strangers that he could not remember them all, though being a prominent person at West Point he was himself remembered. A maiden lady who was nearing the close of her fourth decade nodded to him. Not being able to place her, he joined her, with a view to learning who she was without betraying his ignorance. They were soon seated on a corner of the porch, and the colonel opened the conversation.

"There is a far denser crowd than that to be found here in June when I was a cadet. The youngsters don't have the opportunity to spoon here that we had. In those days it was possible to get a girl off here by herself and make no end of love to her."

"I presume, colonel," said the lady, "that you did your share of that sort of thing."

"We all did our duty, I assure you, in keeping up the credit of the academy as entertainers."

"Did you ever make a proposition on this porch?"

"That is a pointed question, but since you ask about what occurred twenty years ago I presume there is nothing indelicate in acknowledging that I did."

"Was the girl attractive, or was it the surroundings rather than her personality that moved you?"

"She was delicious!"

"That's a new word to apply to a woman."

"It expresses exactly what she was to me."

"Do you remember on what part of the portico this interesting scene took place?"

"Remember! I shall never forget. It was in this very corner."

"Were you accepted?"

"On the contrary, my proposal was received with a merry laugh. 'You cadets,' she said, 'are incorrigible. Yours is the fourth proposal I have received since I have been here. West Point is the only place in the world, I believe, where a proposal means nothing.'

"Mine meant a good deal, but its reception took me flat aback. Instead of trying to convince her that I was in earnest I forced a smile and said: 'You top me by one. You have received four proposals. I have made but three.'

"Again came that laugh, though now it seemed to me that there was mockery in it. I was quite sure the girl believed that there was something serious in what I had said to her and was enjoying the stab she was giving me. Naturally I endeavored to conceal the fact that I was in earnest by swearing in a heroic manner that I loved her and her only and would never love any other woman. 'And that was the truth, though I intended she should consider it mere gallantry. I have never married and will never marry."

The lady was silent for a time, seemingly impressed by this onesided romance. Presently she said:

"May not the girl have received your proposition as she did because of the reputation cadets have for making love to pass the time?"

"Perhaps she did not take me seriously. But I had done all I could do in the matter. I had offered her my love and my hand. She had laughed at me. What else could I do but laugh back?"

"She was very young, I presume."

"Eighteen."

"And you?"

"Twenty-two. It was the year I was graduated."

After a brief silence the lady continued: "It seems to me, colonel, that, considering the reputation cadets have or at least had when you were a cadet, you should not have considered your rejection necessarily as a true expression of this young girl's feelings. You should have tried again."

"I was ordered to the western coast; she remained in the east."

"I see. How many such cases there are in the world! Two hearts meet and mingle. Before there can be a proper understanding between them they are spirited apart, perhaps to the opposite ends of the earth. And even when there is such an understanding it requires no great shock to break it."

"You are assuming that the girl, had she believed in my sincerity, would have reciprocated."

"That she alone knows."

At this point the tete-a-tete was interrupted by friends of both the colonel and the lady.

"Are you two trying to fancy yourselves back in your flirting days?" asked one of the newcomers.

"I have enjoyed a very pleasant chat about old times," replied the colonel.

"If it were when Miss Thurston was eighteen you would surely not escape unscathed. She was considered then the most incorrigible flirt who ever spooned on this piazza."

"Madge Thurston!" exclaimed the colonel.

What followed is not to be described. Those who had brought about the denouement did not understand the colonel's consternation. He had been telling his love affair to the woman who had refused him.

PARING POTATOES

"Now, "Alice," said Mrs. Bounce to her newest domestic, "while I'm out just pare the potatoes and get them ready. I shall not be long gone."

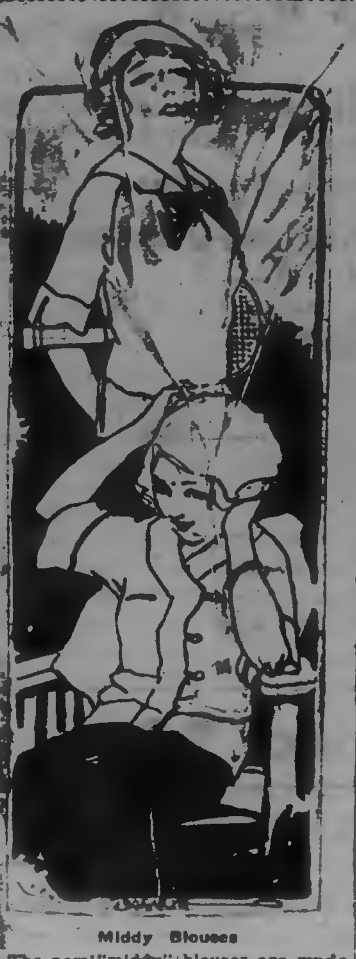
About an hour later Mrs. Bounce came back from her shopping expedition, bringing the meat that was destined to accompany the potatoes to the dinner table. Alice was calmly seated on the floor, and around her a goodly collection of the delectable tubers.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the horrified mistress. "What in the name of all that's wonderful are you doing?"

"Doin', ma'am?" replied the fair maid-of-all-work. "Doin' what ye told me, indeed! I've done the best I could too." Then she pointed to the potatoes. "I've paired off all of 'em, ma'am," she mumbled, "but, try as I will, I can't find a mate for this little beggar."

The girl who is wise never gives a young man a lock of her hair. She may decide to change the color of it later.

FASHION HINTS



Middy Blouses

The new "middy" blouses are made with either kimona or raglan sleeves and they have nothing left of the seaman jacket which was the prototype of the style except the turn-up piece about the bottom and the name. Even the band about the bottom is a shaped piece put on and none of them has a sailor collar.

The one with the band about the neck looks much like the jackets worn by the Chinese coolies, but it is still called the "middy."

VERY CLEVER LADY CHEF

HAS COOKED FOR MANY ROYAL ASSEMBLAGES IN EUROPE.

It is more satisfactory to have an accomplished woman cook than an accomplished chef in the kitchen, according to Mrs. Rosa Lewis, the world's cleverest cook-chef, for the women are more resourceful, are less apt to make difficulties, and grumble less at their work. On the other hand, however, they are, as a rule, more extravagant than the men cooks, for they do not understand the economic side of kitchen finance.

"The Gourmets' Guide to London," says she began to learn the art of cookery when she was a girl with a pigtail of hair down her back, in the kitchen of the Comtesse de Paris, when she was paid the large sum of a shilling a week. Her second place was in the kitchen of another French Duke, and ultimately she went to London and built up her unique reputation.

In her kitchen are to be found quite a number of girls, who are carefully trained by Mrs. Lewis, and it is interesting to note that no cook with her training complete leaves Mrs. Lewis's kitchen for any place at less than $500 a year.

Mrs. Lewis's time-table for a day when she is called upon to cook one of those dinners which have made her so famous provides a striking illustration of her energy. She is at the market at 5 a.m., to buy her material; at seven her staff is ready to help her in her own kitchen, and she begins with the last dishes of the dinner, preparing sweets and ices; next she turns to the cleaning and preparation of the vegetables, and then to the materials of the soup and the making of the cold dishes. By one o'clock the meats and birds are all prepared for the cooking, and at six all the things to be cooked at the house where the dinner is to be given are put in hampers and taken over there.

Woman's Magic

Lady Hester Lucy Stanhope, when staying at Walmer Castle in 1804, quite unwittingly accomplished the feat of changing the uniform of a regiment of the county militia. The anecdote, which illustrates a curious streak of vanity in old-time Army officers, appears in an account of Lady Stanhope's life by Mrs. Frank Hamel.

"Somebody asked me before a great many officers what I thought of them," said Lady Stanhope, "and I said that they looked like so many tinned harlequins. One day, soon after, I was riding through Walmer village, when who should pop out upon me but the colonel, dressed in entirely new regimentals, with different facings, more like those of a regiment of the line.

"'Pray pardon me, Lady Hester,' he began. So I stopped, and he addressed me. 'Pray pardon me,' said the colonel, 'but I wish to know if you approve of our new uniform.' Of course I made him turn about, and I inspected him round and round—pointed with my whip as I sat on horseback, first here and then there—told him the waist was too short and wanted half a button more, the collar was too high, and so on. And in a short time the whole regiment turned out with new clothes."

THE CHILDREN AND THEIR PETS

LIVE ANIMALS OR BIRDS ASSIST IN TEACHING KINDNESS BY DEPENDENCE.

It is a good training for children to allow them to have "live" pets. There may be education and interest in other hobbies, but the opportunity for training is not so great.

A child should be allowed to choose his own pet, within reasonable limits. But once the choice is made, it must be understood that he must stick to that pet. There must be no changing of rabbit for white mice, or canary for a guinea-pig, as if they had been marbles or balls.

Children should be instructed in the proper way to look after their pets. It should be pointed out at the beginning how dependent the pet is upon its master. This teaches responsibility and trains the child in the habit of fulfilling its obligations.

What is kind and what is cruel should be taught. It is not knowledge that comes instinctively. There are plenty of people with kind hearts and good intentions who are cruel to dumb creatures without ever realising it. Let the child take full charge of its pets, but always under the supervision of a grown-up person. Feeding time and cleaning out time should be rigidly observed. Obvious neglect should never be overlooked, and wise parents will punish the child who has deliberately punished with hunger or cruelty its defenceless pet.

It's a pity we can't reverse things and start at the top. It would be so easy to reach the bottom.

A magnetic speaker is usually a drawing card.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Date Muffins

Cream one-fourth cup of sugar with two tablespoons of lard, add two eggs, one at a time, and beat the mixture with beater. One cup of milk, pinch of salt. Sift two tablespoons of baking powder into two cups of flour. Stone one cup of dates and cut fine. Add dates and flour alternately, drop in muffin pans and bake in quick oven twenty-five minutes.

This is a fine breakfast food, as it combines cereal and fruit.

Cleaning White Silk

In washing white silk, great care must be taken not to use very hot water, nor must the iron used afterward be very hot, or there would be danger of the silk turning yellow. Do not rub silk while washing it, but knead it in warm, soapy water. If it is pure white silk, a very little blue may be added to the last rinsing water. Black silks should be rinsed in water to which a little weak tea has been added.

Preserving Cut Flowers

Cut flowers will remain fresh longer if the stems are cut with a sharp knife instead of a pair of scissors

For Squeaky Shoes

Pour a thin layer of olive or castor oil on a plate, stand the shoes in it, and leave them for twelve hours. This will entirely remove the squeak, and will at the same time render the shoes waterproof. Be careful that the oil is not deep enough to touch the uppers, or they will be difficult to polish afterwards.

After washing lamp chimneys, try polishing them with dry salt. This gives the glass a brilliant shine and prevents it from cracking.

Marie Rappold and Albert Spalding

Photograph of a comparison between the brilliant performance of Marie Rappold and Albert Spalding in the Bach-Gounod Ave Maria and Edison's Re-Creation of the same performance by the same artists. These two great artists are but two of the many artists who, by similar tests, have proved the infallibility of Edison's new art.

What music means to you

"Music, of all the arts, has the greatest influence over the emotions."
—NAPOLEON

"A love of the higher school of musical composition is one of the surest tests of a refined and elegant state of society."
—MOORE

"Musical training is a more potent influence than any other, because rhythm and harmony find their way into the secret places of the soul."
—PLATO

"Music is a more lofty revelation than all wisdom and philosophy."
BEETHOVEN

We want to give you a Musicale

We invite you to visit our store and let us prove to you that this advertisement is an understatement of the merit of the New Edison. Come at any time. There is absolutely no obligation to buy.

What The NEW EDISON means to you

This new invention of Edison's brings into your home the literal Re-Creation of the art of the world's great artists. The New Edison differs utterly from all talking machines, in that talking machines give only a partial reproduction of music, whereas the New Edison literally Re-creates every voice and every kind of instrument.

Its absolute fidelity to the original has been proved hundreds of times in public by direct comparison between the living singers and instrumentalists on the one hand and Edison's new invention on the other. Over 200,000 music lovers, and the music critics of more than 200 of America's leading newspapers, have seen and heard these astounding tests and were positively unable to distinguish the original artist's voice or instrument from Edison's Re-Creation of it. In other words, they could not distinguish one from the other when they listened alternately to the living artists and to this wonderful Edison invention.

What will you have in your home?

You chose your piano, your furniture, your pictures and paintings with a view to getting the best you could afford.

The same discrimination will lead you inevitably to select the New Edison.

The New Edison has a greater superiority over all other kinds of sound-reproducing instruments than any other article of merchandise possesses over other articles intended for a similar use.

The Edison is slightly more costly than an ordinary talking machine, but the difference in cost is insignificant when compared with the difference in quality.

LIBERAL TACTICS FELL FLAT IN NORTH SIMCOE

COLLINGWOOD, Jan. 16.—West Simcoe has given its answer to the over-reaching attempt of the Liberal party leaders to make it appear that the Government of the Hon. W. H. Hearst has not the confidence of the people of Ontario. The tactics that succeeded in South-West Toronto and North Perth, where the Liberals joined forces with the anti-temperance interests, fell flat in Simcoe, and W. T. Allen, the Conservative candidate, goes to the Legislature with a majority of 578 to fill the place left vacant by the death of Hon. J. S. Duff.

The defeat of the Liberal candidate was a clean-cut one. Isaac Scott was admittedly the best man the Liberals could have secured to carry their standard. He is personally popular, universally respected, and as a farmer he was able to make a special appeal in a riding that is very largely an agricultural one. One the other hand, the Conservatives had in W. T. Allen, a candidate well known and respected as he is, that could not be expected to hold the abnormaly large vote given Hon. Mr. Duff. Another handicap was that several of the younger voters of the riding are now overseas, and according to local workers, a very large percentage of these soldiers were Conservatives.

The majority of 578 exceeded the expectations of even the most optimistic of the Conservative workers.

DODGE KAHKI BY CROSSING TO UNITED STATES

SHIRKERS SHOULD NOT BE PERMITTED TO RETURN TO THIS COUNTRY.

Judge Huycke at the dinner to the returned soldiers last night spoke in no uncertain terms of the men who tried to dodge serving their country by going to the United States. A voice in the assembly shouted. They're not Canadians." and Judge Huycke remarked "They are not Canadian, and the Government should never allow them to come back."

The men who had tried to serve their country would have first consideration at all times and he was only too ready at any time to assist them, directly or indirectly, on any matter whatever.

The practical talks which are conducted by the Y.M.C.A. every Wednesday night are open to all students and boys who are interested.

The following Bible study groups are scheduled for the week: Wednesday, 8 p.m., Junior Employed Boys will meet in two sections.

Thursday, 7.30, Senior Employed Boys meet; Mr. Roper, teacher.

Friday, 6.15, High Schol Club meets for supper and study; Mr. Meserve, mentor.

Saturday, 9 a.m., Junior School Boys at 9.45, Junior Collegiate Club.

Any boy who would like to become a member of a Bible study group will find a real welcome awaiting him; 155 boys are now enrolled in Bible study clubs.

The Junior Boys Bible Club will meet next Wednesday afternoon at 5.30 to make arrangements for their outing and supper.

GOOD SEASONINGS

Advice About Onions, Garlic, Chives, Marjoram, Thyme and Parsley

As a stuffing or dressing parsley is commonly used fresh, but it may be dried and broken fine. Thyme is delicate and is used with other herbs. Marjoram is the favorite of the French cuisine, but like bay leaf must be used sparingly. Onions, chives and garlic are over-strong in flavor and need to be used with utmost care else they will drown every other seasoning. Onion salt is often recommended in place of onion juice; it soon loses its strength and is seldom purchased twice. To get the best results from seasoning, slice an onion and rub a bowl inside with it. Put pepper, salt, powdered sage, thyme, marjoram and parsley in it and mix well. Squeeze the juice from the onion on this mixture and then add it to the forcemeat.

Remove Ice Cream Stains

Ice cream spots on silk should be sponged with warm water to dissolve the sugar, then use naphtha or ether for the grease. Have a soft pad under the spot, and rub in ever widening circle, so that no ring remains. Use just enough of the chemical to dampen the silk, not to make it sopping wet. Most people make this mistake when trying to clean anything.

Steel of the Range

When the steel parts of a kitchen range become brown, dampen a small piece of cloth in ordinary vinegar and rub the parts affected. The brown tinge will very quickly disappear, and then the usual polishing may be done with a most pleasant result.

OBITUARY

MRS. J. C. O'LEARY

Mrs. J. C. O'Learly, Emily township, near Downeyville, died at St. Joseph's Hospital last evening. Mrs. O'Learly was born in Ireland 72 years ago, but was brought to this country while an infant, and lived in Emily township ever since. She is survived by her husband and one brother, Daniel Flynn, who lives in Minnesota.

The funeral will leave her late residence at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning and proceed to St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, where religious service will be held. The remains will be taken to Lindsay for interment.

MRS. THOMAS YOST

Mrs. Thomas Yost, who, with her husband and daughter Mary, came to Peterborough ten years ago from London, Eng., and had been an active member of the Salvation Army here, died this morning after an illness from heart affection. Mrs. Yost, who was aged 62, had been a Salvationist since childhood. The family lived on Downie St. until recently.

The funeral will be held from the residence of Mr. John Smith, 140 Antrim Stret, on Thursday at 1.30, proceeding to the Army Temple for service at 2 o'clock. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

CLARENCE F. DAWSON.

On Friday afternoon, the 12th day of January, there passed away at his home, Lot 6, Concession 1, South Monaghan, Mr. Clarence F Dawson. The late Mr. Dawson was a son of the late William and Meriam Dawson, and was born in South Monaghan 44 years ago.

He leaves to mourn his demise his wife, three daughters, May, Olive, and Edna; two sons, Frank and Ernest, all at home, besides the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. P. E. Rutherford, Peterborough; Mrs. H. Marshall, Peterborough; Mrs. John Kerr, Souris, Man., Messrs. Harry, Welford, W. Fell, Thomas, George, Peter, William, Nichol, all of Bailieboro.

In religion the late Mr. Dawson was a Methodist, having been activelively identified with the Bailieboro M. E. Church all his life.

The funeral, which took place from the family residence to the Methodist cemetery, on Sunday afternoon, was largely attended, and bespoke the high esteem in which the community held the late Mr. Dawson.

Rev. Mr. Wickett conducted the service, which was under the auspices of the L. O. L., Bailieboro.

The pallbeares were Messrs. Harry, Welford and Edmund Dawson, William Fell, William and George Whittington.

Near New Westminster, David Pendergast, a resident of Surrey, was killed when his auto, driven by his daughter, turned over.

Watering the Plants

If you intend to leave home for a few days, and wish to keep your palms and other plants well watered during your absence, take a tub and get as many common bricks as you have pots to place in the tub. Cover with water; the bricks will absorb the water, and the plants placed on them will draw all the moisture they require, and keep in good condition.

Mint With Potatoes

When cooking new potatoes to which mint has been added, they usually turn a bad color. This can be prevented by cooking the potatoes first and, when strained, placing a sprig of mint on the top, closing the lid tightly. The steam absorbs the flavor, and the potatoes are kept a good color.

SOME MEAT SUBSTITUTES

BEANS AND PEAS ARE CONSIDERED TO BE VERY GOOD.

In a vegetarian diet where all meat is forbidden the substitute is usually some member of the legume family—beans, peas, lentils or peanuts.

The Mongolians use the soy bean; the Mexicans the frijole bean; the Spaniards, Arabs and Hindus the lentil; the Italian workingman the kidney bean; and even in the early days in New England bean porridge was a staple food.

Baked beans is the familiar example of a substitute meat dish of this type. Work of the hardest kind, that is, that done in lumber camps, is performed without difficulty on a diet made up largely of beans. It is recognized as a hearty dish, but apparently its value as a substitute for meat is not so well known, for it is frequently served at the same meal with a meat dish.

In some cases beans are difficult of digestion. The removal of the skins and the use of soda and salt in cooking may help to remove this difficulty.

Split peas and lentils are less common types of legumes, probably more often served in soup than in any other way. They may be prepared in the same ways that are used for beans.

Lentils are rather pronounced in flavor, and perhaps for this reason are not so popular as beans and peas. It is a very ancient food plant and widely used in early times. The "red pottage" of Esau was probably made from the Egyptian lentil.

The Anzac's Good Book

The British Weekly tells the following story: A stalwart young Australian soldier stood near me at a Tube bookstall. He said to the assistant, "Have you got a book called 'Paradise Lost'?" "No," she replied, "I'm afraid you'll have to go to a bookseller's for it." "Is that so? I thought I might get it here. It's a good book."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste, or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach, others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

Charles A. Grant, a resident of Windsor for the past fifty years, is dead, aged 68, leaving 13 children and 58 grandchildren.

247TH Battalion Seven Play In Lindsay Wednesday Night

The 247th Batt. team will go to Lindsay tomorow to give the Midgets their return game. The locals will play the regular line-up.

The Warder dopester says:

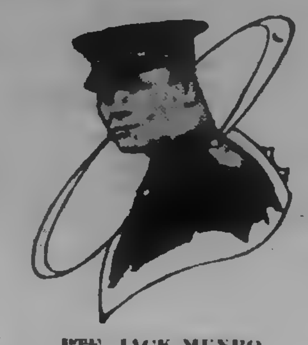
It will not be all clear sailing for the porridge eaters, and it is whispered that Cole O'Loughlin picked up a horse shoe on Kent St. the other day. That should count for something, although there are few in the game that beat "Silk."

"Mugsby" Richman has been swinging dumb bells in the basement of the Beal larrigan factory, along with a few storage batteries, and is hardened up for the fray. Lefty McElroy has been carrying a four-leaf clover since the last game in Peterborough, and Jack Haugh a piece of pig's tooth, so from all accounts it will be a contest worth witnessing.

PTE. JACK MUNRO BROUGHT ALONG MASCOT OF THE PRINCESS PATS

ST. JOHN, Jan. 16. — An interesting member of the party of Canadians who landed here yesterday was Pte. John Munro, the former heavyweight fighter, who gave up a profitable business as mining engineer and promoter to enlist in the ranks of the Princess Patricia's. He returns with his right hand in bandages and does not expect to recover the full use of it.

The story of how the big fighter missed the previous steamer was told by a comrade. Munro was on board the steamer ready to sail when he missed a dog which he was bringing home. It was not merely a dog; it was the former mascot of the Princess Pat's, which had been granted a furlough when Jack left the trenches. He found it the next day in Liverpool and, after a wait of a week, brought it along with him, despite official rules and regulations.



PTE. JACK MUNRO.

PETERBORO SEVEN UP IN GAME WITH LAKEFIELD

The first friendly curling game with an outside club was played yesterday afternoon between Peterborough and Lakefield. There were three rinks on each side in the contest and Peterborough won by 7 shots. Two of the local rinks had only margins of one shot, while the veteran S. Ray had 5 to his credit. The rinks and scores were:—

"Agitators against National Service should be called traitors, they are unworthy of the name of men, and should not be at liberty," stated Premier Norris, speaking before the War Veterans' Association at Winnipeg.

SPORTDOM

It is now stated that Larry Lajoie who last season worked at second base for the Athletics, will manage the Toronto Leafs this coming season.

The Soldiers will have a good-sized following at Lindsay on Wednesday night.

Cobourg has dropped out of the game. The result of a contest on Wednesday night may be followed with a similar announcement from Scugogville.

A Notable Convert.

The conversion of Lord Northcliffe to the cause of woman suffrage is being heralded as a great victory for the suffrage cause in England. As one of the most powerful men in the Conservative party, owner of The Times, The Mail, and many other publications, Lord Northcliffe had been the uncompromising foe of the enfranchisement of women. Then came the war, and the marvelous transformations which have been brought about under its grim tutelage. In the reorganisation of English life, in the most urgent and critical service, British women of all ranks from the highest to the humblest have taken a most conspicuously effective part. This co-operation was not merely a help, but a necessity, and it has grown wider in its scope as the war has gone on.

Now Lord Northcliffe, through The Daily Mail, has gone so far as to say that "at the round table conference," which was to discuss the special register bill, the enfranchisement problem should be included and at least three prominent women should have seats at the round table. He suggested Lady Frances Butler, Lady Selbourne, and Mrs. Pankhurst.

"The old argument," says The Mail, "against giving women the franchise was that they were useless in war. But we could not carry on the war without them. They are running many of our industries and their services may justly be compared with those of the soldier."

CURLING

The inter rink matches at the curling rink last night were well contested all through and there were plenty of surprises during the games.

INFORMATION ON FIRE TRUCKS

MAYOR AND ALD. DOBBIN WELL LOADED.

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the fire, water and light committee, arrived home this morning after an extended trip on the hunt for information regarding fire fighting apparatus for the Peterborough department. All styles of motor-driven equipment from the leading towns and cities were carefully inspected and the conditions as to climatic differences thoroughly investigated.

The opinions of the best fire chiefs in Canada and the United States as to what would in their opinion be best for Peterborough have been secured and will be laid before the aldermen in detail.

The deputation were well received at all places visited, and the motor equipment given a tryout in each case.

Wit and Wisdom

"I understand you were punished in school yesterday, Thomas?" said Mr Bacon to his twelve-year-old boy.

"Yes, sir," promptly replied the truthful Thomas. "It was for telling the truth, sir."

"Your teacher said it was for some reflection on her age."

"That the way she took it, father. You see, she drew a picture of a basket of eggs on the blackboard, and while she was out of the room I just wrote under them, "The hen that made these eggs isn't any chicken.""

CHOIR CONCERT

PLEASING PROGRAM GIVEN AT TRINITY CHURCH.

The anniversary concert held at Trinity Church last evening was very successful. The program was arranged under the supervision of Mr. John Crane. Numbers by Miss Warner of Cobourg, who played two selection on the organ, were much appreciated. Miss Taylor's solos were rendered in her usual good voice. The Angel's Serenade, with violin obligato by Mrs. (Dr.) Wilson was most pleasing. Mrs. Wilson gave two violin solos.

The quartette by Miss Taylor, Mrs. Turner, Messrs. Ridyard and Downey, assisted by the choir, was also well received. Misses Taylor and Pollard sang a duet, "How sweet the Name," in good voice, and Mr. F. Hartshorn and the choir contributed a special number in the "Birthday of a King." The vocal solo of Mr. A. Milton was splendid, as was the duet of Messrs. Lee and Hartshorn.

The choir will be able to add handsomely to the organ fund as a result of the entertainment.

LAURA HUGHES' LECTURE

Don't fail to hear Miss Laura Hughes speak in the Collegiate Hall on Thursday evening of this week. The franchise of women will be discussed, as well as other important questions pertaining to women's work. Admission is free.

MEN OFFERING EQUAL FRANCHISE

WOMEN POSSESS THE SENSE OF RESPONSIBILITY AND THE ABILITY THAT GO TO MAKE FULL CITIZENSHIP.

An encouraging feature of the campaign for equal franchise in Ontario is the interest taken in the question by the thinking men of the country. Men of all shades of politics, both in England and Canada, are publicly stating that women should possess the franchise, not as a reward for the zeal and self-sacrifice they have shown since the war began; not because they have shown that women possess the sense of responsibility, and the ability that goes to make full citizenship. Sir George Foster has declared himself in favor of woman suffrage, and says: "When the inequality of voting is done away with, a new impetus will be given, especially in questions of social and moral reform, to the great body of democracy of the country."

Hon. Wm. Pugsley is working to secure the Federal franchise for the women of Manitoba, who now have the vote, and are also entitled to seats in the Legislature.

Hon. N. W. Rowell has supported the equal franchise movement for years.

At present the men of Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia have granted the vote to woman; have made her a partner in the duties of citizenship. Can the men of Ontario do less?

Gave Lecture Before The Ministerial Ass'n

PROF. THOMAS DISCUSSED GERMANY AND THE BIBLE.

Rev. Prof. W. H. Griffith Thomas of Wycliffe College, Toronto, was the speaker at an open meeting of the Ministerial Association held in the Y.M.C.A. last night. Prof. Thomas delivered a thoughtful and illuminating lecture on Germany and the Bible, which was followed by the deep attention of his audience.

Musical numbers were contributed by Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Lock of Mark St. Church, and by Miss McLaren of St. Andrew's. Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

The meeting was pronounced one of the most successful in the history of the association. Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., presided.

Funeral Held Today

Rev. R. B. Grobb conducted the funeral service over the remains of the late James Charles Blake at All Saints' Church this afternoon. The funeral was under the auspices of the Oddfellows, who were largely represented. Members of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers Club also attended.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE VILLAGE

FRENCH WIN ON MEUSE HEIGHTS AND IN THE APREMONT FOREST

KADENI VILLAGE TAKEN BY STORM BY THE RUSSIANS

In Counter With Massed Formations Enemy Suffered Great Losses and Failed to Reach Trenches.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 17.—An official statement says Russian detachments, after artillery preparation, took by storm the village of Kadeni, southwest of Galatz. The enemy, reinforced, attempted to regain the village, but his massed formations, under our concentrated fire, suffered great losses and failed to reach our trenches. In a night attack our detachments drove the Germans out of Gerleschi, southwest of the mouth of the River Rimnik, but were later compelled to withdraw before superior enemy forces.

Western Front. — The enemy is conducting intense infantry fire in the region of the Zoborow Zlochoff railway and south of Augustowka. To the south of Svistelniki the enemy exposed his machine guns with which he bombarded our trenches, but by a successful well-aimed shell the machine guns were damaged.

LEGAL ASSOCIATES PAY TRIBUTE TO JUDGE RUDDY

Judge R. Ruddy was presented with a handsome gilt mantel clock yesterday afternoon by the members of the Peterborough Law Association. The presentation was made at the annual meeting of the members of the Bar to one of their number whose abilty as a lawyer had been recognised by the Government, and given a seat on the bench.

Mr. R. R. Hall, the president of the association, congratulated Judge Ruddy on his recent elevation to the bench and assured him that the appointment caried with it the satisfaction and approval of every member, much as his loss to Peterborough would be felt. They all wished him a very prosperous, successful and long career on the bench, which his experience well filled him for.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., who was called on by the President to make the presentation, stated that sometimes we have to do things irksome; other times it was something pleasant. It was a great pleasure to congratulate Mr. Ruddy on his appointment to a lofty position. It was natural for a lawyer to look up to being a judge. It was the highest ambition of a lawyer. Mr. Dumble referred to the high character of the Ontario judges generally, and incidentally gave a slam at the U. S. system of electing judges by popular vote, where a bar room had more power than a man's ability. In Peterborough the county judges had all been men who had given the best of satisfaction to the people and he referred to Judge Mackay, who was the first judge of the United Counties of Peterborough, Victoria and Haliburton, the next one was Judge Hall, who knew everyone in the counties, and, as Mr. Dumble said, knew just what value to put on a man'th oath. Judge Boucher, Judge Dennistown, Judge Weller and Judge Huycke all succeeded. He knew the onerous duties of a judge, but felt confident of Mr. Ruddy's capabilities to give satisfaction, and wished him a long life to enjoy the position. Mr. Dumble presentel him with the beautiful clock and a box of flowers for Mrs. Ruddy and wished that the fragrance of the flowers would be ever with them.

Judge Ruddy was warmly received when he rose to respond. He said that one hardly knew how to express the feeling of thanks that he felt was due the members of the association. He had only been in Peterborough for about six years and during that time his associations both socially and professionally had been the most pleasant. Peterborough solicitors have never been known to take undue advantage of one another and they were looked upon as the high ranking asociation in the province. He would endeavor to follow up the high ideals set out for the proper conduct of the bench Judge Ruddy referred also to the great patriotism shown by every member. He regretted that Mrs. Ruddy was not able to accept the invitation to be present, but delivered her message, "That when the members and their wives visited Whitby they would find the latch string on the outside of the door."

Judge Huycke did not take the same pleasure out of Mr. Ruddy's elevation to the bench as the other members did over this opportunity. It meant the severing of close associations which dated back thirty

GREEK COUNCIL ACCEPTS WITHOUT RESERVATION

And According to Despatch Venizelists Will be Released Shortly.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 17. — An Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says the Greek Government, at a council on Tuesday afternoon, accepted the Entente's ultimatum without reservation, and that the release of the Venizelists arrested early in December is expected hourly.

Y.M.C.A. MEMBERSHIP 675 30,000 SOLDIERS' VISITS; ENLISTMENTS TOTAL 253

A GOOD YEAR

MR. C. N. MESERVE
General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association

Messrs. G. A. Gillespie and Thos. Barrie were re-elected to the directorate of the Y. M. C. A. at he annual meeting last night, and Messrs. R. L. Dobbin and J. E. Smith were elected to the board to fill vacancies made by the retirement of Dr. Moir and Mr. J. J. Howden. It was with regret that Dr. Moir and Mr. Howden were released from the board, for both have given valuable service. Mr. Howden has seen over fifteen years' service as a director and will remain on the board of trustees.

Reports were given by the general secretary, the boys' work secretary and the physical director.

Mr. Meserve's report dealt with generalities and contained the following:

To our president, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, to our treasurer, Mr. J. J. Turner, and to our finance committee chairman, Mr. Thos. Barrie, we are especially indebted for days of valuable time and wise counsel.

To the many friends and supporters of our work, though we find it impossible to mention each by name, we extend our deep appreciation, and our one desire this new year is to make good in your sight and to honor our Christ. This must be our best year of service, for the results of the past year, which we report here, should be but the foundation on which a better future is built.

The alterations to the building have fully met our expectations, increasing the efficiency of supervision and making possible a great forward step in boys' work at a most strategical time. The building change increased dormitory accommodations for young men from twelve to twenty-six, and consequently our cash receipts from this source for 1916 were $1721.25, or about double the yearly average of the past. We have appreciated the opportunities of serving a larger number of young men who are away from home influences and are pleased to state that 175 different men have occupied our dormitories during the past year.

Work for boys eighteen years of age and under has been the big feature of the Y. M. C. A. work this past year, and will continue to be so, at least until after the war. We are fortunate in having for a boys' secretary a man thorough informed regarding the Canadian Standard Efficiency Movement, for these tests are the basis of all lines of Association efforts in Peterborough. Outside of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Galley has given much time to promoting and developing the efficiency tests in Sunday school classes and has made great progress in raising the ideals of both Sunday school teachers and students. Mr. Galley's report gives the boys' activities in detail and shows most pleasing results.

After War Problem.

Boys 16 to 18 years of age have of necessity been granted senior privileges during restricted hours, as the growth of the boys' work has even now outgrown the recent enlarged facilities. We will face an actual problem after the war when the regular senior work is fully resumed, for the prospects are that the capacity of our building will be taxed to its utmost, but this problem is really a pleasant one to anticipate.

Our physical director, Mr. Roper, in his report, presents the work of his department in detail, and we are pleased to note that classes for boys under 18 years of age and for business men and professional men have increased greatly in both attendance, interest and efficiency. The senior gymnasium class has suffered more than any part of the work as the result of the demands of war, but it is a credit to our work to note that military men speak in the highest terms of the quality of recruits obtained from the Y. M. C. A. We are fortunate in having a physical director who not only ranks high in his profession, but who is also brotherly and symapthetic as well as trained and efficient. Every young man in Peterborough would be the better for personal contact with Mr. Roper.

Billiard fees show the tables in use 3,360 hours, or perhaps a total of 5,400 games played.

Religious Work.

From 125 to 150 boys and young men are found each week in some form of Y. M. C. A. special religious work, but the religious work extends

SAY COMPANY IS NOT TO BLAME

DE LAVAL EMPLOYES MAKE PUBLIC STATEMENT.

A committee appointed by the employes of the De Laval Company called at The Review office today and made the following statement with regard to a misunderstanding with their employers:

The employes were given a raise last summer and were promised another at the first of the year. When a committee asked Supt. Rider for it, they allege, used language so abusive that the working force quit in a body.

They then sent a letter to Manager Breyfogle giving their reasons for quitting work. This letter was answered by Engineer Sangster, who stated that the company had no objection to their men getting other employment at higher wages, especially if such work had to do with the making of munitions.

The employes have no quarrel with the company and are willing to go back to work as soon as an understanding is reached. Their only complaint is with reference to the reception they received from Supt. Rider.

MAIL SERVICE IS NOT GIVING SATISFACTION

The mail service between Montreal and Peterborough is not satisfactory and letters addressed to this city from the former place often arrive twenty-four hours behind time. Mr. J. H. Ferguson has been collecting evidence among the business men, and this is to be submitted to Capt. Burnham, who will take the matter up with the Department.

GERMAN RAIDER SINKS TEN MERCHANTSHIPS IN SOUTH ATLANTIC

Eight British and Two French Steamers Destroyed in South Atlantic---Crews Picked up by Japanese Vessel.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The following announcement was given out here officially today: For some time past it had been assumed that the following British and French merchant ships, which had been long overdue, had been sunk by a German raider:

British — Dramatist, Radnorshire, Minie, Netherby Hall, Mount Temple, King George, Georgic, and Voltaire.

French — Nantes and Asnieres.

....Definite information has now been received from Pernambuco confirming this assumption. On the evening of Monday, the Japanese steamer Hudson Maru arrived off Pernambuco, having on board the masters and 237 men of the crews of some of the lost vessels which were sunk on various dates between December 12th and January 12th. In addition the steamer St. Theodore was captured and a prize crew put on board, and the steamer Yarrowdale was captured and sent away with about four hundred men, the crews of other sunken vessels, who were to be landed.

No further news has yet been received of their whereabouts.

An earlier despatch from London says: Eight British and two French merchant vessels are believed to have been sunk by the German raider.

A news agency despatch from Buenos Aires, received in New York, says a German raider, believed to be the steamer Vineta, has sunk 10 merchant steamers and two French schooners in the South Atlantic, according to despatches from Pernambuco and Rio, reporting the landing of survivors.

One despatch from Rio says the raider had sunk still another British ship without warning, causing the loss of four hundred persons. No official report has yet been received at Buenos Aires.

GERMAN LINES ENTERED BY FRENCH PATROLS

Success in Heights of Meuse and in Apremont Forest---German Attacks Repulsed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 16.—(Noon.)—After a bombardment last evening, German troops attacked French lines east of Clery and south of Blaches in the Somme region. They were repulsed, the war office announced today. A minor attack by Germans at Les Eparges, southeast of Verdun, also was repulsed. After hand-to-hand fighting French patrols penetrated German lines at several points on heights of the Meuse in the Verdun region and in Apremont forest.

SIX RECRUITS ADDED TO 247TH BATTALION TO-DAY; FOUR COME FROM LANG

Encouraging Reports From Other Points.

There is a smile of gladness on the faces of the officers at the Armories this morning as last night and this morning no less than six men have been added to the strength of the battalion. Four of the new recruits came from Lang in Otonabee, one from Havelock and the other was attested at Millbrook. There were five men in the contingent from Lang and one was found not up to the standard of physical fitness required by the medical examiners.

These attestments bear out the report of the recruiting officers that the prospects for new members of the 247th are good. All that it needs is a little encouragement from the citizens generally and the men will come forward and endeavor to enlist at any rate.

The New Recruits

Another "100 Club"

Lieut. Col. Ackerman was in Millbrook last night and formed the nucleus of one of the "100 clubs." He also addressed a very large and enthusiastic meeting of the citizens, showing the souvenirs of the battlefront and explaining how each article played a part in the world war. The gas helmets and bombs were of especial interest to the audience.

The commanding officer was successful in getting one recruit and was more than pleased at the prospects for many more.

The 247th band was in attendance at the meeting and gave a splendid concert. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston contributed a duet to the program.

Four Out of Five

Sergt. Latimer is quite pleased with his recruiting campaign in Otonabee. He brought in five recruits and four of the men passed the examination.

Pte. Tutton Missing

Pte. George H. Tutton, a brother of Pte Jack Tutton of the 93rd Batt. is officially reported as wounded and missing. He went overseas with the 59th Batt.

The Review has received a postcard from Flight Sub-Lieut. F. C. Cressman, who is in France.

HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Health Association will be held in the City Council chamber on Friday at 8 p.m. It is hoped that all interested in this important work will attend.

RAISE $10,000 FOR THE BRITISH SAILORS' RELIEF

Ask City Council for $6000 and County Council for $4000 by Taxation.

The Peterborough branch of the British Sailors' Relief Fund held a meeting last evening to discuss the ways and best means of raising a fund for the benefit of this splendid organization. It is the desire of the parent organisation to raise $500,000 in Canada for this purpose. Canada has never done anything towards assisting disabled sailors of the navy and it is for this purpose that the association was formed.

Mr. F. D. Kerr presided and there were present Messrs. Dunsford, Harstone, Buller, Ackerman, Stocker, Pennefather, Hall, Armstrong, McElhiney, Abbott, Stabler, Dobbin, Worth, Eastwood and Mayor Duffus.

The amount decided on as the share of Peterborough county was $10,000. Messrs. Ackerman and Stabler thought that it could be best raised by subscription, but the majority were in favor of having it raised by a general assessment on the city and county.

A committee was formed to wait on the city and county councils asking that they raise the amount required by taxation, the city to raise $6,000 and the county $4,000. The committee to wait on the municipal bodies will be composed of those present except the Mayor and aldermen.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 17, 1917

RESTS WITH COUNCIL.

LAST YEAR the aldermen refused to take any action with regard to the establishing of public bathing places on the plea that there was no money for the purpose. Pressure was not brought to bear on them by the Playgrounds Association and other friends of the movement until the estimates for the year had been passed.

The city fathers will have no such excuse left them this year. A delegation of influential citizens, headed by Mr. C. N. Meserve, of the Y. M. C. A., will present their case to Council in ample time to have the necessary expense provided for when the amount of money to be raised this year is decided upon.

Besides the representations that will be made by Mr. Meserve and his colleagues, there are a number of petitions, circulated last year by Mr. M. E. Ketcheson, to be laid before the aldermen. These petitions cannot fail to convince the most obdurate civic representative, if there is a single alderman in need of conviction, that the demand for bathing places is unanimous among the classes who will be most benefited by them.

The question of expense should, after all, not be a serious consideration. The main point is to establish the bath-houses, and all outlay could be provided for by charging a small fee, as is done in some other cities. Patrons of these places would probably prize their privileges more if they were required to pay a trifle for them. But the money can be furnished, if not by the city, then from private sources. What is wanted most of all now is something in the way of official action. Ald. Dobbin is one man who can be counted upon to devise suitable ways and means for such an improvement, and the support of his colleagues will not be lacking.

"DON'T SEE US STUCK."

"DON'T SEE US STUCK" is the message which Capt. Burnham brings back from the men in the trenches to the people of Canada. The appeal should be echoed from every recruiting platform in the country and flashed everywhere before the eyes of the public. If the slacker can turn a deaf ear to the call, then his case is hopeless. The Canadian soldiers are carrying on a fight under trying conditions and against heavy odds. Is it any wonder that they send back to Canada a request for aid, a request signed by men in actual service and by those whose injuries have put them out of the running. "Don't see us stuck" will furnish an excellent text for many a recruiting speech in the days to come.

Capt. Burnham has issued a neatly printed pamphlet setting forth the appeal and giving the names of those who signed it. He also adds a brief account of his visit to the trenches and what he saw there. In one paragraph of his story he draws the following picture of the great need of the hour:

> Tired and depleted battalions must be relieved and filled up. The war continues. The crisis of the war and with it the fate of the British Empire, is not perhaps a year away. Four-fifths of the Canadian fighting force has left Canadian shores. The spectre of a failing supply begins to point with its warning finger. Already those at the front are apprehensive. The credit, the honor, and the existence of the British Empire, and of Canada, are at stake. The men and women at the front look wistfully to you. The hour of your trial and theirs is near at hand. It is not necessary to appeal to feeling, the appeal to reason should suffice. Canadians are a people of spirit. It is spirit alone that raises men above the brute. What part, then, have Canadians in these things? What is the Empire, which they have helped to build, to them? It is the home of their valiant ancestors who lie buried in it, of those who knew no such word as falter. It is the home of those who were reared in the simple joys of British freedom. It is the hope of those who must choose between the iron rule of the German and the progress of Democracy. What is the duty of Canada at this hour, what is the urgent need?

"Don't see us stuck." This is meant for the eligibles, but those who cannot fight but can pay will see their opportunity in the message.

WOMAN'S RIGHT TO VOTE.

WHEN PREMIER HEARST was called upon recently by a delegation of women who want the franchise, he told them that, whatever his personal feelings might be—and he rather more than hinted that he favored the reform—there were many matters to consider in connection with the proposition. When he passed the Ontario Temperance Act he took not only his own political life, but that of his cabinet and his party, in his hands. It would hardly be the part of wisdom, he maintained, to take further chances by adopting additional legislation of a drastic nature, especially during war time.

If Premier Hearst really wishes to strengthen his hands and make the Ontario Temperance Act a fixture, he should, at the coming session of the Legislature, enfranchise the women of Ontario. This would be a move in the interests of progress and would bring to his standard more support than he is likely to lose by reason of his advanced temperance legislation. Three-fourths of the women of this province would support prohibition through thick and thin and could more than offset any opposition that may develop against it.

As stated in an article in The Review yesterday, there is an effort on foot to confer the right to vote in Dominion elections upon those women who have been enfranchised by the legislatures of western provinces. There should really be no difficulty on this score. One of the anomalies of our election system is the variety of voters' lists there are in existence. Any elector, male or female, who has the right to vote for a member of the legislature, should have the same right when it comes to electing members of the Dominion Parliament. There should be less of red tape and fewer wheels within wheels in our election machinery. One list of voters should suffice for all purposes, and the presence of a name on the rolls of those entitled to the franchise should not depend on the vigilance of party workers, but should be recorded by the electors themselves, whether in the cities or in the rural constituencies.

"RALPH CONNOR" GETS LIGHT.

THE TORONTO Saturday Night has the following comment:

> If the war has accomplished nothing else it has helped to broaden the views of Rev. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, better known as "Ralph Connor," the Canadian novelist. Prior to the war, Mr. Gordon had become an evangelist, and was the doyen of the most extreme "reformers" of the West. When the war broke out he went overseas as a chaplain. Brought into that direct contact with realities which active service compels, he has returned to Canada, with the message that he has learned to smoke and enjoy cigarettes, and he further asserts that he would as soon take the rifles out of the hands of our soldiers as their daily ration of rum. In a country like this it requires a great deal of moral courage in a man who has enjoyed the peculiar position of "Ralph Connor," to tell the plain truth as he sees it, and he has met the test. He will probably find that the task of instilling common sense into those who wish to abolish the cigarette and have denounced the rum ration as criminal, thorny and difficult. Nevertheless his latest utterance has done more to prove that he is a man with the courage of his convictions than all his previous activities.

This statement by Canada's noted preacher-author should silence the last rumble of objection on the part of those who are opposed as a matter of principle to the sending of tobacco in any form, and especially cigarettes, to the boys in the trenches. There are few left to combat the idea that liquor has medicinal qualities, especially when the conditions under which the soldiers live are taken into consideration.

OLD LANDMARK GONE.

THE DESTRUCTION by fire yesterday of the high school building at Brampton appeals to several residents of Peterborough almost as a personal loss by reason of old associations. It was in that building that Mr. Cortis Fessenden first made his reputation as a mathematician and a teacher, leaving Brampton in the early eighties for Napanee, from which town he came to this city. Mr. R. Lees, county school inspector, was for seven years a member of the high school teaching staff in Brampton. There are a number of residents in this city who graduated from that temple of learning and who passed through the ordeals of the departmental examinations under its roof in Mr. Fessenden's day.

THE LATE ADMIRAL DEWEY.

ADMIRAL DEWEY, just dead at his home in Washington, probably held the most unique naval record in the world. When the Spanish-American war broke out he was commodore of the Pacific squadron and received orders to find the Spanish fleet and give battle. He encountered the warships of the enemy one Sunday morning in Manilla Bay, and in a short engagement destroyed the majority of the fleet and captured the remainder, all this without the loss of a man or the slightest injury to his own vessels. All the land fortifications, too, fell into his possession. It was Dewey who practically defied to combat a German squadron of warships that were stationed at that point, when the Teutonic admiral showed a disposition to interfere with the operations of the Amercans.

Admiral Dewy became the idol of the American nation. He was promoted by Congress, and the people presented him with a palatial home in Washington, purchased by popular subscription. The admiring public, too, would have made him President if he had said the word.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE LATEST shifting panorama—the Liberal party in Ontario.

SIR CHARLES DAVIDSON shatters another wavering hope of the Liberals with the muck rake.

• • • •

THE CHANCES of the Liberals in any riding where conditions are normal are not worth even a nickel.

• • • •

THEN AGAIN, a parliament of women might lose no prestige by comparison with that gathering of masculine lore at Ottawa.

AS HE SURVEYS the battlefield Hartley Dewart probably hugs himself because he had the foresight to disclaim the leadership.

• • • •

THE EXAMINER calls it a moral victory. It was all of that, but the moral was on the opposite side of the fence from that taken by our contemporary.

• • • •

THE ATTEMPTS of the Liberal papers to explain the result of the West Simcoe election no longer phase the people, who by this time are becoming used to the horrors of war.

EVEN IF THREE-FOURTHS of the members of the Ontario Legislature were farmers, the agricultural policy of the Government could hardly be more liberal to the tillers of the soil.

Sharp Curve, But—

Sir Wilfrid Laurier told his Quebec compatriots that conscription would never do or be in Canada. Sir Robert Borden told a deputation that voluntary effort would be exhausted first, but that if conscription were necessary he would not hesitate to put it into effect. Many Liberal politicians are advocating conscription and supporting Laurier.

LAY IN BED AND HEAR BIG GUNS

MR. C. KITNEY RECEIVES LETTER FROM HIS BROTHER.

Mr. C. Kitney has received a letter from his brother, Mr. George Kitney, in Radfield, Sittinbourne, Kent, England, who writes: We can lie in bed and hear the big guns in France. We don't seem to be near the end yet. Living is very high. Our potatoes are short this year and they may go up to £80 an acre in the ground. They are worth £14 per ton today in London market. All stock is up. Store bullocks for fattening fetched £38 each at Maidstone this year. All fruit has sold well, plums up to 10s half-bushel, pears 18s bushel, apples from 8s to 18s per bushel.

We have had nine men go from our farm. I suppose the War Office will let us have men who are too disabled for service.

The writer sends a local paper with a picture of his son, who has won a medal for bravery on the field.

IF YOU CANNOT FIGHT, THEN PAY

Fight or Pay! These are the alternatives that are before the people of Canada today. From taking one or the other of them there is no escape for the man of military fitness.

All of us must make sacrifices if the war is to be won. That is so self-evident a proposition that it should not be necessary to make it. Yet there are people who even yet do not accept it as applying to themselves. In the matter of financial sacrifices, many a man is beginning to say to himself that he has given as much as he should be expected to give. But where is he to draw the line if he is in earnest about "Doing his bit' to win the war?

Plainly, there is one place at which he cannot draw it, and that is where the claims of the Canadian Patriotic Fund present themselves.

If there is one Fund more than another that must be maintained, at cost of sacrifices, if need be, it is this one. The work it has undertaken cannot be allowed to drop. The dependents of our soldiers must be protected against want, privation or unnecessary suffering. All Canada has pledged itself to the men at the front that their families will be looked after, and that pledge must be fulfilled.

For 1917 the call on Ontario will be $6,000,000. Of this large sum about $4,000,000 will have to be raised from individuals. It is clear, therefore, that no good citizen can say that his subscription will not be needed. If he cannot Fight, it is up to him to Pay.

ANNA DALE ON TEACUP MORALITY

There is this to be said about morality—conventional morality, I mean—it has, at any rate, added an element of excitement to the commonplace everyday. If we could each of us follow our own desires, we should not care two straws if Mrs. Jones lunched two days running with Mr. Robinson alone in a quiet little restaurant with no one except a round dozen waiters—or is it a dozen of round waiters?

As it is, we thrill more under the circumstances than if a bomb burst in our immediate vicinity. And why? For the simple reason that it is "agin the rules"—"agin" the moral rules. And what are these moral rules, you ask? Well, they are the rules which presuppose that when two people of the opposite sex meet more than twice running alone—as per arrangement— they will very soon meet in a far greater intimacy than is possible in a public restaurant. In the world of strictly moral behaviour thieves are out to catch thieves, and there is no honor among any of them. It is all very absurd, of course, and speaks very lowly of everybody.

The moral point of view always presupposes the worst, and if there be one person who is au fait with the acts and thoughts of sinners, she is Mrs. Grundy. Yet there is this to be said for this poke-bonneted old busy-body—without her evil mind the majority of men and women would have absolutely nothing to talk about except the weather. They would have nothing to worry over except their own lives—and could anything be duller? So the most innocent acts become the foundations of an immense hubbub in a teacup—and most lives are teacup lives, after all. Thus, though social morality is of all things the least social as well as the least moral, without it most men and women would die from too much "humdrum." As for the drama, it would expire on the spot. More than half modern plays are built around the awful consequences of Mrs. Jones talking too often and too long to Mr. Robinson. I suppose we ought not really to care if Mrs. Jones eloped with Mr. Robinson, since we don't know Mrs. Jones and Mr. Robinson always was a bore of the first water. But we do care, though Heaven alone knows why, except perhaps for the reason each woman sees herself a prospective "Mrs. Jones" and each man wonders secretly what he himself would do were he for a short time to be Mr. Robinson.

APPETITE AND MORTALITY

In Southern California several ages ago the oil escaping from a small spring formed in a depression of the earth a little pool. The lighter portions of the oil evaporated, leaving the sticky asphalt. From time to time the rains covered the surface of the pool with water, animals and birds came down to drink, sank into the asphalt and were imprisoned in this gigantic animal trap. The hungry wolves saw there before their eyes fresh animal food of every sort, from the enormous mastodon to the smallest bird. They, too, were drawn into the trap, as were also the large, saber toothed tigers which then roamed that vicinity. Today scientists are engaged in excavating the bones deposited there by indiscreet appetite.

The aim of civilization is to create inhibition, the quality which holds back and directs to useful purposes the natural appetites, preventing them from leading man into the pitfalls which beset over-indulgence. Hunger is the great stimulus of action, but when it is satisfied to satiety sodden inactivity follows. If the natural appetitie is allowed to dominate it leads to over-indulgence and the unwary victim suddenly finds himself in a trap from which he cannot escape.

One of the great elements in maintaining health is the regulation of the bodily intake to meet the appetite. The man who works with his hands requires more food than the brain worker. The man who labors in the open air needs more nourishment than he who sits cooped in an office all day long. Give the sedentary worker the appetite of the day laborer and if that appetite be uncontrolled the body will become clogged with the poisonous products of its own manufacture and physical deterioration will surely follow.

It is just as bad to eat too much as it is to eat too little. To indulge the appetite to too great an extent is equally as pernicious as its constant repression. The best is to be found in an average course, neither overindulgence nor under-indulgence, neither the following of the inelastic dietary nor the promiscuous and ill considered use of foods.

Many a so called case of dyspepsia is nothing in the world but the rebellion of an overworked stomach, the remonstrance of a body which has been stuffed to repletion.

A great deal has been accomplished in the reduction of infant mortality, because we are able to control what infants may eat. Adults must for themselves exercise self-control.

If this is done there will be a decline in our adult mortality rates and an increase in health and efficiency.

"Why, father," exclaimed the young lady, in tones of indignation, "what do you mean?"

"I noticed when I passed through the hall late last night," answered the old man, "that he had two heads upon his shoulders."

He was not much of a horseman; in fact, the only horse he could ride was the wooden one of his nursery days, so small wonder that the roughriding sergeant-major got exasperated.

"Why don't you get inside, you bily idiot?' roared the sergeant-major as he came to grief for the sixth time.

"I would," growled the angry recruit, "if his mouth was as big as yours."

"Twobble is always being mentioned for some kind of office. I wonder why he never gets appointed to one?

"I suspect that's because Twobble's friends are the sort of people who wish you well without stopping to see whether their wishes are carried out or not.'

WHATEVER SHE LIKED

By Isabel Ecclestone Mackay

Miss Lenore Helmick, with the cab waiting, paused at the door and looked back with that gracious smile which she kept in cold storage and produced occasionally for the benefit of her dependents.

"Remember, Una," said she, "during my absence you are quite free. Employ your time as you see fit, with the exception of the glass and pewter—I have no further directions.".

"Thank you, Miss Helmick." Una held a theory that it is not derogatory to one's self-respect to address one's employer as "mam"; but in practice she always said "Miss Helmick."

"And Una, you are quite sure that you are not afraid of burglars?"

"Not at all, Miss Helmick."

"Very well. Now don't forget—the glass and pewter, but otherwise whatever you like! Good-bye and a merry Christmas!"

Una looked after the retreating cab with a shadowy smile. Then she closed the door and returned to the kitchen to finish washing the luncheon dishes. Una Lee was supposed to be Miss Helmick's secretary, but as there were no secretarial duties and plenty of housework, the name may be taken in a Pickwickian sense, merely. The euphemism was supposed to spare Una's feelings ("such a nice refined girl!") and perhaps it did. Una never said that it didn't.

To-day as she washed the lunchen dishes she made them clatter more than usual and to their clattering she sang a little song to the tune of John Brown. The words seemed to be these:

"Lenore Helmick is a selfish, selfish thing
"Lenore Helmick is a selfish, selfish thing
"Lenore Helmick is a selfish, selfish thing
"A selfish, selfish thing!"

"And the very last straw," she added in a louder voice, "was to tell me to do exactly as I like!"

She shut the cupboard door with a bang and went into the sitting room to put out the fire in the grate. But at the door a sense of difference in the room came to her. She drew a long breath: Miss Helmick was gone. It was no longer Miss Helmick's sitting room. It was just a sitting room for anyone who wanted to sit in it. Why put the fire out at all? Una looked around with an appraising air. The old china and glass and pewter, which were Miss Helmick's hobbies, looked bright and cosy behind their glass doors, the firelight reflected itself in polished furniture. "But as I can do exactly as I like," said Una aloud, "I do not like to have the Rev. Horatio Helmick for a wall decoration." The cat who was the only other living occupant of the room looked up at the portrait and purred approval. It certainly was a fright of a portrait. It had side-burns, a rigid jaw, piggy eyes!

The wall looked cleaner, more friendly without it, and Una and the cat settled down contentedly together upon the hearth rug.

A fire is such a splendid thing for dreams! Of course, as we have hinted before, Una was a philosopher. She accepted her state in life as Miss Helmick's secretary and intended to go on accepting it until such time as she should have saved enough to take her teacher's certificate. But she hated it with a perfectly unphilosophical hatred and there were times when she declared that she would give her soul for dozens of silk stockings and real lace and dresses made at Stitts. This proved that she had never yet learned much about souls. The cat who wore a beautiful gown herself, understood the girl's feelings exactly and expressed her sympathy by purrs and rubs and soft nosings.

"I should so like to know what it all feels like!" said Una, after a long pause and apropos of nothing. Then, suddenly, as if inspired by an energising idea, she tumbled the cat upon the rug and ran out of the room.

* * * * *

That night the cat had no five o'clock tea, no saucer of cream, no bit of buttered toast. She was, in fact, a neglected cat, and wondered very much what had happened to her comfortable cat-world. No one came near her, the door of the sitting room did not open again until long after the room was dark save for the glow of the sinking fire. Then it opened rather softly and a lady came in. The cat was puzzled, for the lady seemed to be neither Miss Helmick nor Una. She was just a lady and a very pretty one. She wore a gown of Dutch blue. It had a square-cut neck and high, puffed sleeves both banded with dull blue and gold embroidery; a band of the same confined soft masses of brown hair. The gown was very long and, as the lady lifted it to keep herself from tripping, it could be seen that her stockings were of Dutch blue silk and that the slippers, which matched them, were several sizes too large. An observant person, too, might have wondered why the Empire bodice lapped over at the back and why the lady wore a long pair of black suede gloves. There was another little detail—missed by a mere cat—the lady's eyes matched her gown!

When the intruder had brightened up the fire, which she did in a most business like manner, she sank down in front of it and gathered the amazed cat into her Dutch blue lap. She seemed like a person utterly at peace with the world. Presently, as the reawakened fire began to ask, with many cracklings, for more fuel, the lady without rising stretched out her hand and pressed an electric bell.

Its summons could be heard thrilling somewhere in the silent house but no footstep answered it. Then an odd thing happened. She in the chair turned toward the door and spoke, with a little abrupt commanding air, to someone who was not there.

"Una, you may put some more coal upon the fire."

"And Una," the voice this time was directed to an invisible maid beside the coal scuttle, "I would like you to prepare some chocolate and light refreshment for eleven o'clock. Someone is certain to drop in to-night."

Scarcely were the words uttered when the brisk ringing of the door bell fulfilled their prophecy. Save for for the startling promptitude there was nothing strange in this but its effect upon the lady was more than strange. At the first tinkle she sprang erect in her chair, one hand flew directly to her heart, her lips were parted and breathless. She looked like a rather badly frightened girl. The cat, dislodged by the sudden movement, rolled comfortably upon the floor.

Again the bell rang.

A third time it rang and then continued to ring. Some one was keeping a finger upon the button! The girl pulled herself together and snatching a long shawl-like rug from the couch wrapped it carefully around her, hiding the lowcut neck and the white bareness of her arms above the gloves.

Then she went to the door.

The man was tall and big and a stranger. The girl felt glad of that. A man would probably not notice the unusual ornament upon her hair. She felt this in the first moment of the opening of the door. After that she was too astonished to feel anything clearly, for the man was gazing at her with the frankest admiration and delight and with that absence of reserve which comes only wit old acquaintanceship.

"Well, upon my word!" said the man, and the girl felt her small gloved hands clasped firmly in his large bare ones. Then, before she could utter a word, he stepped in and shut the door.

They stood together in the lighted hallway staring at each other with mutual wonder. He still held her hands. Then the man's eyes which were grey and clear grew suddenly misty! He dropped her hands and there was a certain hoarseness in his voice as he said:

"By Jove! It's good to see you."

"But," faltered the girl, finding her voice at last, "I am not sure—"

Amazed surprise swept over the man's face. Then with a gleeful laugh he took off his fur cap.

"You know me now don't you, Lenny?"

"Lenny?" Where had she heard that name—Yes, of course it had been Miss Helmick's name before she had insisted upon the more poetical "Lenore." In a flash the girl's quick brain guessed whom the stranger must be. Miss Helmick talked much lately of a cousin who was vaguely expected—

"Oh, yes, I know you now" she blushed charmingly.

It was done. But she had not calculated upon the consequences; for in the most natural way in the world the big stranger caught her up and kissed her.

"O—oh!" breathed Una, shrinking back against the wall. She had turned quite white. But the stranger did not notice; he was busy hanging up his overcoat.

"You have changed!" he said abruptly when a moment later they faced each other in the firelit room. "But not much more than I expected. You are still small and dark and elfish, only—" a mischievious smile twinkled in his blue eyes—"do you remember what you used to look like?"

"N—no."

"Well, look here." He took from his jocket a small carte-photograph. "You would never send me a photograph but I had one just the same. I stole it from Aunt Emma. She used to say that you had the family face and would grow up like her. Once in a while I had an awful fear that you might!" He laughed boyishly and together they bent over the faded photograph. It was the picture of a thin girl of fifteen or thereabouts; she wore a white dress ending in a frill at the ankles; a long braid of black hair was draped with careful artistry over her shoulder. Una recognised the photograph, for, once in helping Miss Helmick put her desk in order, they had come upon a copy of this same photograph. Miss Helmick had burned it promptly, declaring that she had certainly never been such a fright as that! But Una, looking from the full grown aggressiveness of her employer to the shy awkwardness of the girl in the photograph, had felt a decided impulse in favor of the latter.

"Not a bit"; cheerfully, "I always said you would change. Aunt Emma used to call you the ugly duckling, and we all know what happens to ugly ducklings."

The girl glanced swiftly at the piano-top whose principal ornament was a panel photograph of Miss Helmick, tall, full-bosomed, commanding with more than a hint of double chin! Still, if she intended to carry off the situation, there must be no weakening.

"If I may have my hand," she said demurely, "I will turn up the lights."

"Need we? It is so comfy this way. You always understood me, Lenny. If Aunt Emma had been here she would have had lights galore and music and feasting. Do you know," with an embarrassed laugh, "it was because I was half afraid of something like that, that I did not send a definite telegram. But I might have known you better."

CORSETS AND BEAUTY

Few women realise the importance of seeing to it that the particular sort of corsets they buy are exactly and precisely the sort of corsets best suited to their figure.

There are corsets and corsets a corset for every kind of woman and your happiness lies in finding the right sort of corset to suit you. If you are well fitted you are comfortable, you look neat, and your figure is improved. If you have the wrong kind you are punished for your carelessness by shortness of breath, a backache, and a tired feeling after even only a small amount of exertion. If your back aches, if your legs are weary from a short flight of stairs try going without your corsets for a day or two, and see if you have the same trouble.

Never buy a corset except with the understanding that it can be returned if it does not fit you. Don't buy corsets off a bargain table unless you are buying a corset you know and have worn, for the little money you save isn't worth the risk you run of being badly fitted.

When you get a corset, if you are not buying one expensive enough to justify the saleswoman trying it on at the store, consult her as to the model you should have, then take it home and try it on when you have plenty of time. Keep it on fifteen to twenty minutes—sit down in it, walk around and see how you feel. If it isn't perfectly comfortable don't keep it. In spite of what people say, the corsets now are very healthful.

There are two "don'ts" in regard to regard to your corset. Don't wear an old shapeless corset around the house. If you can't afford two good corsets, get one good corset and a cheap corset which fits you, and as your good corset is retired to second place, have it mended and kept in good condition.

The second "don't" is this—don't put your corset on laced up. You aren't always the same size in the first place, and you are missing the real value of the lacing, which is to allow the corset to be adjusted to you. Pull your lacings open each time until the corset is very loose. Hook it up and fasten the front garters. Then start pulling yourself up in the corset—never down—and if you are fleshy it is a good idea, after your corset is laced, to put your hand inside the corset and pull all the flesh you can above the tightest part of the corset.

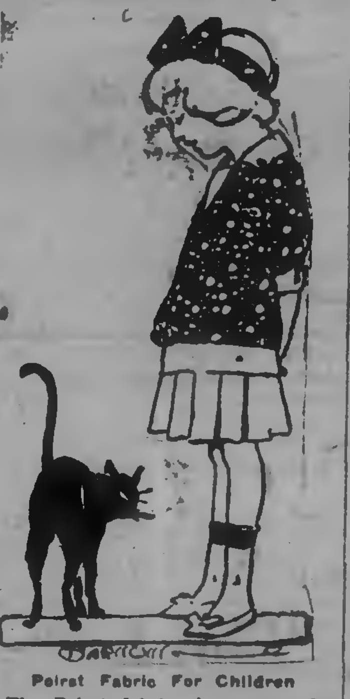
Start your lacing from the bottom of the corset to the waist line, and from the top to the waist line, where the knot is made. Give it a final adjustment by rising on your toes and stretching your hands as far towards the ceiling as possible.

This trick is used by a clever French dancer, who is always extraordinarily at ease in her clothes. Then fasten your other garters and be sure the elastic lies flat against the body, and does not tend to pull the corset crooked.

In most corsets the greatest pressure is in a line around the middle of the body. This is a mistake, and very trying on the organs. The tightest line should be below the abdomen in front, and go round the back by way of the hip bones. The stomach and diaphragm must never suffer any pressure. There should be an outward curve instead of an inward curve at the sides and front of the corset. Many corsets are cut too scantily in this way and, consequently, the bottom rib is pressed in, or bruised, by the corset. This must be avoided.

In tying the adjusted cord at the top of the corset always do it when you are sitting down. If you adjust it when you are standing up the top of your corset cuts in when you are seated.

FASHION HINTS



Poiret Fabric For Children

This is a very simple and stylish every day dress that can be made without much expense and is practically unperishable.

Beating an Egg

To beat an egg quickly, break the egg into an ordinary glass tumbler. Place a piece of clean tissue paper on top. Hold it firmly down all round to keep out the air. Place the other hand on the top of the paper, and shake the tumbler vigorously two or three times. The egg is then ready for use without further effort, and is as well beaten as if whipped for ten minutes.

Women Dentists

Although it is only in recent years that women have qualified as dentists, they have already proved very successful in practice, especially in China and India, where the demand for skilled women dentists is urgent. The secluded native women, however terrible their sufferings may be, are not permitted to consult a male dentist, and even if they were allowed to, those of high caste certainly would not avail themselves of the privilege. Women can now train and take degrees as dentists in the London University; also at the Royal Free Hospital School, and at several other English and Scottish Universities.

HOW TO KEEP CUT FLOWERS

CUT THE STEMS DAILY AND PUT LITTLE CHARCOAL IN THE WATER.

A little care expended on cut flowers will make them last much longer than if they are merely plunged into a vase of water and left to "look after themselves."

In the first place, they should be put in water as soon as possible. If they are tired-looking, put them in water from which the chill is off, and add to it a tiny pich of salt.

Allow flowers plenty of water, and let their stalks have room to take it in. Cut the ends of the stalks daily, and put fresh water in the vases. A little charcoal added to each bowl of flowers will help greatly in keeping them fresh.

Always gather flowers before the sun is on them. If they are not wanted for immediate use, keep them in a dark place with blue paper over them. This retards their growth, and keeps them in excellent condition.

Do not keep cut flowers in a heated room longer than necessary. Put them in a cool place between times; it will restore them wonderfully.

When great quantities of flowers or ferns and greenstuff are required, it is a good plan to fill odd jars, and even common plant pots, with sand. Damp the sand well with water, and arrange the flowers and ferns in it as though they were growing. This is a capital way to beautify odd and unsightly corners, halls, passages, etc.

Bracken fern can be called into service, and will keep fresh if put into well damped sand.

DOLLAR FOR EACH RECRUIT

MARMORA, Jan. 17—A deputation from the 254th Batt. waited upon the Council and asked for a grant to assist in recruiting in Marmora and vicinity. The Council decided to pay the rent of an office, furnish free light and pay the sum of $1 for every soldier recruited.

Mayor's Return is the Signal for Meetings.

Now that Mayor Duffus is home, an almost continuous run of civic committee meetings will likely be held in order to have the wants of the different departments thoroughly inquired into before the arduous task of fixing the rate for 1917 is taken up.

Ald. Wel., chairman of the Board of Works, which is the principle spending department, will have many questions for the serious consideration of the members of his committee. The work on the C.P.R. footbridge will no doubt be one of the first works to be started.

Just what plans Ald. Dobbin will have for street lighting is not known, and for the fire department will largely depend on whether the city's private bill allowing debentures to be issued for motor apparatus is favorably considered by the Legislature.

The estimates for the Police Commissioners will be ready in a few days and handed in for the consideration of the Finance Committee.

The chief problem before the Property Committee will be the approval of a new night soil collection by-law and for providing for a strict observance of the city's plumbing inspection by-law.

Ald. McIntyre will no doubt follow the mayor's suggestion and arrange for an up-to-date advertising campaign to bring before industrial captains the numerous advantages of the city as a manufacturing centre.

The next two weeks will be busy ones for the different chairmen.

PROPHETIC WORDS BY JUDGE IN THE CASE OF HARRY THAW

On Feb. 1, 1908, the jury on the second trial of Harry K. Thaw having returned with a verdict of "not guilty upon the ground of the defendant's insanity at the time of the commission of the act charged in the indictment," Mr. Justice Victor J. Dowling, who presided at the trial in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court, said in part:—

It appears from the testimony that the recurrence of these attacks is reasonably if not absolutely certain, that the period of recurrence is incapable of being estimated or even guessed at by human experience, judgment or foresight. And nobody has testified in this case that there is any possibility of cure from the condition of maniac-depressive insanity.

It furthermore appears that in the maniacal form of manic-depressive insanity in its aggravated forms there is danger of assaults or murders being committed by the person who is troubled or afflicted by this ailment.

In the depressive state of this form of the malady it appears from the testimony that there is danger that a person so afflicted will commit suicide. . . .

The court therefore orders and determines as follows:

The defendant on his trial on the indictment for murder herein having been acquitted by the jury on the ground of insanity, and the court being certified of the fact of the defendant being in custody, and the court deeming his discharge at this time dangerous to the public safety, it is ordered that the said Harry K. Thaw be detained in safe custody and be sent to the Matteawan State Hospital, there to be kept in said hospital until thence discharged by due course of law.

Thaw is now under indictment for assault and has attempted to commit suicide.

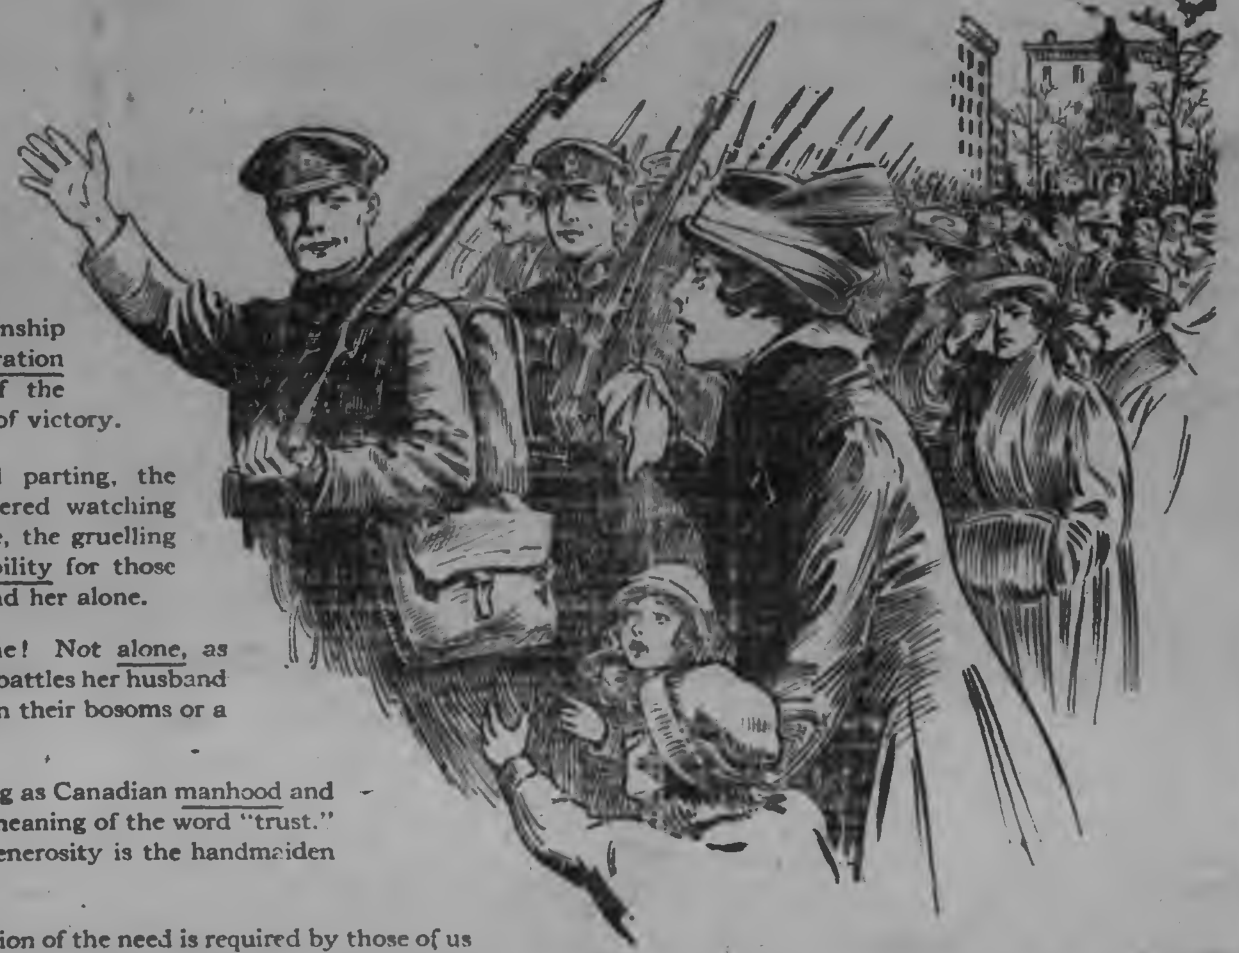
She hath done what she could

Every married man in the ranks of Canada's soldiers means that his wife gave her consent.

His the sacrifice, the danger, yes—but his also the interest of a new experience, the companionship of comrades, the inspiration of action, the thrill of the advance, and the glory of victory.



Her's the pitiful parting, the weary waiting, the fevered watching for the dreaded message, the gruelling grind of daily responsibility for those dependent upon her—and her alone.

No, no, not alone! Not alone, as long as the people whose battles her husband is fighting have a heart in their bosoms or a dollar in their pockets.

Not alone—as long as Canadian manhood and womanhood knows the meaning of the word "trust." Not alone, as long as Generosity is the handmaiden of Duty and Privilege.

Only an appreciation of the need is required by those of us who here at home keep the hearth fires burning. Not for some of us the supreme sacrifice, but for one and all of us at least that whole-hearted answer to the cry of patriotism that never yet has failed to go ringing around the world when the call has come.

TEMPERANCE MAN WANTED TO CARRY THE STANDARD

"Conservative" Says No Pro-Liquor Man Should be Nominated for Provincial Legislature---Hearst Committed to Prohibition.

Editor Review— T[illegible] time is drawing near for Mr. Hearst, the Prime Minister of Ontario, to redeem his promise to the people and to give them a chance to vote on prohibition or not. It is well known that Mr. Hearst is so well pleased with the results of prohibition so far that he intends to adopt complete prohibition as his policy.

The Conservative party in Peterborough are talking about getting their man ready, and no doubt it is high time, but that man must be one who endorses the policy of Mr. Hearst, and not one who has a record of friendship to the liquor interest. No doubt the moderate drinkers, as they are called, on both sides of politics, will combine together to break up the temperance movement in both parties.

It has been suggested that Mr. Gillespie will satisfy both parties in his temperance policy. That may be true, but he is anxious to get Mr. Rowell in power, and, while Mr. Rowell is a fine man, we think the policies of the Whitney Government, which have meant no scandals and good square dealings with us all, are too good to throw away simply because some man wants to get into office.

The argument works both ways. If Mr. Gillespie is good enough for both parties in Peterborough, Mr. Hearst ought to be good enough for both parties in Toronto, but the Liberals don't look at it in that way. They only think themselves that they ought to be in power and that the Conservatives, if they were successful in their temperance measure, ought to let them get in; but anybody can see that the shoe is on the other foot. But I am not so anxious to talk politics as I am to say that now that the Conservative party is to be called together this month to choose a provincial candidate, that something ought to be done to shake up the party and prevent its getting into the mixup that it got into before.

Mr. Hearst does not want any man with leanings to liquor. That is well understood, and those men of the party about Peterborough who still like their horn can make up their minds that they won't do. There are temperance men in the Conservative party who have been lifelong abstainers and advocates of the measures that are now before the people, and one of these men must be chosen if the party are to have confidence in their candidate.

So, Mr. Editor, you will not mind me suggesting that our party should go to work soon and get a good clean temperance candidate ready and give him a chance to get the goodwill of the people and get in behind the noble Hearst Government which is doing so much for the people.

Yours truly,

TEMPERANCE CONSERVATIVE.

EXPLOSION IN BOX OF MATCHES

The danger from the ordinary household match was amply demonstrated at a farm house on the Chemong road yesterday afternoon. Three new boxes of matches were lying on the table of Mr. H. Scott's house when suddenly one box exploded from no apparent cause and soon filled the room with the smoke and fumes.

The wood of the matches remained intact, the fuse end only being destroyed.

ars, when Judge Huycke and Mr. uddy were law students together Toronto. Mr. Ruddy was here to icome him to Peterborough when was elevated to the local judge- ip. He regretted the disease that d given Mr. Ruddy so much pain ring the past few years and pre- nted him from being real active in e practice of his profession. Judge nycke said that this reconciled him the loss to Peterborough by Mr. uddy's appointment. He was glad the presentation of the clock, as ticked the moment away, would use him to look back on the time t in Peterborough. Judge uycke was glad that the departing ember was going back to Whitby, hich was in Ontario County, Mr. uddy's old home, to which he was turning with honor and would no ubt be received with gratitude and preciation. There would be lots of ork there and he wished him well d God speed.

apt. Burnham, M.P., joined in the neral regret and expression of elings over the loss Peterborough uld sustain in the departure of dge Ruddy, whom he characteriz- as a genial and learned gentle- an. They had been partners for the st six years and he had profited by e association. Mr. Ruddy occupied very high position in the general estate and was a very studious lawyer. Mr. and Mrs. Ruddy had enjoyed life in Peterborough. Capt. Burnham paid tribute to Mr. Dumble, for whom he had the highest regard.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, of Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough, in his usual jocular manner congratulated Peterborough on its law association. He felt like being an intruder.

Mr. Wearing: Your fee has been paid for this year.

Mr Hall: We will accept your intrusion for another year on the same terms.

Mr. O'Connell then went on to tell of his long association with the members of the Peterborough Bar and reviewed the changes that had taken place in the last twenty years. Col. R. M. Dennistown had left Peterborough and was serving his country; Col. E. B. Edwards was in the West; three members had been elevated to the bench in other places—Judge Roger of Cobourg, Judge Hayes and now Judge Ruddy. Others had gone to the Great Beyond. He spoke of the high characteristics that were found in the members of the Peterborough law members and asked that the new judge give every encouragement to young members. He referred to the consideration and kindness that Judge Huycke had al[illegible] extended to young and inexpe[illegible]ed members of the profession an[illegible]t that Judge Ruddy's experience in Peterborough County would help him live up to the estimable qualities of Judge Huycke. He joined in the expressions of good will add congratulations to Judge Ruddy

RE-ELECTION OF OFFICERS FOR LAW ASSOCIATION

Changes to be Made to Library at Court House.

Mr. R. R. Hall was re-elected president of the Peterborough Law Association at their annual meeting yesterday afternoon. Mr. F. D. Kerr was continued in the office of vice-president, Mr. Joseph Wearing secretary and librarian, and Mr. Basil D. Hall treasurer.

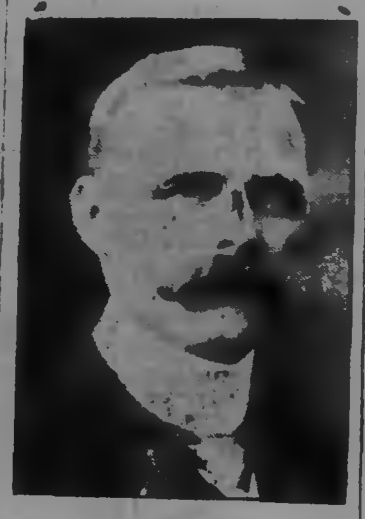
The meeting was fully attended and the financial statement was very gratifying to the members.

When the County Council start to repair the damage to the Court House the association will request certain changes which will make the Peterborough law library one of the most convenient and best equipped in the province.



MR. R. R. HALL.

Annual Report

Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A., read the annual report, as follows:—

During the year Mr. George Edmison, one of the former members of our association, and until a short time ago our County Magistrate, died at the home of his daughter in Toronto. The late Mr. Edmison had a large practice in Peterborough for many years, and afterwards was Police Magistrate for the county for many years more. For a period he was acting-Judge of the county. He was widely known and respected by all and his death was a distinct loss to our association.

Major S. T. Medd of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles returned last fall from overseas service, the condition of his health demanding a period of recuperation. Major Medd returned overseas a few days ago, his furlough expiring on Feb. 1, 1917.

Lieut. J. F. P. Birnie, until recently associated with Mr. R. R. Hall, joined the 52nd Battery, 13th Brig., C.F.A., and is now overseas.

Mr. J. F. Strickland, associated with the firm of Bennet and Goodwill offered his services during the year and is now a lieutenant in the 247th Batt., stationed at Peterborough.

Mr. V. J. McElderry, of the firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, enlisted recently as a private in the 247th Batt., but on account of his ability and training has been sent to Kingston to take an officer's training course.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., who went overseas with the 93rd Batt., has returned to Canada to assist in the recruiting campaign.

Mr. Robert Ruddy, K.C., of the firm of Ruddy & Burnham, has been appointed Judge of the County of Ontario. He was called to the Bar in 1889 and before coming to Peterborough about six years ago, successfully practised for many years in Millbrook. He has the distinction of having appeared as counsel before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. He will carry with him to his new and higher sphere of labor the best wishes of every member of our Bar.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, one of the leading counsel of Peterborough and of the Province and one of the most popular men of this city, has opened an office in Toronto, where he intends to practise. His popularity and reputation as a lawyer in the Province was shown during the year, when he was elected by the members of the Provincial Bar as a Bencher of the Law Society of Upper Canada. The citizens of Peterborough showed the high esteem in which he is held by honoring him recently with a public banquet at which representatives of every profession and interest in Peterborough testified to the high public service rendered by Mr. O'Connell during the twenty years he has practised here and to the high reputation he has attained as a lawyer and a citizen. He will continue his connection in Peterborough and has entered into partnership with Mr. John R. Corkery.

On Monday, Dec. 11, 1916, our law library at the Court House was almost entirely destroyed by fire and water due to the conflagration at the Quaker Oats plant which set fire to the Court House. As soon as possible steps were taken to save as many books as could possibly be saved and all the books recovered are now in the south room of the library, which was only partially damaged. Your president and librarian spent considerable time investigating the damage done to the library and were able to make a reasonably satisfactory settlement with the adjuster of the assurance companies for the sum of $4,500. A few weeks before the fire your librarian added $2,000 to the insurance then on the library and $1,800 from this policy has been paid by the insurance company. It is expected that the $2,700 due from the other policy will be paid in a few days.

A committee consisting of Messrs. R. R. Hall, E. H. D. Hall, F. D. Kerr, G. N. Gordon, J. E. L. Goodwill and Joseph Wearing has been appointed for the purpose of selling or otherwise disposing of damaged books and to purchase other books. The law reports have been sold to Mr. Daniel O'Connell and the committee has ordered on favorable terms the English reprint, the English Revised Reports to complete our present set, the English Law Reports and the English Digest. The members of the association are urged to co-operate with the committee in making the best provision necessary for the new library.

MONUMENT ERECTED AT GERMAN PRISON.

In Memory of Canadians Who Die While Prisoners of War.

Corp. W. Holtham, who is a prisoner of war at Giessen, Germany, has sent the Commandant of the Veterans' Association at Kingston a photograph of a beautiful monument that has been erected in Giessen to the memory of the prisoners of war who have died in German captivity. The architect is Alb. Depondt, and the sculptor Ralph Drouard. The monument is a beautifully executed design, showing the figure of a woman in great grief, kneeling at a tablet, back of which is a large stone containing the inscription.

The monument is situated among trees in a beautiful spot, and gives every evidence that some kind friends have spent thought and money on marking the spot where British prisoners of war, who have died in captivity, rest in Germany.

Corp. Holtham went to the front with the 2nd Batt. from Kingston.

SIGNS ERECTED IN DEFIANCE OF CITY BY-LAW

CITY ENGINEER POINTS OUT VIOLATIONS ARE MADE.

City Engineer Parsons has been having considerable difficulty with persons who place signs in front of their places of business, contrary to the city by-law. It is contrary to the by-law to place any sign projecting over the street less than 8 feet from the sidewalk, and in the case of non-illuminated signs the projection allowed is only 18 inches, and must no be larger on the other side than 24 inches.

In illuminated signs the sizes vary acording to the height from the sidewalk. Where the sign is 8 feet from the sidewalk the maximum projection allowed is 6 ft. 6 in.; where 10 ft. from the sidewalk the projection may be 8 ft., and where 12 ft. from sidewalk the maximum projection is 10 feet.

This regulation will be strictly enforced in future.

MR. H. S. WOOD PROSECUTOR IN VANCOUVER B.C.

ENJOYS ESTEEM OF THE BENCH AND BAR OF WESTERN CITY.

The following clipping from The Daily Province of Vancouver, B.C., will be read with interest by the many friends in the city of Mr. H. S. Wood, who is a son of the late R. E. Wood:—

The new regime in the attorney-general's department has been marked by the retirement of the firm of McKay and O'Brian, barristers, as prosecutors in the county criminal court at Vancouver and the appointment of Mr. Herbert S. Wood to act as prosecutor instead. There is some confusion as yet as to the date on which the change will be made, the Victoria authorities having assumed that the change would take place on Jan. 1, whereas Messrs McKay and O'Brian claim to have a yearly apointment which expired on March 31 of each calendar year.

The office of prosecuting attorney in the county criminal court is regarded as one of the plums for the lawyers in the gift of the Government. The duties of the office are not heavy and do not interfere with the private practice of the incumbent. The salarly allowed has been $300 per month with an extra allowance of $60 per month for office assistance, so that the position is regarded in the legal fraternity as a very substantial sideline for a practising attorney.

Is Able Lawyer

Mr. Herbert S. Wood, the new county prosecutor, was for many years associated with Mr L. G. McPhillips & Wood, but has recently been practising alone. He is regarded as a sound and able lawyer, and enjoys the general esteem of the bench and bar of Vancouver. In addition to having been for several years a member of Ward One Liberal Association, Mr. Wood has enjoyed a long and intimate friendship with Hon M. A. Macdonald, which dates back to their student days at Osgoode Hall Law School several years ago.

Mr. Wood was one of the original Liberals who earned the nickname of the "purity squad," owing to their efforts to secure the return of John T. Scott and get to the bottom of he plugging investigation, but in the recent ministerial bye-election he was a strong supporter and worker for Hon. M. A. Macdonald.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH DWYER

The death took place last night of Mr. Jos. Dwyer at his home, 141 Rubidge Street, after an illness of only a few hours. The deceased, who was 54 years of age, was born in Lindsay, where he spent the greater part of his life prior to some years ago. He was well known and respected by all who knew him, having taken a great interest in all branches of sport and the outside world. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and seven children, Joseph of Sarnia, John, James, Teresa, Margaret, Agnes and Nellie at home; also two brothers and one sister, James and Mary of Lindsay, and John of Gooding, Idaho.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

MORRIS CHAIRS PRESENTED TO MR. AND MRS. D. WEIR

Harvey Council and Officials Honor Township Clerk Who Has Retired After Sixteen Years' Service.

An address and presentation were made at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Weir, Lakehurst, at the close of the last council meeting. The address was read by Councillor Wilson, and at the conclusion Reeve Ingram in a neat speech presented Mr. and Mrs. Weir with two beautiful Morris chairs, and expressed the hope that they would long live to enjoy them.

Mr. and Mrs. David Weir:

Dear Friends,—It is with deep regret that we, members of council and officers of the township of Harvey, have come to the time when we must bid adieu to you in moving from our midst to another township. Yet we feel not altogether that we are losing you, one of our most esteemed and highly honored citizens, for we believe your interest will still be with us, and we hope to have the privilege of always considering you as one of our number.

During the years that you have been in our midst we have learned the depth of your character and the noble ideals for which you stand. Our confidence in your ability has not been small, and in years to come the influence will be felt and realized by many.

Allow us to present to you as a slight token of our friendship and the high place which you occupy in our midst, these chairs. Most sincerely do we wish you every good wish and God's richest blessing in years to come. (Signed.)

Robert Shaw, ex-reeve; James Ingram, reeve; H. Allen, P. Graham, T. Flynn and A. Wilson, councillors; H. Coons, treasurer.

Mr. Weir responded on behalf of himself and Mrs. Weir and thanked those present for their beautiful presents, which he and Mrs. Weir would consider among their most treasured possessions. He thanked the present and previous councils for their many acts of kindness to him during his sixteen years of office, the memory of which would be with him as long as he lived. During his term of office he had never received one unkind word from any member of the council, and it was with regret that he severed his connection with municipal matters in Harvey.

25,000 People at Funeral of Buffalo Bill at Denver

DENVER, Jan. 17.—The funeral services of Col. William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) were attended by 25,000 people. The body lay in state at the capitol building, the rotunda being lined with troopers from Fort Logan. Among the many prominent people who passed the bronze casket and took a last look at the famous scout and Indian fighter, was a handful of old Indians and former scouts, long associated with Col. Cody. Following the hearse, two cowboys led "McKinley," Col. Cody's horse, riderless, but with the plainsman's pistols hanging from the saddlehorn. Seventy cowboys followed.

The body was placed in a rock-hewn vault at the summit of Lookout mountain at Golden, Colorado.

HEALTH Grape-Nuts

In many a home the keystone of the family's health is a daily ration of the splendid whole wheat and barley food—

Grape-Nuts

The reason lies in the fact that this food contains an abundance of those elements—the mineral salts—so necessary for well-balanced bodies, brains and nerves. Grape-Nuts also includes the entire nutriment of the grains, in concentrated, easily digestible form, ready-to-eat from the package.

Grape-Nuts is usually eaten with cream or milk, and the flavor is wonderfully delicious. It also combines in numerous attractive, special dishes.

Better digestion, better health, better accomplishment, with Grape-Nuts as a daily food.

GET RID OF WIG AND GOWN SPIRIT AND SHYSTERS AMONG LAWYERS

Suggesting that lawyers of today do not occupy the place in public confidence held by thier predecessors in the early days of the country, former Judge Morgan J. O'Brien urged before the New York State Bar Association the necessity of "reforming our profession and our procedure, removing delays and technicalities and expense in litigation, driving out unworthy men, holding aloft high ethical standards and living imbued with the new spirit of the times."

The election to membership of two women, thus doubling the feminine representation in the body, was one of the features of the opening session. The proposal aroused oratorical opposition, but when a vote was taken only three men cast their ballots in the negative.

Quotes from H. G. Wells

"Is it possible," asked Mr. O'Brien in the course of his address, "that we are indifferent to or that we have lost sight of the spirit and achievements of the great lawyers of the past, or that we are subject to the same severe arraignment which has been brought against the lawyers of England by a present writer?"

He then quoted from H. G. Wells' "What Is Coming," in which the author said:

"The sound case against the legal profession in Anglo-Saxon countries is not that it is unnecesary, but that it is almost incredibly antiquated, almost incredibly careless of the public wellbeing and that it corrupts or dwarfs all the men who enter it. Our urgent need is not so much to get rid of the lawyer from our affairs as to get rid of the wig and gown spirit and of the special pleader. Their minds are still set to the tune of mediaeval bickerings, traditionalism and state blinds."

Mr. O'Brien regarded this arraignment as an overstatement, but nevertheless he saw faults in present day lawyers.

"The lawyers of the past whom we regard as great," he said, "the lawyers of the present who are entitled to be thus designated, are not to be found among those who merely sought for wealth or place, but consisted then, as they consist now, of those who have consecrated a part of their lives at least unselfishly, disinterestedly and patriotically to service of their country and humanity."

MISTAKEN KINDNESS

Grandmothers' Great Obstacles to the Proper Feeding of Children.

"One of the greatest obstacles to the proper feeding of young children is the opposition and interference of grandmothers!" says Dr. John Lovett Morse, Professor of Pediatrics in the Harvard Medical School. "It is a strange fact," he goes on, "that the majority of women, although they have been good mothers and have brought up their own children sensibly, show no reason whatever in matters relating to their grand children. They are willing to give them anything and everything to eat and will, in fact, go out of their way to do so. The most probable explanation of this curious anomaly is that they are not responsible for the care of the children when they are sick." But grandmothers do not make all the mistakes. "It is a curious fact," he says elsewhere, "that many mothers who are very careful about what their children eat in their own house, send them to school with a lunch composed of cake, cookies, and doughnuts, or other kinds of sweets, apparently thinking that a child can digest things at school which it cannot at home. A child's lunch should consist of bread and butter or a meat sandwich. If soup or meat can be obtained at school, so much the better."

Concerning Coffee

As a nation we fail at making coffee, says a London women writer. Here are some practical and tested hints which would remove the reproach.

Coffee pots, whether of tin or ware, should be broad at the bottom and narrow at the top. Good coffee cannot be made in jugs. Tin coffee pots should be cleaned immediately after use with scalding water in which a lump of salt has been dissolved, and then hung in sections, out of doors. That removes the "tinny" taste.

Particular attention should be given to the strainer. Leave it dirty, and the next brew of coffee will "taste." Breakfast coffee should be made the night before, and stood in a covered vessel—not of tin—and then boiled up slowly, keeping it at the simmering point as long as possible. A small pinch of salt added to new made coffee before the water is poured on is a great improvement. This pouring should be done very slowly, just a little at a time,—not a deluge.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SPORTING NEWS

TANKARD WIN BY THREE SHOTS FOR LOCAL CURLERS

R. M. Waddell Four up and W. M. Lang One Down.

Peterborough will play in Toronto for the Ontario Tankard. They won the right yesterday afternoon when they defeated their old opponents, Lindsay, for the honor of representing Group 1 when the great play-off takes place. It was a great game of curling on both sides. The veteran of many a curling battle, Skip Little, never placed stones better in his life. He seemed to be able to lay the stone just as he wanted it, in the right place, and he had wonderful assistance from the other members of his rink. He finished one up against Skip Lang, who also played an excellent game, as did every one of his crew. They never lost courage and played to win from start to finish.

SKIP R. M. WADDELL

To Skip Waddell and his assistants falls the credit of placing Peterborough in the final play-off. He built up end after end against Skip O'Connor, who by good engineering managed to get himself out of many a tight hole. In fact at one time it looked as though his opponents were doomed to defeat, but a lucky graze saved the day for the local men.

It was a grand curling game from start to finish and keen competition and the friendly feeling between one and all made the afternoon's fun very enjoyable.

The Lindsay boys hope to turn the tables on Peterborough next Tuesday when the District Cup Preliminary Competition in Group 2 will be played in that town.

The rinks and scores were:—

REGULAR TEAM FOR LINDSAY

The Soldiers will send their regular team against the Midgets at Lindsay tonight. The players leave on the 5.31 G.T.R. train. The line-up:

Goal, LeGros; defence, Quinn and Halpin; wings, Evans and Adams; centre, Flanagan; rover, Armstrong.

Y.M.C.A. Membership

still further; hundreds of others are being impressed with the highest religious ideals as a result of Y. M. C. A. efforts.

Membership 675.

The membership of our Association, men and boys, stands at 675.

Soldiers have been on a free membership basis, and over 30,000 visits by men in uniform have been made at our building during 1916.

Two hundred and thirty-five men and boys have enlisted from our membership since the war began.

Our budget for 1916 will allow us to contribute $450 to overseas Y. M. C. A. work. One-tenth of all subscription collections are given to this work.

We also participated in a special canvass for overseas funds conducted by our National Council in December when over $3000 was realized.

It is estimated that at least 100,000 visits by all people and for all purposes have been made to the Y. M. C. A. building during the year.

Considering the unusual conditions of the year and the extraordinary fact that of the $8000 subscribed for the Y. M. C. A. work in Peterborough in the last four months of 1916, $3,600 goes overseas, our local work has been most efficiently financed.

CURLING

There were no inter-rink games played at the curling rink last night and this leaves a great many contests to be played off. The management committee have posted a notice asking the skips to play off the postponed games at the earliest date possible.

Games Tonight.

The inter-rink games scheduled for tonight are:

Dr. Greer vs. Denham.
Hicks vs. Sturgeon.
Ferguson, W. G., vs. Archibald.
Morrow vs. Kay.
Foote vs. Davidson.

GALT'S GIVINGS

GALT, Jan. 17 — Computation made by City Clerk McCartney shows that in organized campaigns Galt has given to patriotic purposes since beginning of the war $143,421, or $12 per capital. As this is exclusive of thousands of dollars given privately to the Prisoners' Aid, Belgian Relief, Red Cros and other patriotic endeavors, the record is considered highly creditable.

CARVETH—DOUGLAS

MILLBROOK, Jan 17—The marriage of Ida Jean, youngest daughter of Mr. H. Douglas, to Mr. Stanley R. Carveth, was solemnized in the Methodist Church on Wednesday, Jan. 10, Rev. W. Higgs officiating. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her brother, Mr. Thos. Douglas, and wore a becoming tailored suit of navy blue serge with blouse of white Georgette crepe, black velvet hat and furs of mink. She wore a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley, and the grooms' gift, a pearl and emerald shamrock pendant.

Mr. and Mrs Carveth left for Toronto and other points. They will be at home to their friends after March 1.

The W. A. R. Club will hold their weekly meeting this evening at the home of Miss Helen Lytle, Charlotte street. All members are requested to be present as it is an important meeting.

Members of the Golden Link Rebekah Lodge, I. O. O. F., spent a pleasant time last night with the assembly president, Mrs. Raifton, of Toronto, and Vice-President Mrs. Swartman, of Waubaushene, who gave an address on the work of the Rebekahs. Degree work was put on by Mrs. Bert Watts, after which a banquet was held.

Mrs. Raifton, Toronto, and Mrs. Swartman, Waubaushene, assembly president and vice-president of the Rebekahs, were the guests of Mrs. R. N. Jones, Charlotte street, on their visit to the city.

On Saturday afternoon, Jan 20, from 4 to 6 o'clock, a tea will be held at the Empress Hotel in aid of the King's Daughters. This society support several prisoners of war in Germany and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance at the tea.

The teachers training class of George St. Methodist Church, in charge of Mr. E. E. Ingall, will meet Thursday evening at 7 o'clock in the Public Library. This is an important meeting.

The members of St. Peter's Patriotic Club are reminded that the work room will be open tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. All are invited to come to work. Tea will be served from 5 to 7 and the tea room will be in charge of Mrs. Bruce Law and Miss Nora Shevlin.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rose, Dundas St. W., Belleville, announce the marriage of their eldest daughter, Pearl Louise, to Capt William P. Allen, 155th Batt., London, Eng., on Jan. 2.

Mrs. J. W. Hamilton of Millbrook spent the day in the city.

Mrs. P. I. Bentley, of Millbrook, is visiting friends in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Haynes are guests at the Empress.

Mrs. T. F. Matthews is visiting Mrs. R. C. Matthews, Lyndhurst Ave. Toronto.

Capt. J. M. and Mrs. Thomson, who have been guests at the Oriental, have moved into their residence at 15 Fleming Place.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., is in Brockville on a business trip.

Mrs. May Rolston of Toronto, president of the Rebekah Assembly, Mrs Swartman, vice-president, Waubaushene, Mrs. R. N. Jones, district deputy, and Mrs. B. Watts, past district deputy president, left today for Havelock, where the installation of the officers of Havelock Rebekah Lodge will take place this evening. Tomorrow night a new lodge will be instituted at Norwood by the same officers.

CALEBITES BALK AT IDEA OF ELECTING JUDICIARY

Some Members Would Cut Down Number of Members of Parliament and Otherwise Simplyfy Administrative Machinery.

With President T. H. Mitchell in the chair and Secretary W. J. Armstrong at his post, the regular meeting of the Calebites of St. Andrew's Church was held in the school room last night. Mr R. Lees, county school inspector, read the paper on "Current Events," an excellent treatise on the progress of the war during the past month, and which dealt with the campaign in Roumania, in which the German army, one hundred days after war was declared, had achieved the signal triumph of taking possession of the capital of the country. Mr. Lees discussed the probabilities of peace, taking the ground that a cessation of hostilities is still a matter that belongs to the remote future.

A paper on The Science of Government was read by Alex. McGregor. The essayist recommended, among other things, the aboliton of the Dominion Senate, a reduction of the number of members of the Federal Parliament and the various Provincial Legislatures to about one-eighth of the present roster, or sufficient to give Ontario ten representatives at Ottawa; primary election, the choice of public servants being the most important step of all, proportional representation, the election of county officials, the sheriff to be made chief of police in his constituency.

These suggestions precipitated an animated discussion in which Inspector Lees, G. Walter Green, A. McFarlane, G. W. Gilman and other members took a prominent part. While the majority of the speakers favored a reduction in Parliamentary representatives, they, with one exception, balked at the idea of an elected judiciary. Mr. McFarlane declared that any man willing to go through a modern election was not a fit person to hold a position on the bench. Mr. Gilman alone supported the idea of electing judges, care to be taken in the choice of candidates.

Mr. Walter Evans rendered a solo in so pleasing a manner that he was heartily and unanimously recalled. His sister, Miss Grace Evans, accompanied him on the piano.

The next meeting of the society will be held on the second Tuesday night in February.

KNIT, KNIT, KNIT CALL TO WOMEN

LAY ASIDE FANCY WORK AND MAKE SOCKS FOR SOLDIERS.

The following appeal from France comes to St. Peter's Patriotic Club:

To the women of Canada: You who have worked so bravely and so diligently during the war, will you respond once more to the needs of the French soldiers in the trenches? They need socks, socks, and again socks.

You will never know, you women of Canada, how, just by your knitting, you have helped to win the war. It was a French officer who said this quite recently at the Secours National. He himself has, many a time, gone without socks, and speaks from bitter experience.

Wool is scarce in France. The Secours National hopes to hip 10,000 pairs of warm socks, knitted in Canada, to provide the brave "poilus" with warm footwear for this winter. The task before us is a hard one.

France will never forget what the Canadian soldiers and the Canadian women have done during this war.

Young women of Canada, lay aside your fancy work and knit, knit, knit, and do not forget your French brothers in the trenches.

Those who cannot knit could assist by supplying wool or money.

St. Peter's Patriotic Club sent 60 pairs of socks in response to an appeal last spring and the secretary feels confident that the club will do its bit this year also.

SEVERE INJURY ATTENDS FALL

MR. R. TIVEY, STANLEY AV., FELL FROM SECOND TO FIRST FLOOR.

Mr R. Tivey, 137 Stanley Ave., Ashburnham, was severely hurt yesterday morning when he fell from the second floor to the first floor of a house on Rogers Street, where he was at work. He is unable to say what caused him to fall. There was no stairway.

A passerby, hearing groans, entered the building and found Mr. Tivey unconscious. This was an hour after the fall. Examination by a doctor revealed several fractured ribs and internal injuries and it cannot be stated how serious the latter injuries are. Mr. Tivey is 78 years old, having celebrated his birthday several days ago. He is at his home.

If a man makes Cynical remarks about women it's doughnuts to fudge that some one of them has been using him for a doormat.

And it sometimes comes to pass that after a man has made his mark he acquires a wife who insists on his toeing it.

MOVEMENT FOR ROAD-BUILDING IN MONAGHAN

The road problem in North Monaghan was discussed at a meeting in May's School Monday night, at which W. G. Howden moved, seconded by Herb. Forster, that the township council apply to the highways department for a grant to build a mile of road in the township with broken stone.

It was also suggested that the council consider the matter of securing a supply of stone this winter, so that material would be ready for operations in the spring.

Both matters will be considered by Council.

UPPER PART OF DWELLING WAS DAMAGED

FIREMEN MET TROUBLE WHEN HOSE BECAME FROZEN.

The fire department had quite a lot of trouble putting out a fire which occurred last night at the residence of Herbert Batten, 169 Edinburgh street. Shortly before 10 o'clock the alarm was received, and the firemen, on responding, found the fire had gained considerable headway in the upper part of the building. The fact that the house had a false roof and was covered with sheet metal made the operations of the firemen all the more difficult. They had the fire apparently under control, when the hose became frozen, necessitating a return to the station for a fresh supply. During this short period a second alarm was sent in, and the firemen remained on the scene until 1 o'clock.

The cause of the fire is unknown. The blaze was discovered by Mrs. Batten, who became alarmed at the presence of smoke.

The loss to the building, which is owned by Miss Wallis, will be about $500, and the loss to the contents from fire and water about $400.

Application to Parliament

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Corporation of the City of Peterborough will apply to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act for the following purposes:—

1.—To authorize the Council of the City of Peterborough to purchase Motor Driven Fire Apparatus, with the necessary equipment, and to issue Debentures to pay for the same, to an amount not exceeding $10,000.

2.—To amend Section 9 of Chapter 83 of the Statutes of 1907, so as to provide for the more expeditious collection of the special rates therein referred to.

3.—To authorize the Council or the Peterborough Utilities Commission to instal sanitary conveniences in any building, the owner of which is unable to pay the expense of same at once, or who has neglected to instal same and to make the necessary connections therefrom to the sewage and water works system and to pay the cost therof and collect the same, including interest, in equal quarterly instalments from the owner of such building, and to provide that such cost shall be a charge on the said building and the land on which the same is situated until fully paid and that if any of said instalments are not paid they may be collected by action against the owner or added to the Colector's roll and collected in like manner as Municipal taxes, with authority to the said Council to issue Debentures to meet the cost of said work.

4.—In the event of the City acquiring the plant, property and business of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, that the Peterborough Utilities Commission shall have the control and management thereof, with power to maintain, operate, extend and renew the same and that the said Peterborough Radial Railway shall when acquired be a public utility within the meaning of The Public Utilities Act and the provisions of the said Act, and of section 3 of Chapter 65 of the Acts passed in the year 1915 shall apply to said Railway and to the said Peterborough Utilities Commission, and their duties, authorities and powers in connection with the same, and that the said Peterborough Utilities Commision, with the consent of the Council shall have authority to borrow money for the purposes of the railway and shall have such other powers in connection with the management and maintenance of the Railway as the Council may by By-Laws confer.

5.—To authorize the Council, without the assent of the Electors, to borrow such sums not exceeding $10,000.00 in addition to such amounts already provided or authorized, which may be required or needed to satisfy the amount of the award, costs, expenses and disbursements created or incurred by reason of the arbitration between the City of Peterborough and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, and the litigation resulting therefrom, and also the costs of the purchase of such property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, as was a part of the plant of the said Company, outside of the City of Peterborough and adjacent thereto, and to author'ze the issue of Debentures of the Corporation therefor.

6.—The amount of the rateable property of the Municipality is the sum of $11,564,330.00 and the existing Debenture debt exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates is the sum of $1,928,-260.59 of which the following are the particulars: Waterworks $600,000.00, Electric Lighting and Power Plant $120,000.00, Local Improvements $344,375.78, Public Schools $252,050.00 Collegiate Institute $72,225.31, Protestant Home $10,000.00, General City Debentures $527,100.00.

CATHEDRALS OF EUROPE

FR. O'GORMAN LECTURES BEFORE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Father O'Gorman of Cobalt delivered an interesting lecture before the Knight of Columbus at their hall last night. Cathedrals of Europe was the subject, which Fr. O'Gorman treated in a scholarly and instructive manner. The architectural beauty, the interest in them from a historic point of view and other interesting facts were brought out by the lecturer in a highly entertaining style and at the conclusion of the lecture the reverend visitor was tendered a vote of thanks on motion of Messrs. F. G. Garden and H. Phelan.

Miss O'Donnell, Mr. E. Hanrahan, Miss McCarthy contributed to the musical program, the accompanists being the Misses Hurley, Lonergan and Gorman.

Brief remarks were made by Bishop O'Brien, Mayor Duffus and Rev. Fr. Phelan, chaplain, Mr. John Corkery, Jr., Grand Knight, presided.

The evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem

APPRECIATES THE REVIEW.

"Times have changed in Peterborough," remarked a travelling man to a friend at the Empress Hotel yesterday. 'You have only one live newspaper any more, and that is The Review. It is the paper I look for every time I come to this city. No one can fail to note the improvement both in matter and make-up during the past few months."

GERMANS FELT IT COMING AND EVACUATED TRENCHES

Successful Raid Was Carried Out by Canadians.

600 YARD FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—The evacuation of German positions near Serre on the Somme front was announced by the War Office today. A British attack near Loos was repulsed after violent fighting.

The text of the official statement says: After an engagement near Serre, portions of an advancer position held by us were utterly evacuated on Friday night. Since then heavy firing has been directed by the enemy against the empty trenches. Yesterday a British attack upon them, expected by us, was launched into the air, causing the enemy severe losses.

Reached Second Line

Sir Douglas Haig's report on the operations says:

"This morning another very successful daylight raid war carried out by Canadian troops northeast of Cite Calonne. The attacking party entered the enemy's trenches on a front of 700 yards and penetrated to a depth of 300 yards as far as his second line. Here also heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy, and all his dugouts were completely wrecked. We captured one officer and 99 other ranks, two machine guns and a trench mortar. Our artillery and machine guns co-operated very effectively with the infantry. Our casualties were again small.

Advance on Ancre

"After a heavy preliminary bombardment Wednesday morning we occupied a line of enemy posts north of Beaucourt-sur-Ancre. The whole of our objectives were gained on a frontage of some six hundred yards, with few casualties. The position gained considerably improved our observation in this area.

"After this an enemy counter-attack was broken up with heavy loss by our artillery barrage. The consolidation of the new position is proceeding. We had complete success yesterday and today in the neighborhood of Lens.

POSTMEN DID GOOD WORK WITH THE NATIONAL SERVICE CARDS

An official report by Postmaster Edgar on the returns of National Service cards in the city shows that of 4,986 cards delivered, 4,880 were returned. There were 49 point blank refusals, and 57 cards were not returned for various reasons, such as absence from the city, change of address, etc.

The returns are coming in from the rural routes in a most satisfactory manner.

The postmen did their work quickly and thoroughly and are entitled to congratulations on the success of the delivery and collection of the cards. They took an interest in their work and won out in spite of the scheme having been discouraged as one that would not be successful.

ANOTHER NOTE, THE RESULT OF GERMAN RAIDERS' ACTIVITIES?

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. — International complications with Germany will ensue if American lives were sacrificed, contrary to international law, in the German raiders' activities, according to a broad official hint to the United Press today. It was indicated that the authorities are far from hopeful in the peace situation at this moment.

GENERAL PINS MEDAL ON LANCE CORP. BLANCHARD

Would Rather be Back Among the Bombers.

Mrs. W. H. Blanchard of Peterborough, wife of Capt. W. H. Blanchard, on active service overseas, has received the following letter from her son, Lance-Corp. Bruce Blanchard, of the 21st Batt., who, as announced in The Review, some time ago won the Military Medal at the front:—

31 Halston Rd, Greenwich, S.E.

My Dear Mother: I spent a night with father before he went back to the front and intended to see him off the next morning but there were no cars running, so after getting up at 6 o'clock I was stung, after all. Father looks well. He is getting quite grey, but is in the best of health, and I think some stouter than when I saw him last.

Well, mother, I was decorated yesterday. Brig.-Gen. Harston pinned the medal on. First they formed a square of all the men and N.C.O.'s and then read my name out. Well, believe me, I would rather be back bombing than to have to walk into that square again. The Brigadier pinned the medal on and wished me all kinds of luck and also said he would be pleased to grant me any favor that was in his power. He also said that it was an honor to him to pin any medal on to anybody for bravery and he took pleasure in doing so. He had Underwood and Underwood of New York take the picture of him pinning the medal on and I took dandy. I will send you one when they finish them, and it is going to be in "Canada" in the near future. "Canada" is a book dealing with Canadian soldiers, so you see that is some honor.

Well, mother, I do not know what else to write about as I think I have put in all the news I know of. I hope all at home are well and in the best of health, as it leaves me at present. —Your loving son Bruce.

DE LAVAL COMPANY.

We find that in our issue of yesterday we gave a wrong impression regarding the De Laval Company. Only a very few employes who were dissatisfied left the plant, and some of them have already applied to be taken back. There have been so many applications for work that the company will suffer very little inconvenience.

TOOK FATAL ILLNESS ON VISIT TO SISTER.

Mrs. Wm. Little, Stewart Street, Died at Port Hope.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. F. Wilson, Port Hope, on Friday morning to the G.T.R. station, the remains to be brought to Peterborough on the noon train for interment at the Little Lake Cemetery. Funeral services at the grave will be conducted by Rev. R. Pogue.

Funeral on Friday.

The funeral of the late Joseph Dwyer will take place at 8:45 tomorrow morning from his late residence, 141 Rubidge street, to St. Peter's Cathedral.

RETURNED SOLDIER ATTESTED IN 247TH

Dr. Fred Burnham, Twice Decorated, to Take Command of Serbian Military Hospital in Balkans.

LONDON, January 18.—Dr. Fred Burnham, of Winnipeg and Peterborough, who was twice decorated by King Nicholas, for services in Montenegro, has just sailed for the Balkans to take command of a Serbian military hospital.

The 254th (Hastings and Prince Edward Counties) Battalion is introducing a novel method to aid recruiting work. They have secured permission from the proprietors of the poolrooms at Trenton to place a desk in each poolroom with two men stationed there to plead with young men to join the battalion. Some of the leading citizens have volunteered to assist, and will make short recruiting speeches to the players and assist the recruiting men in the poolrooms.

Third Enlisted Brother

Pte. Isaac Post, who joined the 247th Batt yesterday, is the third enlisted son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Post, of Oak Lake. Pte. Bruce Post, who served at the front with the Mounted Rifles, returned home on Tuesday, having been severely wounded in the arms and legs. Pte. Tice Post is with the 93rd and Isaac who has just enlisted, also made an effort to go overseas with the 93rd, but was then under age.

Medals for Parents

At a patriotic gathering to be held in Havelock Friday night, at which the 247th band will play and Lieut.-Col. Ackerman will give an address, the Citizens' Recognition League of the town will present medals to the parents of Pte. Lyman Reid and Pte. E. Jones, in recognition of the supreme sacrifice made by the two soldiers.

Major O'Flynn also will speak.

He's Going Back

Pte. Wm Andrew Ryder of Bowmanville has passed the medical board and has attested with the 247th. This soldier has already seen service at the front. Having recovered from injuries received he is now ready to go back.

Next Sunday the 247th Batt. will hold its first church parade. The arrangements will be made tomorrow by the Ministerial Association.

Battalion Orders

Orders by Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, O.C. 247th Battalion.

Leave of Absence—

CLOSING ADDRESS ON PROPHECIES OF BIBLE

By Pastor Doner at the Bethany Tabernacle.

Pastor Doner concluded his talk on the Great World War on Sunday night at Bethany Tabernacle. Using Eph. 6: 10-12 as a text, he showed that our struggle is not with mere flesh and blood but with the despotisms, the empires, the forces that control and govern this dark world—the spiritual hosts of evil arrayed against us in the heavenly warfare (Weymouth).

These demon spirits incorporate themselves in men and women and the result is war on earth. When man is at war with his Maker, he is also at war with his fellowman. The war that began in heaven between Lucifer and Jehovah ends on earth when the Son of God returns to inaugurate his Millennial Kingdom.

Meanwile, the Holy Spirit is mobilising the church and training her for the day of battle when Armageddon will be fought. To this elect body the church is guaranteed by the Holy Spirit, a safe conduct through the aid to meet her bridegroom and Lord. This event will fulfill the statement of I Thess 4: 13—18, and is called in the Greek the Parousia.

It is not flight. It is not retreat. It is a marvellous strategic movement planned by the Royal Prince himself by which he absolutely outwits and nonplusses the Dragon in consummating the arrangement made during his short stay on the earth with the Bride-to-be (the church) when he acted as ambassador to his Royal Father.

Satan's rage at seeing the bridal church thus escape passing directly through his domain (the aerial heavens) is terrible indeed. Shortly after her arrival in the glorious queen's palace in the Glory Land Michael the commander-in-chief of all heaven's aerial forces, launches an overwhelming assault on the Dragon and his angels, resulting in his swift and eternal expulsion from the aerial regions so long occupied by him.

His operations are now confined to earth and stung to terrible fury and revengeful hate by his recent defeat, he immediately produces his masterpiece manifested in the great Anti-Christ and his corrupt system. While the earth is filling up her cup of iniquity with harlotries and Christ denying blasphemies. God trains his long range batteries from the citadel on the enemy's position and pours forth such a storm of fire and hail that men gnaw their tongues for pain. Death would be welcome at this time but they seek it in vain Suicide will be impossible. Escape out of the question. God's aim is deadly and the hour of His Wrath is come.

Driven to his wits' end, Satan calls up his Hadean reserves, who respond in such multitudes that the very sun is darkened as they pass. Next, come the dreaded Euphratean cavalry division, two hundred million strong (Rev. 9: 16), and as these formidable hosts swing into battle line we lift our eyes aloft, and yonder on the plains of light we behold another army in grand review before the King of Kings. This is the Imperial Horse

THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

THE PETERBOROUGH Health Association will hold their annual meeting on Friday evening, and if there is an organization in the city that is entitled to the hearty support of the people, this society certainly is.

The object of the Association is to make war on that menace to the health of the community, tuberculosis. There is only one method by which the malady can be rooted out, and that is by close watching for the first indication of the disease. Eternal vigilance is the price of immunity. The Health Associations are constantly on the lookout for the conditions that breed the malady and make war on the white plague at the fountain head.

Tuberculosis, if it reaches a certain stage of development, defies all the agencies of modern medical science. The patient has no hope of recovery. All that can be done for him is to make his last days as comfortable as possible while he slowly wastes away. But if the disease is detected in its early stages, a cure is possible. Best of all, however, is the plan to head it off altogether by correcting the living conditions which engender it.

Tuberculosis is not only fatal to the victim, but it is now regarded as one of the most dangerously contagious of all human disease. Worst of all, it is hereditary. The spread of the disease can be prevented by guarding against these two sources of risk. The patients afflicted with the malady must be segregated, and those likely to inherit it must have their cases dealt with before it is too late.

This is a matter of vast moment to the public, and the work of the Health Association must be understood in order to be fully appreciated. Expert nurses are constantly at work, on the watch for the first evidence of the disease. A person showing signs of tuberculosis is at once made a public charge if he or she lacks means to secure the proper medical attendance. The society depends for funds upon public grants and voluntary contributions entirely, the main part of their income being derived from the latter source. Every one who becomes a member, every person who contributes to the treasury of the society, is a valuable volunteer in the work in hand. Public health is a matter in which all are interested. Tuberculosis threatens all classes, but especially the poor, whose living conditions are not all that they should be. A victim of the white plague is a menace to the entire community unless properly cared for and sequestered. The private practice of physicians is not sufficient to ward off the danger. The trouble is that the family doctor is seldom called in until the disease has made such headway that a cure is impossible.

Medical men have been engaged for years in investigation and experiments to cure this disease. No specific has yet been determined, and the chances are that none ever will be. But the matter is not altogether hopeless, and humanity is not entirely at the mercy of the white plague. If it cannot be cured, it can be prevented by an intelligent observance of the laws of health. Instruction in these laws is one of the chief tasks assumed by the Association, which now once more appeals to the public for support and co-operation.

FARMERS AND MAIL ORDERS.

A FARMER from one of the contiguous townships recently came to market in this city and disposed of a load of produce which brought him nearly $100. He left for home without spending a cent of this money, but on reaching his farm at once applied himself to the study of the catalogue of a mail order house in Toronto. The prices quoted must have appealed to him, for the evidence in the case is to the effect that he sent away nearly all of the money which he brought back with him from Peterborough in payment of supplies required by his household.

The interests of the citizens of Peterborough and the residents in the rural communities are identical. The city market is worth thousands of dollars every year to the farmer. The more prosperous the urbanites, the greater their purchasing power and the quicker the sales made on the market square every Saturday. The farmer who sends his money to a mail order house in Toronto or elsewhere impoverishes this city to that extent and injures his own chances because he curtails his local market by the amount of his outside purchases. He will never again get his fingers on the money he sent to Toronto. If he had spent it with the merchants of Peterborough, the chances are that some of it would have come into his possession again next market day.

The moral is obvious. The farmers cannot hope to have a desirable home market unless they are willing to reciprocate by helping maintain the city which makes that market possible.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT AGAIN.

MR. ROBERT BICKERDIKE, M.P. for St. Lawrence is for the fourth time going to introduce into the House a resolution calling for the abolition of capital punishment in Canada. He has pressed this same resolution for the past three sessions without success. Last year on a non-partisan vote it was defeated by a narrow margin. Mr. Bickerdike has renewed his discussion of the subject in the press and has issued to the newspapers a circular in which he pleads scriptural authority for the stand he has taken.

Recently the Christian Guardian published a letter justifying capital punishment, written by a Rev. Mr. Andrews. This brought a reply putting the opposite side of the case, and condemning the death penalty so clearly that it is considered worthy of re-printing here. Mr. Bickerdike writes in last week's Guardian as follows:

"Can we ever forget that Cain was guilty of the worst of crimes—brutal, passionate fratricide—and that by the laws of Canada he would be hanged amid the execrations of our very righteous community, who would not raise a finger to get a reprieve in such a case, but would clamor for the hangman 'to do his duty,' on the ground that 'such a monster ought not to live'?

"And yet the infinite pity of God shielded Cain from the vengeance of pitiless men, and, with a protective mark upon his forehead, he was sent out, with an express command that no man should injure him.

"And no church dares to say that Cain, the first fratricide and the beginning of murderers, has not a seat now in the heaven of the blessed, and yet today, if Cain were to come to civilized Canada, he would be hounded to the gallows as a monster not worthy of having spent upon him the pittance which the cost of one extra prisoner would entail, and yet it is the Bible which declares that Cain should not be hanged.

"I would impresss, too, the striking fact that were Moses to land upon these shores he would land as a criminal who had committed a murder which is punishable by hanging; and when I read the story of how Moses took the poor Egyptian and killed him, and surreptitiously buried his body and covered the place over with sand so that his crime should be hidden, and then went home and went about his daily duties with a serene face as if nothing had happened, I recall similar murders that have taken place in Canada, and I remember the popular outcry about the callous brutality of the crime and the hard-hearted hypocrisy of the murderer.

"I can picture from the experience of similar cases that if Moses were to come to Canada today, and were to repeat the crime which he perpetrated upon the Egyptian, the press and the public, including the Rev. Mr. Andrews, would combine to talk about 'another brutal murder' and to demand 'the expiation of the crime' upon the scaffold, and the probability is that Moses would be hanged as a common murderer.

"I take these two striking cases because it is to 'the law of Moses' which the modern pro-hanging ecclesiast appeals.

"To the Caesar of 'the Mosaic law' does the pro-hanger appeal. By the Caesar of 'the Mosaic law' does the greatest of the world's prophetic law-givers be judged, and the majestic patriarch who had moulded for good the destinies of millions of people and the great races of men would fall branded under the statute law of Canada as a common murderer not worth keeping alive.

"I venture, therefore, to appeal, by the sacred mercy which spared Cain, and by the infinite power which transformed Moses, to everyone whose heart beats for the suffering and whose soul yearns over the agonized, to look with the eye of a sorrowing father upon every prodigal murderer in the land, and not to rest until they are won from the misery of the brutal passions which bind them as slaves, into the glorious freedom of the sons of God.

"There is greater joy in heaven over one murderer who is converted than over ninety and nine murderers who are (justly?) hanged in their sins."

The Hamilton Herald stands firm for the death penalty and delves into ancient biblical history for its authority, claiming that the entire teaching of the Bible is to that end. If there is anything in the discourses of the Nazarene that justifies society taking the life of a human being as expiation for the life of another, the majority of Bible students would be pleased to have their attention called to it.

SIXTEEN MILLION GRAVES.

THE WORLD has no idea of the discontent that prevails among the German people on account of the war. The masses are sick unto death of all this senseless slaughter, especially as they see that the struggle is so likely to end in disaster for their nation. All murmurings, however, are carefully kept from the hearing of the outside world by the authorities, and socialistic speeches in the Reichstag are just as carefully suppressed.

According to the Edinburgh Scotsman, the Tribune de Geneve, quoted by the Geneva correspondent of the Daily Express, has received from Berlin the text of a remarkable speech delivered in the Reichstag by the socialist deputy, Herr Bernstein, which was suppressed by the censor and not allowed to appear in any of the German newspapers:

Herr Bernstein, referring to England, said: "If you think you will force this nation to seek peace by dropping bombs on open towns—(uproar)—you understand badly the psychology of this people."

"Germany," he added, "already estimates the total losses in the war at 4,500,000 killed, 1,330,000 invalided and 11,000,000 wounded. When will this carnage cease? It is the duty of the German authorities to declare that we are ready for an armistice as a condition precedent to the convening of a European congress to reestablish peace on the basis of democratic rights."

In conclusion, Herr Bernstein accused the military junkers of being in criminal alliance wth speculators to ensure the continuance of the war.

The socialist deputy was not speaking for himself alone, but was uttering the convictions of a formidable part whom the Kaiser will yet find it impossible to suppress.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

AND TODAY the stage will be set for the annual talkfest.

• • • •

THE KAISER is not the only peacemaker who has precipitated a riot.

• • • •

• • • •

FOR HARTLEY DEWART the land of beer and wine seems as far away as Palestine itself.

THE HOCKEYISTS are said by the sporting writers to be up to form this season. Magnificent, but not war.

• • • •

THE NATION oppressed by militarism has nothing on the country that is over-ridden by lawyers.

• • • •

IT IS SELDOM indeed that the grown man who acquires the cigarette habit openly boasts of his achievement.

• • • •

THE LIBERALS in Toronto will beat the ground-hog to it by several laps next Monday when they come out at the bye-election and see the shadow.

• • • •

CANNOT SOME well-disposed neutrals call on the bilinguists, pros and cons, to tell what in the world they are jangling about and to define their terms of peace?

Wit and Wisdom

Foolish Question

"Mr. Beats," the grocer said wearily, 'I ask you for the last time, will you pay that $20 you owe me?"

"For the last time?" Beats replied cheerfully, "I'm glad to hear you say that, old man. You know I was getting awfully tired of hearing you ask that foolish question!"

Why Not Pay It?

During New Hampshire's old home week a man from Boston went back to his native town. On his return to Boston a friend asked:

"Did you meet anyone you knew on your visit to your old home town?"

"Oh, yes. Almost the first man I ran across was Farmer Brown whose orchard I used to rob twenty-five years ago."

"Did he remember you?"

"I should say he did. He handed me a bill for the apples I had stolen."

Aunt—Yes. Johnny Santa Claus has brought you a baby brother.

Johnny—Great Scott! Another present that ain't any use.

KINGSTON PAPER IN FAVOR OF GIVING WOMEN THE FRANCHISE

(Kingston Standard.)

The Standard is glad to see that the women of Kingston and of the province generally are moving in the matter of Equal Franchise. It has always seemed to us a preposterous and an anomalous condition of affairs that whereas men of all classes and conditions are freely extended the franchise, this privilege has been refused to women, who are grouped in the none too complimentary category of "women, children and imbeciles."

There really is no sound reason nor any logical explanation why women should not have the vote as freely as the men. Certainly it will not be denied that they have as much concern for the welfare of the people and as much interest in the cleanliness and decency of the community as have the men. The wives of husbands, the sisters of brothers, the mothers of children — surely these should have something to say as to what legislation should be passed and as to how the government should be controlled. Surely we could as safely trust the women of the country with a voice in its affairs as we could trust a great majority of the men.

As a matter of fact, if we look abont and study the conditons of those countries and states where women have been granted the rfanchise we will find that conditions in these places have been materially bettered under the new order of things. New Zealand is a striking example of this, as are a number of states in the American Union.

Heretofore the Provincial Government in Ontario has moved cautiously in its treatment of this matter, feeling apparently that there was no general demand for it on the part of the women of the province. However, we know that there is now an unquestionable demand that women be given their proper place as factors in government and have extended to them the same voting privilegs as are extended to men. Because of this changed condition, therefore, we feel sure that Premier Hearst's Government will now lend a much mort attentive ear than formerly to the requests of the women.

That Equal Franchise is coming for the women is certain, and he who attempts to check the movement might as well endeavor to dam Niagara. And this Equal Franchise is coming because it should come, and because the women deserve to have it. What is more, the Government and the people alike will be all the better for it. Nor, to obtain it, will the women be obliged to resort to the ridiculous and drastic measures adopted by their English sisters overseas. Not through war, but through peace, not through coercion, but through moral suasion, lies the surest, the sanest and the best solution of the problem.

HOW WAR NEWS WILL READ IN 1916

What kind of war news will the newspapers print thirty years from now—provided the war lasts that long? A trench newspaper, Le Diable au Cor, the official organ of a brave and frolicsome corps of crack Alpine riflemen, does not hesitate, in its latest issue, to risk an answer to this question. The following bits of news, according to the editor, are taken from Le Matin of November 10th, 1946:

"After thirty-two years of hostilities the central committee of the Socialdemocratie has once more affirmed its fidelity to the imperial government and put on Belgium the responsibility of the war.

"Army men have been authorized by the commander-in-chief to add 40 centimeters to the length of their coat sleeves in order to make room for the regulation stripes. (A stripe is at present added to every soldier's sleeve for each six months of service at the front, and a stripe on the right arm for each successive wound.)

"It has been noticed that the majority of young recruits are illiterate. For this reason the commander-in-chief has issued a circular ordering night classes to be held in the trenches.

"As the boches have sunk four more passenger steamers belonging to the United States, President Roosevelt, who has just succeeded Mr. Hughes, has sent Emperor William an eloquent little note, to which, so far, he has received no reply. This note is No. 2,687.

"To utilze the live forces of the nation the government recently formed a volunteer corps of legless men. The president of the republic, in the presence of a multitude of people, on the Esplanade des Invalides, presented the flag to this corps of elite.

"M. Honnorat, the deputy who in 1916 drafted a bill to advance the clock an hour in summer, has now proposed a law to suppress, provisionally, the months of December, January and February, which, owing to a lack of combustibles, are particularly trying for the poor. Everyone admits the urgency of the propositon.

"In Greece there is loud talk of the abdication of Venizelos I. One Constantine by name, who for the last 40 years has lived at Aix-les-Bains in a furnished house, has landed at Saloniki at the head of a detachment of ferocious republicans.

"An escadrille of 10,000 aeroplanes, commanded by Gen. Navarre, last Friday succeeded in performing a wonderful feat. By means of harpoons our aviators caught a division of cavalry in the environs of Schlestadt, and, with their horses, arms and luggage, transported them to Puy-de-Dome.

"The commissariat has furnished each soldier with a knife called 'a Swiss army knife.' This knife has eighteen blades, varying in size; a circular saw, a drill, a hammer, a pedometer, an automatic weighing machine, a salad basket, and a shower bath apparatus.

"The second railway line of the submarine tunnel connecting Cherbourg with New York was inaugurated on Friday.

"To increase the ration of meat allowed civilians in the rear who suffer more and more from the diminution of live stock, the commissariat has decided to ship daily to the Paris markets twelve complete carloads of rats from the trenches. Rats, as everyone knows, constitute a most delicate dish. Doubtless they will soon be seen in fashionable restaurants and on the tables of the greatest epicures."

"There goes that big financial speculator, and how well he looks! He is certainly holding his own."

"Yes—and a lot of other people's"

WHAT EDITORS SAY OF WEST SIMCOE ELECTION

A Striking Rebuke

(Guelph Herald)

The return of Mr. W. T. Allan by a handsome majority in West Simcoe is proof that the Conservatives have mended their broken fences and that the effort of the Liberals to carry seats in unity with the anti-prohibition vote has petered out. Such transparent attempts to run with the temperance hare and hide with the liquor advocates could not long prevail, and it is gratifying to note that it has ended in a striking rebuke.

No More Snatch Verdicts

(Brantford Courier.)

Perth, and one of the Toronto seats were recently won by an alliance with the liquor men and the Opposition fondly looked for a similar result in the fight just closed. The outcome is a lesson to them that snatch verdicts on the basis named are now at an end.

Liberal Hopes Dispelled

(Brockville Times.)

But the result in West Simcoe indicates that the electors of that riding were not to be misled. The outcome of his election where all combined eqort was brought against the Government should dispel the hopes entertained by the Liberal organizers of the province.

Nor for Toronto

(Belleville Inteligencer.)

West Simcoe has done well, let Toronto West do betetr. A majority of a thousand or two in favor of an honest Government, would sound well.

That Unholy Alliance

(Kingston Standard.)

There is no doubt that, as in the case of North Perth and West Toronto, the liquor interests worked with the Rowell-Dewart people — not because they are specially enamored of the Liberal Dry-Wets but because they seek to wreak vengeance upon the Conservative party for the passage of the Prohibition measure which has proven such a God-send to Ontario. It is an unholy alliance, and probably not altogether to the liking of Liberals like Mr. Rowell; but with Dewart the Wet Nurse of a Dry party the alliance is scarcely to be wondered at.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

ELOPEMENT BY AIR

Aviator's Plan to Carry off Heiress Frustrated by Parents

A seventeen-year-old heiress of Berlin, who had planned an elopement in an aeroplane, was hurriedly hauled out of her seat in the machine, and taken back weeping to her parents by the police of the German capital.

Her love romance began with an aeroplane ride with a handsome young pilot, who first became her tutor, and then, after many aviation lessons, her accepted lover.

But her father, a rich property owner in Berlin, got wind of the love affair, and sternly forbade it. So the young people decided, literally, to fly. At early morning the girl quietly left her house in a taxi-cab for the Johannisthal aviation ground. Her keen-eyed parent observed her going from a window, however, and quickly set out in pursuit, while her mother telephoned to the police.

The aeroplane, with the eloping couple in it, was just about to start when the pursuers dashed on the field. Before the swain could get his propeller fairly going the end to the romance had come.

WHATEVER SHE LIKED

By Isabel Ecclestone Mackay

"It is only proper prodigals who have feasts," said the girl. "You do not look hungry enough, or poor enough, or repentent."

"But I may be, all three. It is not pleasant to come back to empty places. If it had not been for you I should have stayed away from here. The old tragedy is still in the air."

"Need we speak of it?" Una had never heard of the old tragedy, and her reluctance might easily seem to be born of sympathy.

"No. It is all past. But there is one question. Do you think my father—softened—at the last?"

"I do not think," she said with conviction, "that your father was the kind of man to soften."

"No. He was hard. But I have never been able in all these years to feel that I was in the wrong."

"You were not," said Una with suspicious promptness.

"All the same, without you, this old place would be full of ghosts!"

The girl's soft laugh rang out. Ghosts were not a dangerous topic.

"Even as it is, I'll swear I saw a ghost at the station," he continued more cheerfully, "the ghost of Aunt Emma. Someone in this town looks appallingly like Aunt Emma. What a tartar she was! But I have some pleasant memories. Do you remember the day she sent us berrying? I think that was one of life's golden days!" He gave her a long clear look and the girl's eyes fell.

"Do you know," he went on, "your letters are not a bit like you. You wrote seldom and when you did you were so very business like, all about people, and things and glass and pewter and old china. You seemed to live in a whirl. But it is very peaceful here."

Una indicated the glass and pewter in the glass cabinets. "They are most interesting," she said, "and if you think I am not busy you are mistaken. I work all day and I study at night. I never have a minute. This is a holiday I am doing whatever I like."

He gave her an understanding smile.

"I know; I've felt like that too. There have been times when I have hated my work."

"I hate mine always," calmly. "That is the tragedy of life, that one cannot choose one's work."

"But one can!"

"You—perhaps." Her tone was low—"I—too—sometime!"

He drew a little closer to where she sat in the firelight.

"Why do you wear gloves?" He asked suddenly. "They feel so unfriendly."

The girl blushed furiously.

"I wear gloves to hide my hands But if you like—" She stripped the long gloves from her fingers and held them out to him. By the firelight he could see that the nails were broken and stained. They belonged to hands that work hard and roughly.

"I have seen hands like this before," he said, and bent down and kissed them.

"All the same," he added, "I do not like to see your hands like this. Is it really necessary to work so hard?"

"Yes."

He glanced around the pleasant room.

"Have you a maid?"

The girl snatched her hands away.

"Oh, I suppose a maid's hands would not matter!"

"Not to me," serenely. "Why should they? It is your hands that matter to me. I'm not a socialist. I don't know your maid."

"Which reminds me," said his hostess rising, "that the maid is out. If we are to have chocolate I must make it myself." And before he had time to notice the unwonted color in her cheeks she had gone.

Left alone, the visitor gazed thoughtfully at the fire. The cat stretched up and rubbed herself against his knee. "Nice pussy!" he said and then from an old habit born of solitude he spoke his thought aloud. "You are a dream-cat, pussy, did you know it? You are part of a dream come true."

With unaccustomed restlessness he arose and began to pace the room, noting with quick glances the shining glass and pewter. "And I thought that she cared for nothing but glass and pewter!" he said and smiled. "I had not seen her hands then. Her hands tell more than her letters ever did!"

Suddenly the photo-panel on the piano caught his eye. He picked it up curiously.

"By Jove! Aunt Emma to the life! Who can she be? She must be the same woman whom I saw at the station to-day. Some unknown cousin probably. Strange how the type persists." He shrugged his shoulders with half humorous distaste born of too vivid remembrance of Aunt Emma and her type. She had dominated his childhood, a fine woman, big, capable, managing, a little loud, a little hard. His own more delicate mother had always been forced into second place. Karl had not loved Aunt Emma—much.

Replacing the photograph he turned to meet the girl coming in with the chocolate tray.

With practised hand she set out the pretty tea table and arranged the cups, the thin sandwiches and the cake, but, as she turned again for something forgotten, she tripped and nearly fell. The sudden movement which she made to save herself sent one of the missfit slippers flying out onto the hearthrug.

Karl pounced upon it with glee.

"Cinderella's slipper!" he declared. "Now we shall see if you are a truly princess or only one of the wicked sisters making believe!"

"Please—I can put it on myself."

"No, I insist." He waver her grandly to a chair and seeing no help for it the girl sat down and extended a timid foot.

"Why! What's this? Does Cinderella wear her big sister's shoes? Don't you know that you will ruin your feet with slippers like this? By the Brobdigagian size they might well belong to that lady over on the piano."

"They do," said the girl calmly. "She left them here."

"Well I'd wear my own next time! By the way who is the piano-lady? She is the image of Aunt Emma. Can't you see it?"

"Yes—now that you mention it."

"Is she a cousin?"

"Yes—a cousin."

"I was sure of it. Which one?"

"Do you want me to go into her family tree? The chocolate is getting cold, and I am hungry."

Immediately he was all attention. No doubt, he scolded, she had been neglecting her proper meals in the absence of her maid. Women are so foolish about those things! Why had she let her maid go, anyway? Had she had any lunch, or a hot dinner? When was the maid coming back? In the meantime she was to sit still and allow him to wait upon her. He was rather a notable housekeeper. She like lots of sugar?

It was apparent that the girl liked to be waited upon. She sat still and she let him do everything that he wanted. She accepted a footstool with a smile and said that she liked lots of sugar.

"That maid of yours is a cracking good cook!" he said when they came to the cake.

They did not hurry over the chocolate. She knew that when it was finished it would be time for him to go. He knew it too, and it is wonderful how long chocolate can be made to last. Still he felt it would be unwise to outstay his welcome and anyway there would be to-morrow—and many to-morrows.

But the girl watched the clock with brooding eyes!

She found out many things about him during that last half hour. He had much to tell her of ends attained; of the earlier struggle he said little; the main thing seemed to be that he had won out. She accepted this fact with sympathy but without the elation he had looked for. It puzzled him; the Lenore he remembered had loved money and worshipped success; but to this girl it seemed like mercenary boasting to say that he was really rich at last.

Then, in the middle of a sentence, his eyes strayed to the clock and he arose at once.

"I have stayed too late," he said, "but you understand, don't you?"

The girl followed him silently into the hall. She did not press him to stay. She seemed to have nothing to say. He noticed with a pang of self-reproach that she appeared very tired. At the door he took her hands again and held them as long as he dared. Then he kissed each one separately and gave them back to her.

His last words were "It does not happen to every man to have his dream come true." Then he said Good Night!" quickly, and went out.

She let him go. She let him go as far as the gate. Then she ran after him, a slight figure in blue and gold against the snow, and called him back.

"I have to tell you," she said, standing straight, and defiant before him under the hall light. "I intended to let you find out but I can't. I am not Miss Lenore Helmick, your cousin. I am Una Lee, her maid. She calls me her secretary but it does not mean anything. Miss Helmick is the lady on the piano. You must have passed her at the station. I am masquerading in her clothes. She said I might do anything I liked. And the only thing I liked was to stop being a servant—if only for a little while! It is over now. But I'm not sorry. I enjoyed deceiving you and letting you wait on me. But I am only a servant, really. That," with a flashing look at her hands, "accounts for these!"

"I thought those hands had a history," he said. "But what accounts for you?"

"I don't know that," she answered.

He came as near her as he dared and his smile was boyishly exultant.

"Do you think we may safely blame you on Providence?" he asked. "Because, to me, He seems to be the likeliest," and this time he kissed her on the lips.

Woman and Bear

Rather an exciting adventure befell Mrs. Edward St. Thomas, of Uxbridge, Ontario, while out in the woods looking for the cows. It was nearly dark when she heard the piteous cry of a little bear. As Mrs. St. Thomas was well used to the woods, she was not afraid, and made toward the direction from which the noise came and soon met the little cub, which ran towards her. She picked it up and was considering what to do with it when suddenly the mother bear appeared on the scene. The cub gave a cry of delight, and sprang with such force from the woman's arms that she lost her balance, falling to the ground. Fortunately, she had presence of mind enough not to run, and after standing a few moments, both bears went leisurely into the woods.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

To prevent the skin from discoloring after a fall or blow, take a little dry starch, moisten it with cold water, and lay it on the injured part.

It is a good plan to pepper a carpet thickly just where any heavy piece of furniture has to rest on it, as this helps to keep moths, etc., away.

To clean glass toilet bottles, put a little vinegar and salt into the bottle, allow to stand for two hours, and then rinse out in clear warm water.

To restore a voice rendered hoarse by much speaking, eat a piece of anchovy. If there is no cold or fatigue the effect is almost instantaneous.

If a tablespoonful of vinegar is put in the saucepan just before straining the potatoes, this will take all blackness out and make them white and floury.

Some people place a small bag of unslaked lime inside the piano to keep the damp away. This prevents the wires from rusting, and keeps the piano in good condition.

In order to ensure a good gloss on starched collars, first mix the starch with cold water, add a tiny lump of butter about the size of a marble, then pouring on the boiling water.

To remove paint from a dress take a camel-hair brush, dip the point of it in turpentine, and just damp the parts that are stained. Let garment dry, and then rub briskly, when the paint will fall off in a dust. If it does not all come off repeat the operation.

Dish Mops

If dish mops are kept in a solution of soda and water when not in use they will be odorless.

A Handy Combination

Split Pea Soup

Put one cup of split peas into saucepan with three pints of cold water. Heat slowly. When boiling point has been reached draw away from hot fire and allow to simmer for one hour. Add one even teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of minced onion, two tablespoons of minced carrots or celery. Boil slowly one hour longer. Press all through coarse sieve. Serve hot with squares of fried bread.

Celery Cream Soup

Use all the tops and leaves and stalks of coarse celery. Wash and put into granite stewpan with just enough water to cover. If a slice of onion is at hand add it. Boil until tender. Put in colander and mash with potato masher. To every cup of the celery stock add two cups of milk, a little butter and half a teaspoon of cornstarch. Boil in double boiler for ten minutes. Serve with cheese toast

For New Housewives

Keep careful tracks of your expenditures, but burn the tracks at the end of every week.

When you take a good, hard cry, save work by crying on the kitchen floor and then mopping it quickly.

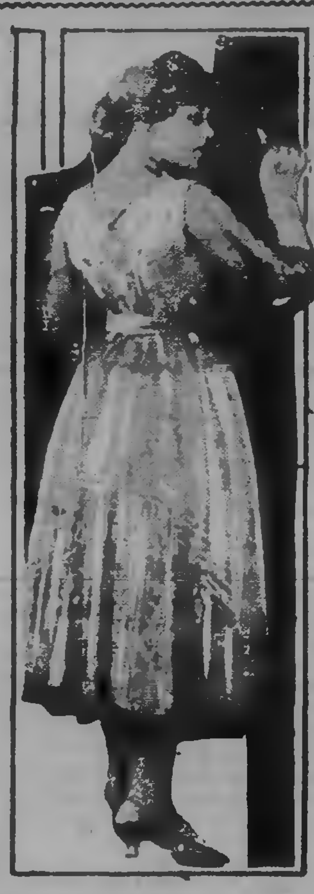
Don't try to fatten him on lady fingers and marshmallows when he has been brought up all his life on fried liver and onions.

Don't strain your brain by thinking of such an idealistic subject as a new hat and at the same time be peeling little, wormy apples.

Of course your husband will always be throwing up to you the coffee that his mother used to make, so provide yourself with a dainty raincoat to be worn at the table.

About 25 per cent. of the total immigration into the United States is composed of women.

FASHION HINTS



The reception gown of all lace is an important item. In this gown a combination of black and cream, silver lace is used, the latter partly veiling the former. Particularly attractive is the quaint method of fitting at the waistline and the short lace peplum.

Herbs Add Much to Niceness if Wisely Used

Many women think they may only use herbs in stuffing for fowl or roasts and when they dine away from home they wonder why certain dishes have a piquancy theirs lack. Because herbs are apt to give strange, strong and even disagreeable flavors when used too generously is no reason for going to the extreme of only using pepper and salt in your cookery. Salt and pepper add goodness to the foods you put them in because you have learned to use them properly.

Stuffing of forcemeat is an excellent thing to experiment upon with various seasonings. The base may be dried, rolled bread, rolled crackers or stale bread broken fine. If you want it moist sprinkle it gently with cold water. Hot milk or water makes a stuffing heavy and doughy.

To this add chopped meat of any sort, or minced oysters or pounded chestnuts. Pork sausage is excellent in forcemeat, and minced veal and ham still better. A delicate filling is made of chicken meat and a little liver chopped and pounded together. Sage leaves should be dried and rubbed between the fingers to a powder. A bit of this may be used in any filling.

GREAT WINTER ECONOMY

Many Uses For Old Coal—In Stove and Gardens

A woman writes: Few people know the value of old coal, or cinders. With any heater, sifting coal ashes more than repays for the time and trouble taken. If the ashes are dampened the problem of dust is solved. When the cinders are picked over and freed from melted clinkers, they should be well soaked with water. Two or three inches of thoroughly wet cinders on top of a bed of new coal makes the hottest and most lasting fire that any coal will produce.

One reason is that the fine coal keeps the heat in the heater. Another reason is that the water and coal gas join to make a new and more powerful gas still. To show what an economy cinders may become, I cite the fact that, whereas I used to burn twelve and thirteen tons of coal, I now require only about half that amount.

The sifted ashes, never throw away. Use them on walks, on grass, on the lawn, and even spade them into the garden. Mixed with soil, they serve several purposes; they sweeten it, tend to retain moisture, and do away with many bugs and worms. Among the vegetables, squashes are especially fond of coal ashes; among the flowers—asters.

ON WASHING BLANKETS

When washing blankets choose a warm sunny day with a gentle breeze. Prepare suds by dissolving in hot water half a bar of any good white hard soap, one tablespoonful of borax and one tablespoonful of aqua ammonia for each pair of blankets. Let suds cool until they will bear the hands. Immerse the blankets and let them stand in the suds for an hour, keeping the temperature about as hot as the hands will bear by frequent adding hot water. Do not rub soap on the blankets, nor scour nor rub them. Lay the washboard across the tub, then lay the blanket over the board, going over the portion on the board, with a stiff hand brush, stripping out the dirt which has become loosened by the soaking. Rinse in water of the same temperature, and hang to dry in plenty of breeze. Success in washing blankets lies in avoiding extreme changes of temperature.

Coins of a Brief Reign

The civic museum of Bologna, Italy, is possessed of a double golden scudo coined at Bologna in 1591, during the phenomenally brief reign of Innocent IV., which lasted two months and one day. The double golden scudo are the only coins known to have been turned out during that period. The engraver was Alexandro Menganti, who has been called the unknown Michael Angelo. So rare have the scudo become that only three specimens are known to be in existence.

The Tipping Evil

The president of a certain line of coastwise steamers has a novel system of handling the tipping evil. He sends on each of his boats every now and then a detective, who has instructions to go into the dining room, order a large and elaborate repast, and hand the waiter a tip of 10 cents. If the waiter is silent or surly after receiving this small gratuity his number is promptly reported. It is said that in no place in the world can such a number of smiling waiters be found as in the dining saloons of this particular steamship line.

FAMILY DOCTOR'S GOOD ADVICE

To Go On Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Because They Did Her Good

ROCHON, P. Q., JAN. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I had frequent dizzy spells and became greatly run down. A neighbor advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve, and he advised me to go on with "Fruit-a-tives".

I consider that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives" and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches—'try Fruit-a-tives' and you will get well". CORINE GAUDREAU.

IN MODERN NURSERY

Children do Not Now Learn to Contrate the Mind

The trend in many nurseries and school rooms nowadays is against the formation of habits of attention. The restlessness and speed of life make for this state of things anyhow and spread to our children. A multitude of toys, one discarded for another when it has been little more than looked at; books read in cursory fashion, one succeeded by another too quickly for thought; a rush of lessons, games, excursions, motor rides—all these make the faculty of attention more and more difficult to arouse and maintain.

Of course, we cannot go against the trend of our age; but we can bear its tendencies, both good and bad, in mind and endeavor by example and personal service to counterbalance what is bad among a great deal that is good. We can talk, for instance, to our boys and girls of the books they read, encouraging them without knowing it to fix their attention upon them. We can, while they are quite small, devise games which will promote attention, instead of aiding and abetting them by playing first one thing and then another, flitting from piano to cards and cards to toys in that hour or so we devote to the children, as the will-o'-the-wisp mood of the moment dictates

To Prevent Wrinkles

Unless constant care is used during the winter almost invisible little wrinkles will appear, to grow and deepen until difficult to remove. This is because the skin is less oily in winter, the pores are not opened by perspiration and the winds have a drying effect. After the application of cold water to the face in the morning, rub in a small quantity of cold cream with a rotary upward motion. At night after bathing the face with hot water, rub in a generous amount.

Halibut Rabbit

Melt 1 teaspoonful butter, add a few drops of onion juice and 1 tablespoon cornstarch mixed with ¼ teaspoon paprika, then pour on gradually 1 cup milk, add ¾ cup of soft cheese, cut fine, and 1 cup cold, flaked, cooked halibut. When cheese is melted, add 1 egg, slightly beaten, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Serve on crackers.

Fried Carrots

Grate enough carrots to make one cup, add a beaten egg, half a cup of milk and flour enough to make a batter which will run off a spoon. To this add half a teaspoon of baking powder. Grease a frying pan and fry in small flat cakes.

How to Stuff Dishes

In stuffing poultry, fish or cuts of meat, avoid pressing the filling tightly. There must be room for the stuffing to swell, and beside this you want it to absorb the juices of the cooking meat, and this it cannot do if pressed in hard and tight

Don't Persecute your Bowels

THE IDEAL WIFE

A SENSE OF HUMOR AND A SWEET TEMPER ARE MOST ESSENTIAL QUALITIES.

The ideal wife is the one who does you credit in company and gives you satisfaction at home. It goes without saying that she should be pretty, graceful, and know how to dress herself; she should be healthy and active, good at sports, fond of an open-air life, but also fond of her home, and take an intelligent interest in the books, the art, and the movements, political or otherwise, of the day.

She should not spare herself trouble in keeping herself and her home attractive. She should be a wife and a mother whom her husband and children can be proud of.

The woman who is strong and courageous at games, but gentle and feminine at home, gets more affection than any other kind. One of her most important qualifications is that she should have a saving sense of humor, not only for herself, so that she may avoid troubles from which the only way of escape is backing out, but also in order to keep her husband from doing the wrong thing.

Charles I. would never have had his head cut off if Henrietta Maria had had this saving sense. This sense of humor is also valuable for retaining the husband's affections.

A woman ought to be a good hostess and a good housekeeper, if she cannot afford to pay another woman to do her housekeeping for her, and then she must take care that the other woman is not too attractive, or she may find herself superfluous. But if attractiveness is the wife's strong point, and she makes her husband uncomfortable by running his house too badly, she should pay a substitute to do her cooking, and the nursing of her children for her.

The ideal wife should have an ideal temper; there is nothing so wasteful as "cussedness." She should remember that her husband ought to be her most special friend of all, and that she should, if anything, be rather more careful in creating the best impression on him than on any other man.

Above all, let her flirt with her husband. If she does this well, he will always be her lover, and she will always have her youth.—Douglas Slade, in the "Red Magazine."

MARRYING FOR MONEY

Neither Justifiable Nor Dignified If Wealth Alone Considered

No woman is justified in marrying a man solely for wealth. Even if a man is infatuated enough to consent to such a union, still she is not justified. Such a wife would be as a hired servant, for her services would be given for a money consideration. If business troubles came and wealth was lost, the sustaining element to the marriage would perish. The wife would not be capable of being the strength and support to her husband that a husband in trouble usually receives at such times. Her heart could not be susceptible to so fine a sense of sympathy, and though she would weep at the financial trouble, the tears would be characteristic of a dull sense of personal loss. Furthermore, a woman who is cold-blooded enough to enter into a mercenary marriage is dangerously ambitious, and must be possessed of exceedingly low ideals.

DAVID DEYELL WAS INJURED

UNCONSCIOUS AFTER BEING STRUCK BY FALLING TIMBER.

(Special Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Jan. 14. — A jolly sleighing party numbering about forty of the A.Y.P.A. spent a delightful evening at Beaver rink on Mr. Sherin's farm. After skating for a couple of hours Mr. and Mrs. Sherin invited the young people to their home, where refreshments were served, after which the party returned home.

Mrs. H. Foster and children of Carberry, Man., arrived in Omemee last week and will visit Mrs. Foster's mother, Mrs. Fitch.

Messrs. Smythe and Stinson have returned to their studies at Toronto University.

Mr. David Deyell is progressing favorably after his accident of a week ago, when he was struck over the eye by falling timber and rendered unconscious.

Mr. H. Calvert, wife and children of Carberry, are renewing acquaintances in and around Omemee.

Mr. J. Knight has bought the residence and butcher shop owned by Mr. A. Stinson.

Mr. Reed of Cannington visited Omemee last week.

Lieut. Bishop spent the week end with his mother in Toronto.

Mr. R. J. Thompson of Toronto spent the week end with his parents Dr. and Mrs. Thompson.

Mrs. F. Nugent, who has been the guest of Mrs. L. Mahood for some time, returned to her home in Lindsay this week.

WEAR OPEN SANDALS

Don't Go Barefoot For Beauty—Train the Arches

A woman journalist writes: During one summer, dozens of girls wrote to me on the advisability of spending the time barefoot at summer or seashore resorts, where there was enough seclusion to permit this freedom of dressing. Most wanted to know whether or not it would improve their feet. "Barefoot Lassie" being especially anxious as her feet were white and pink tinted, smooth and shapely. Undoubtedly, so long as none of these girls ran nails into their feet, the weeks spent running about so would improve their health.

But it would not improve their feet for no matter how healthy our savage ancestors were, in their "close to Nature" life, no one could accuse them of possessing beautiful feet. The mere fact of going barefoot would not break down the arch of the foot and make it flat, as some of my correspondents feared, but it would brown and toughen the skin and it would certainly spread the foot itself. Flat feet, when not the result of a jar or overly high heels, are usually a sign of lack of culture. Peasants and primitive folk are flat-footed—but then, the children of women who have hurt their feet by wearing injuriously high heels are apt to be flat-footed also.

Instead of going barefoot, I advised my correspondents to wear open sandals, which would allow the foot freedom of action and plenty of air, at the same time preventing it from spreading or growing coarse in appearance. For flat feet, I never advise false arches or braces, these hold up the foot, it is true, but weaken the bones and muscles that should be taught to do this for themselves. An exercise of standing first on the flat of the foot, then on the top, practised ten minutes a day, is quite beneficial. Shoes with broad heels an inch or so high are best to wear.

Rev. Dr. Lee will preach from the following subjects next Sunday:—Morning, Toward the Sunrising; evening, Showing his Colors; afternoon, at Garden Hill, Not Our Own. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston are expected to sing at these services.

Col. T. H. Race, field secretary of the National Sanitarium Association, will give a lecture in the Town Hall, Millbrook, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 24, on the subject of tuberculosis, illustrated with instructive lantern views. A collection will be taken in aid of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumption.

Next Sunday, Jan. 21, 1917, will be the 25th anniversary of Christ Church, Bailieboro. Services will be held at 10.30 a.m., with celebration of Holy Communion, the rector officiating, and at 7.30 p.m. Rev. A. T. Weir of Bethany will preach. The annual entertainment will be held on Thursday, Jan. 25. The "Temple of Fame" will be given by 36 characters.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas' Church was held on Monday, the 15th inst., at the home of Miss Kells. Owing to the absence of the president, Mrs. Needler, vice-president, took the chair. After the devotional exercises, and the regular business disposed of, interesting letters were read from Apsley concerning the bale sent them, and from Toronto giving accounts of the December and January board meetings. Mrs. Westmacot gave a short sketch of Burmah and Mrs. Mulligan concluded the reading of the life of Judson. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. C. Needler.

Owing to the inclement weather on Jan. 5 the winter horse show was postponed to the 12th, when large numbers attended. The prize winners are as follows:—

Carriage Horses—Single horse in harness: B. W. Wood, Peterborough. Pr. horses in harness: George Brown Millbrook. Brood mare: 1, T. A. Kelly, Millbrook; 2, B. W. Wood, Peterborough.

Roadsters—Single horse in harness: 1, N. Henry, Millbrook; 2, H. String, Millbrook; 3, J. W. Walker, Port Hope. Pr. horses in harness: 1, C. F. Beatty, Campbellcroft; 2, T. G. Dainard, Bailieboro; gent's turnout: 1, N. Henry, Millbrook; 2, B. W. Wood, Peterborough.

Heavy Draught—Pr. horses: A. B. Byers, Bailieboro. Brood mare: 1, R. Grandy, Ida; 2, R. A. Henry, Garden Hill.

Agricultural—Pr horses: 1, M. H. Ward, Pontypool; 2, R. A. Henry, Garden Hill. Brood mare: 1, Bowles Bros., Peterborough; 2, Bowles Bros., Peterborough.

The judges were W. J. Bell, Department of Agriculture, and W. J. Gardhouse of Weston.

The aniversary services of Grace Presbyterian Church were held on Sunday and Monday last and were most successful. Prof. Law, one of the oldest divines of Toronto, preached eloquent sermons morning and evening. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston sang at both services, to the delight of all. On Monday evening the lecture by Rev. MacKenzie was greatly enjoyed.

Rice With Cheese

Wash 1 cup rice and cook in 2 quarts boiling water. Boil hard to keep grains separate and lift occasionally with a fork to prevent sticking. Drain in a colander and set in the oven a few minutes to dry out. Put a layer of cooked rice in a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of grated cheese, then add a layer of grated sauce, made by melting 2 tablespoons butter in a saucepan, adding 2 tablespoons flour and stirring until smooth, then pouring in 1 cup of milk and boiling 5 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Alternate layers of rice, cheese and white sauce until materials are used, then cover with buttered crumbs, and bake until crumbs are browned.

LANGUID TYPE OF GIRL DYING

Type Cannot and Should Not Survive in Strenuous Times

Happily, the languid girl type is disappearing—happily for the other sex. This type of girl is languid either by temperament or design. If it is the former, there's some excuse for her; if the latter, none. And it is generally the latter. She's invariably pretty, be it noted, for it would be dangerous for a plain girl to assume such airs.

The languid girl maintains an attitude of studied indifference upon all occasions. Everything is "such a bore." She moves dreamily from place to place; she answers most questions in monosyllables; she reclines frequently, and her poses are carefully considered. Men she makes into slaves. They must play the undignified roles of beasts of burden, and carry on all the conversation as well. Do they submit? Yes, provided that she's sufficiently pretty; but even then they are apt to get a little tired.

The languid girl is dying out as a type. By a curious irony, the times that created her have, to a certain extent, made her impossible. These are strenuous days, and to men the hours are precious. They cannot afford, if they want to make money, to waste time lavishly, and the languid girl is a terrible "waster" in this respect. She expects, nay, demands, unremitting attention from her admirers. There is to be no rapid love making to her.

The languid girl's attitude is, dispassionately judged, an uncomfortable trait. It may be graceful, and it is perhaps picturesque, but it does not somehow answer to this terribly matter-of-fact old world. Brightness, companionship and sympathy are the great keynotes of earthly happiness. And beyond all price is woman's sympathy. Not so much sentimental sympathy, if the term may be used, but the intelligent, brave sympathy that upholds a man in stress and trial and tinges dark clouds with unspeakable sweetness.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING

Cream ¼ cup of butter and add gradually ½ cup of sugar. Beat the yolks of 2 eggs, add ½ cup of sugar and ⅛ teaspoon of salt and combine the two mixtures; then add ½ cup of milk alternately with 1 1-3 cups of flour mixed and sifted with 3 level teaspoons of baking powder. Beat thoroughly, stir in 1½ squares of chocolate melted over boiling water, flavor with vanilla and lemon, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and bake in a pan having a tube in the centre. Serve with whipped cream placed in the centre and around the sides of the pudding.

ON GROWING SLENDER

Under-fed Nations do Best—What to Eat

Brillat-Savarin, a philosophic Frenchman of the Napoleonic era, once remarked that the fate of a nation depended upon how it was fed. Under-fed nations improve faster than overfed ones—for the nation, like the individual, who grows fat, is marking time in progress. Fat means easy living, laziness, or eating too much—or a combination of all three.

Many a woman who takes little exercise, works not at all, and who eats a lot, remains thin; the reason here is usually that her metabolism is low. And many a woman, on the road to fatness, has almost starved herself, and has continued to get fatter. Her metabolism is high—that is, she extracts a great deal of nourishment from her food, before it passes on out of the body.

This matter of metabolism enters a great deal into any reduction system. But one thing is fundamental—if you eat less in food than you consume by energy, it is inevitable that you will reduce, for the body will make up its food from its own superfluous flesh.

Yet nowadays, a woman need not go actually hungry; the science of food and food combination is so well known, that all she need do is to follow certain set menus. Otherwise, she may eat almost as much as she likes, and almost anything she likes—with a few exceptions.

INOCULATIONS AT HAVELOCK

MAJOR EASTWOOD TREATED 247TH PLATOON.

(Special Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Jan. 18. — Mr. Firman Haig of Toronto spent the week-end at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cook of Trent River are visiting friends at Gormley.

Mr. Bennett of Wolsley, Sask., is the guest of his sister, Mrs. William Davidson.

Mr. nad Mrs. Wallar have returned from an extended visit with their their daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) H. C. Kindred, of Tweed.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, commanding officer of the 247th Battalion, was in town on Friday last arranging for the patriotic band concert in the town hall on Friday night.

Mrs. M. Foley has received a letter from her son, Pte. Mac Foley, stating that he is now in a hospital in England from an attack of nephritis. He took ill on Dec. 22nd last and is getting along splendidly at the Third Western Hospital at Ninian Park, Cardiff.

The members of the local platoon were innoculated against typhoid fever on Tuesday afternoon by Major Eastwood of Peterborough.

The 247th Battalino is now 140 strong, and Havelock is still leading all other outside points in recruits.

Miss Kathleen Morton, evangelist, of Toronto, will conduct evangelistic services in the Methodist church at Hastings commencing on Sunday, the 28th of January. Miss Morton is now engaged in Toronto. She is a splendid speaker.

Be sure and attend the patriotic concert in the town hall on Friday night.

The local platoon attended the morning service in the Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Mr. Frank Lems of Belmont had the misfortune to cut off two of his toes on Friday last while engaged in cutting wood.

Sermon by the Freight Car

WHO AM I?

(Issued by the G.T.R.)

I am more talked of than anything else in America!

I am the autocrat of the commercial interests.

I control the treasures of the world.

I comand the bank clearances.

I am as powerful as Ajax.

I can stop commerce.

I am supreme.

Rulers and the common people alike take off their hats to me.

I am merciful.

I can help you, but I lack energy. You must supply that.

Energise me and you increase your bank account.

Stimulate me and the wheels of commerce revolve.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

How to Classify Birds was the subject taken up by the Canadian Standard Efficiency Test groups at the Y.M.C.A. last night. Mr. Elcome, the local taxidermist, gave the boys an interesting and instructive talk on birds and how to place them in their proper groups.

Mr. Elcome selected for his talk last night the birds of North America and the British birds, telling of their characteristics and manner of living. At the close of the address a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Elcome for his kindness in preparing such an interesting and instructive talk for the boys.

Collection Night will be held next Wednesday, when the boys will bring their collections of coins, stamps, minerals, different kinds of wood, or articles in the various stages of manufacture.

The checker, chess and billiard tournament is proving a good success and some interesting games are taking place in the first round. Tonight the Senior Employed Boys Life Problem will meet at 7.30; gymnasium class at 8.00.

102 CASES TREATED AT ISOLATION HOSPITAL ONLY THREE FATAL

Board of Health Hears Report From Acting Matron.---M.O.H. to Bring in Report on Milk Testing.---Alderman Duncan Again Chairman

Ald. Geo. Duncan was re-elected chairman of the Board of Health at the organization meeting held last night. There were present Mayor Duffus, Ald. Saunders, J. Murty and Dr Amys, M.O.H.

The report of Miss H. Reid, the acting matron of the Queen Mary Hospital, showed that 102 cases had been treated in the year, divided as follows: Scarlet fever, 17; diphtheria 64; measles, 16; mumps, 4. There were 16 of these cases in the hospital on Jan. 1, 1916. The total number was 99, total deaths, 3 from diphtheria. The number of city patient was 97 and from the country 5.

$1832.34 Pay Accounts

The amount of accounts rendered to pay patients is $1,832.34.

The hospital was closed during the months of August and December. The cost per meal was 8.57 cents.

Owing to increased number of patients, also advanced prices, increased expenditures were necessary in every line, with the result that a very small amount of the appropriation was left to make any necessary improvements, one of which proved itself very satisfactory—the draining of the root house and cellar. It is at present storing in good condition vegetables from the garden sufficient for the needs of the hospital until a new supply is available.

Gardening operations were most successful. Splendid results have repaid the work done by the caretaker. No expense for labor, outside of ploughing and harrowing, was incurred.

With regard to the present condition of the building:

1 The walls of the various wards in the north half of the building are badly in need of repair and paint.

2. The floors of the second flat are of very poor quality, are badly opened up and unsanitary, would like to suggest that these be replaced by hardwood floors similar to those on the first floor.

3 All exterior woodwork of the building is badly in need of paint.

Shacks were built in early spring for the accommodation of smallpox and meningitis patients. It has not been necessary to open same owing to absence of said disease. In case of being utilized furnishings and fittings will be necessary.

Expenditures

Drugs & medicines	$ 218.14
Groceries & provisions	951.46
Fuel	486.23
Light	46.83
Salaries	2100.62
Telephone	42.90
Water	60.00
Incidentals	383.32
Total	$4289.50
Appropriation	$4400.00
Balance	110.50

The board were very pleased with the report and Mayor Duffus moved the adoption, which carried.

Ald. Duncan was instructed to have the necessary improvements made to the hospital verandah and the recommendations as well as the consideration of the report of the M.O.H. for last year, was left over till the next meeting.

Milk to be Treated

Mayor Duffus is very strong for a thorough system of milk testing and inspection and asked the M.O.H. what arrangements could be made for the testing of milk.

Dr. Amys will bring a report on the subject at the next meeting and the Mayor and chairman will interview the chairman of the Utilities Commission as to the use of the laboratory.

Date of Meeting

It was decided to hold the regular meetings of the board on the second Tuesday of each month at 8 p.m.

The School Nurse

Dr. Amys in his annual report urged the necessity of the school nurse being under the control of the Health Board rather than the educational body. It is very necessary that the pupils of the Separate and Normal schools and the Collegiate Institute be systematically inspected as well as the Public schools. Dr. Amys stated that in case of an epidemic in any section of the city he would be able to centre the work of the nurses there.

The school board will be consulted in the matter at their next meeting.

The Ice Supply

Chairman Duncan and Dr. Amys were authorized to advertise for tenders for ice for the Queen Mary Hospital and to award the contract.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 815 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

GIFTS SENT TO FRANCE PLEASED THE SOLDIERS

LETTERS RECEIVED BY SECRETARY OF ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB.

That the Christmas boxes sent from St. Peter's Patriotic Club are giving much pleasure to the boys in the trenches is shown by the letters received daily by Mrs. Lehane, secretary of the club. As one of the boys, Pte. J. Cadigan, who is in France, said in his letter, "The mail bag is the most cheering thing in the British army, for no matter how blue, wet or tired the boys are, it seems to cheer us up to receive a letter or a parcel from across the sea. Another, Lieut. Rome E. Picard, France, writes: "In this business one gets many surprises and none greater or more pleasant than to receive a Christmas remembrance from St. Peter's Patriotic Club.

Pte. Henry Richardson writes that the best way he can express his gratitude is by doing his bit faithfully to keep the Huns from our beautiful city, and that he hopes to be back in dear old Canada by Christmas of this year. He also hopes that we will be able to "keep the home fires burning" till the boys come home. Sergeant Harold Morrow says he was delighted to get the lovely parcel sent by St. Peter's Patriotic Club as being one of the few treats they can have for Christmas it was very welcome.

Lance-Corp. A Picard, who is wounded and in a hospital in England, writes that "the parcel sent by St. Peter's Patriotic Club was very nice and carefully selected, and assures the members of the club that the boys in the trenches will be delighted to receive a box so well packed.

Sergt. J. H. Desautel writes from a hospital in England that it was a pleasant surprise to be remembered by St. Peter's Patriotic Club, as he did not enlist in Peterborough, and therefore did not expect the club to remember him.

Pte. W. J. Begley says the box received by him was useful in every way, especially the tobacco, and desires to thank the members of the club and congratulate them on the good judgment used in packing the boxes.

It will be remembered that St. Peter's Club sent 116 boxes to the boys overseas, and it is certainly gratifying to know that they are giving so much pleasure. Would it not be a good idea to let the spirit of Christmas be repeated oftener while the boys are away?

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes Every Man and Woman Adopts This Splendid Morning Habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice inside-bathing, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. for every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile, toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweeting and freshening effect upon the system.

Records of Teeth

Some large French insurance companies keep records of the teeth of their clients to insure identification after death.

Use Linseed Ooil

Linseed oil, applied to both sides of a window screen, will prevent rust as well as paint and is more easily put on.

Vest and Necktie

A combined vest and necktie, the former having no back for the sake of coolness, is a novel garment for men.

"A NEW UNCLE EVERY SUMMER"

TOO MANY "UNCLES" REPLY TO DIVORCE SUIT.

BILLS GREW APACE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—An uncle is a good thing for small boys to have, but in the opinion of Jacob B. Fragner, manufacture and a stockholder in the United Cigar Stores Company, there ought to be a limit to the supply. He said in the Supreme Court yesterday that his son Bertram, 10 years old, has them periodically, and that's his answer to his wife's separation suit.

The connection becomes clearer when the information is drawn from Fragner's affidavit that young men were apt to be found at his home by his wife's invitation, and that the observant neighbors often remarked that his son "had a new uncle every summer." These young men generally came, his statement continues, after his wife, Gertrude, had an impulse to go to some well-known resort where she made their acquaintance.

The friendships, according to his story, were more durable than the ordinary summer acquaintance, being renewed on his wife's return home. Her impulses to stay away were very frequent, so her husband avers, and would require eight or ten weeks to run their course. All the time, he swears, he paid the bills without a murmur.

He made no murmur either about the character of his wife's relations with the young men. Her friends, he admits and she aserts, were quite proper and platonic. What irked him in a way that no bills could, he said, was to find the young men doing their platonizing at his home. He objected and his wief brought suit for separation on the ground of cruelty.

Together with his own denial Fragner submitted affidavits from his friends to prove that he was not unsympathetic except about Plato. Ono statement reveals that Mrs. Fragner, after pointing out that she was sixteen years younger than her husband, reproached him for being "too domesticated." In another she is quoted as calling her husband "entirely too easy."

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

Plenty of hay and wood was the feature of the market all week, and every load sold, prices remaining unchanged. There were several loads of mixed wood on sale that did not meet with the approval of the users. It was rough swamp pine, balsam, cedar, etc.

These were a few loads of mixed butcher cattle shipped out this past week. The outside markets are very strong, and drovers from all sections of the province complain of a shortage of good cattle.

The demand for good fat lambs is great and hardly enough are being shipped to Toronto and Montreal to satisfy the packers.

Hogs have taken another jump and are quoted at $13 for local delivery.

The egg supply is getting greater every day and prices will be taking a big drop soon. Last Saturday 50c to 55c was the general price. It would not be surprising if 45c to 50c would be the figure on Saturday.

Butter is also weaker, and the tendency is for slightly lower prices. The grocers are selling good butter for 45c.

The fowl market is unchanged. The supply and demand are about equal.

HORSE MARKET

TORONTO, Jan. 17. — A fairly active horse trade was transacted at the Toronto horse market last week, and dealers have entered upon what they anticipate will be a good trade this week. At the Union Stock Yards Mr. Harland Smith stated that business was shaping up well. Over two carloads were taken to the West in lots of 7 to 19, mostly in chunks and mares. About 100 horses were sold at the Union Exchange, mostly in private sales. The French inspectors took 25 of this number. The number offered to the French buyers was 35, so that the average taken was higher than usual.

At the Repository there was a good trade last week. A couple of carloads of heavy blocks were shipped to Montreal and Wninipeg. The prices obtained for these animals ranged between $160 and $170. It is believed that there will be an active trade with the West in the next few months. A few heavy draught horses are being picked up, and the French inspectors brought in 150 remounts.

A COLLECTION OF LUCKY CHARMS FROM EVERY AGE

The modern woman who delights to jingle a bunch of miscellaneous charms at her wrist and who is on the lookout for fresh ideas will learn with satisfaction of a collection which includes every form of luck charm the world has known. This collection illustrates how little human nature has really changed. The collection is included in the Historical Medical Museum, founded by Henry S. Wellcome, and comprises Roman, Egyptian, Arabic, African, Chinese, Japanese and European pieces, ancient and moder.

The Egyptian charms include several small examples of that most famous and potent of all, the "Ankh," or key of life, which in Egyptian pictures is often seen in the hands of divine personages. But by far the commonest is that known as the "uatchat." To ward off the prevalent ophthalmia and other eye affections the ancient Egyptians used to trace on the lower eyelid a magical scroll-shaped pattern with powdered antimony, and the model of an eye so decorated (uatchat) was also worn as a charm.

There are also found ear-shaped charms against deafness, human teeth carved like Sphinxes. Another very rare figure represents a man holding his hand to his face as if in pain. It is believed that this charm is the only one of its kind in existence.

Roman Collection

The Roman collection dates back to about the time of Christ. The exhibits are made of copper-bronze and are of the usual shapes. A very interesting figure, concerning the nature of which little is known, represents a small horse, while another shows a shark's tooth embedded in a clasp of metal. These are rather bigger and more clumsy than the Egyptian ones and much less desirable as ornaments.

Besides the Roman exhibits are early and late pieces from West and Central Africa, the Congo and Arabia. Among these is a necklace labelled "Kubil," or "Kill Sixty," which was no doubt worn by a warrior. There are also several wood crocodiles with flat, smooth backs. It is said that these were used by doctors when puzzling out a difficult case. The doctor rubbed the crocodile's back and the animal told him what was wrong.

Remedies For Many Ills

The first piece is a small stone, like a human foot, carried about by a Frenchman who believed that it cured his gout and who parted with it very reluctantly. In the next case is a piece of amber shaped like a heart and used to ward off rheumatism until three years ago. A "rheumatism potato" from Norfolk lies beside it.

Near these are two cards each bearing a pair of mole's feet, which in Norfolk are still carried about as a toothache cure.

Other curious items of the same character are a small bone from the ankle used to ward off cramp by the East country people, a piece of vervain root, which is supposed to be a protection against witchcraft and is still in request in country districts for this purpose; a roll of eelskin obtained from a Suffolk woman, who carried it to prevent cramp; and a fossil sea urchin from a cottage which it had protected against the devil for many years.

DESTROY THE CLOTHES MOTH

SWAT THE MOTTLED MOTH THE REAL SOURCE OF THE PEST.

The work of the larvæ of the clothes moth is probably more familiar to the average housekeeper than the moth itself, although the latter is a very common object during the summer months in houses or rooms where the larvæ has been silently at work during the preceding winter and spring, working havoc among furs, woollens, feathers, and all similar animal substances not in constant use. The damage it does in this direction in wardrobes and to stored-away clothing is a constant source of anxiety to the economical housekeeper. Dusting and treating suspected articles with more or less odorous substances is almost wholly wasted effort. A little knowledge of the life history of the mischievous despoiler would show how easy it is to prevent damage by properly directed efforts. The tiny mottled brown moth, scarcely a quarter of an inch long, seen fluttering airily about rooms, apparently so ridiculously easy but really most difficult to catch in the hand, is the real source of the trouble.

It assumes the adult winged state about the beginning of June and onwards to the end of summer. If struck down with the hand when on the wing, or disturbed when in hiding, it runs very nimbly, and is adept at taking advantage of the slightest cover for concealing itself. During this stage it deposits its eggs, which are practically invisible when deposited among wearing apparel.

Contrary to the custom of moths generally the clothes moth does not attach its eggs to any object, and being loose and free the eggs may be quite easily brushed or shaken out of the articles wherein they have been any time after deposition before hatching takes place. It follows that frequent brushing and shaking of articles liable to attack, preferably in the open air, or at least away from the wardrobe, throughout the summer months, is the only rational way of preventing damage to clothing and woollens during the winter months. Spraying the wood inside the wardrobe with a solution of camphor in methylated spirit—an ounce to the pint—is a wise precaution, and will be effectual in destroying any unseen eggs or larvæ that have escaped the brush.—C. SOLDIERS BEAT LINDSAY BY 21-8 AND CAPTURE DISTRICT

Great Scoring Machine Never Slipped in Engagement With Midgets and Soldiers Had Easy Win.

SCORED FIRST SIX IN ROW

The 247th Batt. lads handed the midgets a sound trimming at Lindsay last night, to the music of the Scugogville band and the lop-sided tally of 21 goals to 8, incidentally giving Cap. Simpson's hand-picked phenoms sufficient of the O.H.A. pastime for this season. The Midgets have decided enough is plenty, and henceforth it will be the town league for theirs, with the exception of Moose Richman who leaves for the lumber camps tomorrow, to pursue the more entertaining task of chopping down trees. The score was 6 to 0 at the end of the first twenty minutes; at the end of the second period it stood 14 to 4 and when hostilities closed the grand total was twenty-nine, the Soldiers having outscored the homesters by 7 to 4 in the final session, only half an effort being necessary to turn the trick.

The win and Lindsay's decision to evaporate gives the district to the soldiers.

Sergt. Jack Laue was called upon on two occasions to wade through the smoke of battle and rescue the injured. Bob Armstrong played less than ten minutes of the first period, when he was injured and had to retire. In the third period Lieut. Quinn, who had been playing a quiet but nevertheless effective game on the defence took a stroll into the enemy's lines and went down in a heap. His exit from the fray left the teams with five men aside. The reader can easily figure out the play thereafter, as it is not hard to imagine a game with men like Adams, Evans, Halpin and Armstrong running wild on a hard sheet of ice. A couple of times the Petes went through, had their shot blockaded, went after the rubber, recovered it and took a second shot.

The Lindsay line-up presented several new faces. Jack Haugh worked on the defence with Richman, Art Carew's injured foot keeping him out of the game. On the line, McElroy was the only survivor of the forwards who played here. Chuck Carew, who was looked upon as something of a hope by the Lindsay fans, worked at rover, while Natress, a Millbrook boy long past the juvenile stage, and Wortley, a town league prospect, performed on the wings. Chuck Carew made most of the noise and was always in the Lindsay attacks.

Armstrong Hurt

The game was a corker, particularly the first period, when Lindsay fans were treated to some pretty hockey. The session was packed full of lightning-fast plays with the Petes featuring the performance, and giving the Lindsay lads little opportunity to break away for a dash on LeGros. Bob Armstrong, the Soldiers' stellar centre, scored two goals and then went down in a heap on the ice. He sustained a gashed chin, several teeth were disturbed from the rightful positions, and he left the game.

With play resumed, Grover Halpin pulled off one of the neatest plays of the night. After McElroy had secured the rubber and had got safely away on a dangerous rush, the local captain stole the disc from him and, steering a course through the whole Lindsay team, placed the rubber behind O'Loughlin, leaving the crowd gaping over his superb stick-handling and speed.

The Soldiers' defence man was easily the star of the ice, his stick-handling in the first and second periods dazzling the Midgets and beating them on frequent occasions. He let up in the last session on account of a sore foot.

Only at one stage of the initial period did LeGros have a busy time. Several attacks were attempted by the Midgets in an effort to score but their short were neatly blocked.

Fast Scoring

In the second period Jack Adams found himself and opened the scoring with a counter in 45 seconds, on a lone rush. Halpin followed with a corkscrew rush, alone, that beat both defence men. H repeated the trick on another loner and the score stood 9 to 0. Lindsay fans got a chance to chuckle when McElroy scored the first tally for the Midgets from a scramble in front of LeGros. Chuck Carew notched two more, and then the Soldiers put on the brakes. O'Loughlin stopped two hard shots and kicked one in. It was not allowed, however, in spite of the vigorous protest of Jack Adams. The local left winger showed that it could be done by accepting a pass from Evans and landing the rubber into the netting. Carew scored Lindsay's fourth goal and Adams came back again a minute later. The Petes' twelfth counter fell to Evans on a lone rush and 30 seconds later Flanagan went through from centre and made it 13. Adams took the last of the period on a pass from Evans. The two were working great.

Lindsay Hopes Revived

Lindsay started the scoring in the third period on a shot by McElroy. Big Richman of the Midgets tallied another on his own efforts and the drooping spirits of the home following were revived to some degree. But the pace didn't last. It took Adams and Evans but one minute to notch two more for the Soldiers and make the contest look like an exclusive scoring affair for the "Porridge Eaters" if they so desired. Shortly afterwards Lieut. Quinn fell to the ice, separated from a gold tooth, and was carried to the dressing section, the second casualty of the night, to say nothing of the minor injuries which passed unnoticed. For the remainder of the game ten players had the ice to themselves, and the game became an exhibition of stick handling and rushing, with the Soldiers outscoring the Midgets by 7 to 4 and out-shooting them by about 15 to 5.

Richman's Great Chopping

Five minutes before play was called Richman drew a penalty that banished him from the ice. He was Lindsay's prize boob. Instead of thanking his lucky stars for being permitted to get away with slashing and tripping when he played here, he persisted in handing out the same treatment on his home ice and never lost an opportunity to "get" the Soldiers. Richman owes a vote of congratulations to himself, in the fact that Lindsay won't play any more O.H.A. games this winter, and the doctors will lose a fee.

The teams:

Lindsay—Goal, O'Loughlin; defence, Richman and Haugh; rover, Carew; centre, McElroy; wings, Wortley and Nattress.

Peterborough—Goal, LeGros; defence, Quinn and Halpin; rover, Flanagan; centre, Armstrong; wings, Adams and Evans.

Referee—Dr. J. Laflamme, Toronto.

NOTES ON THE GAME

At one [illegible] of the proceedings the Soldiers stored three goals in less than two minutes.

While the Petes were getting used to the ice, the Midgets looked about average and Lindsay fans felt that the homsters would make the invaders go the limit to register a win. When the tallies began to flow in, the fans took the view that it served 'em right for not getting out to practice. Fickle fandom again.

Dr. Jerry Laflamme treats them all alike. He landed in the rink at nine o'clock with the usual alibi. But he was worth waiting for. Few of them have anything on the former St. Mike's star in handling a game.

Evans is coming strong this season. He was a big factor in the game last night and figured largely in the scoring.

CURLING

Several inter-rink curling games were played at the rink last night, and in some instances the contests were real good. In other cases the defeated played in real bad luck, while their opponents were playing their best game.

The rinks and scores were:

Rink Bulletin

Do you want he club to hold an open bonspiel this year?

Attend the meeting Friday night at 7:30 and vote yes or no.

Has your rink any deferred games? If so, try and play them now while the ice is good.

The topic of conversation at the curling rink yesterday was the picking out of good plays and mis-plays of the members of the Tankard rinks. The splendid showing of Pete Lang's rink against the wonderful and almost perfect playing of Skip G. A. Little was the most talked of. Just how Bob Hicks played a stone just where his skip wanted it and how Harry Foote never played a better game in his life, and some of the wonderful plays of Dr. Wightman were in turn all explained to those who were not there, by the fortunate ones. No matter who explained the game, all gave great credit to this rink, even if it was one down. Whatever luck there was going went to the Lindsay rink.

Skip Waddell was also showered with all kinds of praise for his great generalship against Skip O'Connor. Vice-Skip Dick Davidson played a whale of a game and worked like a Trojan from start to finish. To G. H. Logie credit is given, even by some members of the old kickers' club, for playing as near perfection as it was possible.

"John Brightman could not have played better if he tried," was the general opinion of the old curlers.

The Peterborough club members have real strong hopes that they will be in at the "death" when the finals for the Tankard are played in Toronto. They feel that they can measure up well against the winners of the other groups on their showing on Tuesday.

MARRIED MEN ARE BARRED

ARMY AND MANY INDUSTRIES FAVOR THE MAN WITHOUT A WIFE.

Can a married man keep a secret from his wife? Some people think not, and among them are the heads of the firm who built the wonderful racing yacht for Sir Thomas Lipton.

There is always a deal of secrecy about the design of a new racing yacht, and particularly about the shape of the keel. The keel of "Shamrock IV." was cast at Messrs. Camper and Nicholson's yard at Gosport, on November 26th, last, and not one married man was among the men employed nor took part in the construction of the hull.

During all those years that Lord Kitchener was busy perfecting his plans for his swoop upon the Mahdi he would not have a Benedict upon his staff. If one of the staff wanted to get married, why, he had to find another job—that was all.

As a matter of fact, there were singularly few desertions for this cause. The Sirdar gave his men precious little leisure for love-making.

In businesses which depend for their success on secret formulas married men are sometimes refused employment.

One such has for more than a century past been manufacturing a certain popular sauce. The firm has two large factories, and employs a great number of hands, including scores of women. There are plenty of married men in the works, but the actual mixing is in the hands of a few highly-paid and much-trusted men, not one of whom is married.

The plan seems to have worked well, for, in spite of many attempts at bribery, the secret has remained inviolate for 120 years.

One might also quote the case of the well known liquer, Chartreuse, the formula for which remained a secret among its monkish manufacturers for more than 200 years.

Some industries there are in which the element of danger is so great that employers prefer bachelors to married men. There is a powder factory in Kent where the posts of danger in the mixing houses are held only by unmarried men.

And in the Du Pont factory at Wilmington, which is the oldest established dynamite factory in the United States, a similar regulation is said to be in force. The Royal Flying Corps of Great Britain prefers to employ unmarried officers and men.

American Petroleum

The United States sold to other countries about two billion gallons of petroleum last year.

Potatoes in Europe

In spite of their smaller area, Germany, Austria and Russia produce more potatoes than the United States.

Cooking in Glass

Glass cooking utensils are being made in an experimental way by a New York glass manufacturer with much success.

Wireless Telephones

MOROCCAN MARRIAGES

Bridegroom Sometimes Acts as Bride; Disguises Are Much in Vogue.

The topsy-turvydom of Moroccan life is illustrated by the many curious customs and superstitions which prevail in that country. In Fez, after a couple have been betrothed, free negresses, whose business it is to assist women on festive occasions, dress up the young man as a bride with garments which they have brought with them. He is then seated on cushions placed on a mattress opposite the door, and sits there with his eyes closed as if he were a bride.

In some country places in Morocco the bride on her part imitates the appearance of a man, by wearing her shawl thrown over her left shoulder, or leaving her old home clad in a man's coat, or having designs resembling whiskers painted on her face.

Who shall rule in the home of the happy pair is a question which gives rise to quite a number of quaint tests. In some cases the bride may throw one of her slippers at the groom, or beat him three times with it, and should he cry out it is regarded as a sign that she will rule the roost. The bridegroom, on his part, also tries in various ways to gain power over his wife by tapping her three or seven times on her head or shoulders with a sword, or beating her between the shoulders with the cord of his dagger. He may smack her or kick her gently, or attempt to strike her with a cane as she arrives at his house. Apparently, should she cry out at such treatment she will always remain subject to the rule of her husband.

That the bridesmaid of a happy bride will herself find a husband before the end of the year is quite common belief in Morocco, where a wedding is looked upon as a potential cause of other weddings. There it is the custom for seven girls to pour water over the bride at a spring, hoping to get married themselves by so doing, and if any unmarried woman or girl is living in the house of the bride's parents when she leaves it, she is told to "drag her feet" when she goes away so as to help the unmarried one to a husband.

Again, when the bridal box is taken to the bride's village on the back of a mule, an unmarried youth sits inside it in order to get married soon. When the bride, on her arrival at the bridegroom's house, has been lifted down from the mare which carried her thither, a bachelor, for the same purpose, mounts the animal and has a ride on it.

Borax For the Mouth

Used in water as a daily gargle, borax keeps the throat healthy. Used in water for cleansing the teeth it "disinfects" them and prevents their decaying.

Radishes and watercress are purifying in their effect, and as they are cheap they should be served very often.

"DADDY LONG LEGS" COMING TO THE GRAND

The Messrs. Turner are announcing a return engagement of one of the very finest and most popular plays in existence today, "Daddy Long Legs," which will doubtless be greatly appreciated by patrons of the highest forms of drama in Peterborough and vicinity. The date of the engagement is for Saturday, January 27th, when two performances will be given — matinee and night. The company was organized and is managed by Henry Miller, which is guaranty sufficient of its excellence. The organization is now touring twenty of the principal cities of Canada, and Peterborough will be the seventh city on the list to be visited. This tour opened at His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal, on Monday, January 8th, where the company played a week. The present week it is at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, playing to capacity business.

Mr. D. W. Haynes was in Peterborough yesterday arranging for the engagement at the Grand Opera House of "Daddy Long Legs," and while here received a letter from New York stating that the second company, which is now playing "Daddy Long Legs" at the Duke of York's Theatre, London, England, would certainly play the year out there, which will expire on the second week of the coming June.

Identically the same company that played Montreal, and is now playing Toronto, will be seen here at the Grand Opera House. There are 24 members of the organization, and four superb scenic sets will be used here.

If the forthcoming engagement of "Daddy Long Legs" in Peterborough is sufficiently successful, Klaw & Erlanger and Henry Miller will send others of their large attractions to the Grand Opera House during the present season.

$17 CLOCK FREE AT OAK HALL

MAYOR DUFFUS SENDS IT AWAY ON JOURNEY TO SOME HOME.

At 9 o'clock this morning His Worship Mayor Duffus wound up tight at the OAK HALL store, and took possession of the key of, a solid oak clock, citadel design, solid brass figures and hands, polished brass plate movement, bevelled plate glass with visible brass pendulum ball; strikes hour and half hour, cathedral gong 8-day clock.

The clock is now on exhibition in OAK HALL window and will be given away to the person guessing nearest to the time the clock stops.

Last year guesses were confined to Dollar Day only. This year OAK HALL is making a little change from last. Commencing Friday morning, all purchases made at OAK HALL store and ending night of Dollar Day will be given a ticket with every dollar purchase.

OAK HALL is holding a January clearance sale and making radical reductions on their high-class stock, and, with the valuable clock shown in the window, will add greatly to their sales during the week and on Dollar Day.

CLOSING ADDRESS

Guards, also two hundred million in number, waiting, too, for the long-expected order to advance. It is directly given in tones of thunder and in long bending lines of riders uniformed in snow white linen seated on horses as white as their robes, they descend the cloud hills, led by the Prince of Heaven in garments as red as blood. As they pass the sun, a mighty angel who cannot restrain his admiration salutes and cheers the majestic throng. The armies of the Dragon are agonized with suspense. Horses paw the dust and champ their bits with bloody foam. Messages flash like lightning. Officers hurry like demons from line to line. They come — swooping like eagles, they line up in the face of the foe. A few moments of awful silence, an imperial word of command, and then a shout of triumph that would drown a thousand Niagaras. Satan's lines quiver and break before the terrific shock and the sword out of the mouth of the Imperial Prince, who is the Champion of the Church and the King of all the earth. Satan is arrested, gagged and gound and hurled into the bottomless pit for one thousand years, and the Millenium is begun.

Ye Olde Firme.

The Royal Piano
It makes no difference whether it is a high social function, an educational affair, or a great artistic event, in this country the piano made by Ye Olde Firme is used in nine cases out of ten. We refer to the

Heintzman & Co. Art Piano

as the Royal Piano, because it was specially selected for the use of Queen Mary when in this country as Princess of Wales.

This great Canadian instrument has stood the test for 65 years. In tone, in action, in durability, it is recognised as supreme among pianos, and deservedly bears the title: "World's Best Piano."

GERMANS NOW BOMBARDING CONA

MISS HUGHES EXPLAINS WHY WOMEN WANT THE FRANCHISE

Will be Ready to Take Part in Reconstruction Work When Peace is Declared---Granting Equal Franchise Will Not Hinder the Conduct of the War.

Miss Laura Hughes, distinguished primarily as one of the leading suffragists and social workers in Canada, and secondarily as the daughter of Col. James L. Hughes, and niece of Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, delivered her message to the women of Peterborough at the Collegiate Institute last night. The assembly room was well filled by an audience in which, of course, women were in the majority, but which contained a number of interested and attentive men. The gathering was held under the auspices of the Local Council of Women but the officers of that organization invited the co-operation of well-known citizens of the opposite sev who are in sympathy with the movement. Ald. A. H. Stratton was chairman. The gentlemen who had seats on the platform were Lieut.-Col. Ackerman of the 247th Batt., Ald. Taylor and Duncan, representing the City Council, Revs. Canon Cornish and R. G. Peever, Messrs. P. A. Ferguson and J. J. Hartley, the latter being the accredited representative of the Trades and Labor Council The ladies on the platform were Dr. Jessie Birnie, convenor of the committee that arranged the meeting, Mrs. F. C. Neal, president of the Local Council of Women, and Mesdames W. R. Morris, A. Mowat, R. Harstone, and A. Stevenson. Other city officials were in the audience, Aldermen McIntyre and Smith listening to the address from seats near the rear, both of them being almost persuaded to espouse the cause by the arguments of the speaker.

In introducing Miss Hughes Ald. Stratton said that he had been invited to act as chairman in the place of Mayor Duffus, who was out of the city. His only qualification for the position was his hearty approval of equal suffrage. If all women had the vote we would have a better City Council and better men in all elective officers. He could see no reason why women should be classed with children and imbeciles and denied the right to vote.

The Address of Miss Hughes

Miss Hughes began her remarks by stating that she is not a suffragette but a suffragist. The former believes in militancy, the latter in peaceful methods. She believes that in order to get the vote in Ontario the women will never be compelled to resort to window smashing and other forms of violence.

The question of equal suffrage has been discussed for the past one hundred years and women in some places have been voting with benefit to society for half a century. Opposition is to be expected for when a new class of men have been enfranchised the men who already possess the vote invariably object. Women are never slow to adopt a new style of dress; then why should they hesitate in adopting the reform. Some day it will be proper to be up-to-date in brain as well as in dress.

The Man With the Umbrella

The first man who, in 1818, walked down the streets of Baltimore holding an umbrella to protect him from the rain, was mobbed by the citizens, who had never before seen such an article and were afraid it would bring some curse upon them. Those people were a curiosity today and the time is coming when an anti-suffragist will be regarded in the same light.

In the state of Wyoming women have voted for the pasty fifty years, and crime is practically unknown. Women's franchise spread from State to State in the western section of the American republic. Women have the vote in Australia, New Zealand and Norway. In the latter country three women divided the country into as many districts and worked until they secured the franchise. One of these women died last year and was accorded the honor of a public funeral. In all countries where women vote, the laws governing senitation, social conditions and child labor are superior.

In California the very women opposed to equal suffrage were the first to register as voters when the law gave them the right to do so. In Finland women were enfranchised at the same time as men.

The best way to get equal suffrage in Canada, Miss Hughes said, would be to disfranchise men for about five years, so as to make them realize how women feel about being classed as imbeciles and children and not regarded even as persons. She believes in mixed rule. Women could not have ruled the world any better than men. They, too, would have made mistakes, although probably of a different kind.

An M.P.'s Solution

Some time ago a woman called up Miss Hughes and suggested a parliament for men and another for women. The speaker was under the impression that this woman was the only one who favored such a plan. She was surprised to learn on reaching Peterborough that a member of Parliament was advocating the same proposition. It would never work, Miss Hughes said. Under such an arrangement it would be necessary to divide Ontario into two sections, one for women and the other for men. They could not intermingle for the laws made for one community would not be binding upon the residents in the other.

There are two functions in the world. The function of man is to provide; that of woman to nurture. Man looks at things from a business, woman from a human standpoint. A union of both functions is required to secure perfect government. If women had the vote in Ontario there would be better laws to regulate child labor.

Arguments Against Suffrage

Miss Hughes declared that she had never heard adequate arguments against equal suffrage, although she had studied every aspect of the subject and had attended the anti-suf-

Further Swiss Units May be Called to Colors.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PARIS, Jan. 19—A despatch from Berne to the Petit Parisien says Gen. Wills, commander of the Swiss army wished to mobilize all Switzerland's military forces. The Federal Council considers it necessary to mobilize only two divisions, but considered it possible that further units may be called to the colors.

"Swiss newspapers assert that masses of German troops are concentrating near Basel," says the Exchange Telegraph's Geneva correspondent. "The Swiss General Staff is convinced that an invasion of Switzerland is contemplated, with a view to freeing Alsace from the French invader."

ROME, Jan. 19.— The announcement of Switzerland's new military measures to guard her frontiers produced a deep impression here, since it was at first regarded as indicating that the Federal Government was apprehensive of a change in the war situation of which the general public had had no warning.

The action of the Swiss Government is taken here as indicating the belief that the most violent and perhaps the most decisive conflict of the war is at hand.

EXTENT OF CAPTURES BY RUSSIANS IN THE YEAR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Russian war operations during the past year, according to a Reuter despatch from Petrograd, resulted in the capture of 8,770 officers, 420,000 men, 525 cannon, 1,601 machine guns, 421 trench mortars and mine- throwers. Of this booty, eighty per cent. was yielded by General Brusiloff's operations.

CONA IS UNDER BOMBARDMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 19.—The town of Cona, on the railroad line which virtually parallels a considerable section of the front along the Moldavian southwest frontier, has been under bombardment by Teutonic heavy artillery, the war office announces.

Aside from other bombardment and patrol operations there have been few activities along the Roumanian front.

Lad Fatally Hurt

WAS STRUCK IN EYE WITH PITCHFORK HELD BY HIS COMPANION.

PORT HOPE, Jan. 19.—A distressing accident occurred on the farm of Thos. McMullen, Shiloh, when Nicholson McMullen and Lawrence Savory went to the stable and with two pitchforks started in to clean up the stalls. Remarking "This is the way uncle does.'" young Savory threw up his fork, the prong of which struck the lad McMullen just above the eye. He was rushed to the house and medical aid summoned, but he never regained consciousness, and passed away that evening.

FORMER PASTOR AT GEORGE ST.

REV. E. A PEARSON HERE FOR ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Rev. E. A. Pearson, B.A., and Mrs. Pearson, of Chatham, will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman while in the city in connection with the anniversary services at the George Street Methodist Church. They will be present at the anniversary concert tonight, and Mr. Pearson will preach at both services on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Pearson is in receipt of letters from his three sons. Pte. Duke Pearson is in France and reports himself as well. Pte. Lester Pearson is near Saloniki and reports that there is some activity there. He also is well. Pte. Vaughan Pearson is in England. He was suffering from an attack of mumps when he wrote, but expected to be going to France with his unit in a short time.

Norwegian Ship Of 3,600 Tons Sunk

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Norwegian steamship Bergenhus, 3,600 tons, has been sunk.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Spanish steamers Valle and Manuel have been sunk.

COAL ADVANCE BUT NOT HERE

SUFFICIENT COAL TO KEEP OUT THE COLD.

Coal advanced in Toronto yesterday 50 cents per ton. The price now is $9.50, and the reason given is not only the difficulty of securing supplies, but the increased loss through deterioration by reason of the delay to which shipments have been exposed. The dealers were all notified of an advance of from 10 to 30 cents per ton in the different grades.

In Peterborough an enquiry of several dealers brought out the fact that no change had been made in the prices here, which remain at $8.75 and $9.00. None of the local dealers have large stocks on hand, but they are getting enough to keep their customers warm. No deliveries are made larger than half a ton or a ton, according to the amount regularly consumed.

CASE AGAINST THE CITY NOW BEING HEARD

MRS. ADAM FRICK CLAIMS DAMAGES—SAYS CITY WAS NEGLIGENT.

Judge Huycke is hearing the evidence today in the case of Mrs. Adam Frick against the city of Peterborough for damages of $1000.

On the 24th of June last year the plaintiff was walking along Ware St. on her way to attend the funeral of Mr. Taylor. While crossing from one side of the street to the other she fell and struck against the remains of an old crossing which had been torn up in grading the roadbed. As a result of the fall Mrs. Frick said she broke several ribs and sustained other injuries. The employes of the city are said not to have used due care in protecting the public. This is the basis of the suit.

Mrs. Frick and Drs. McCulloch and Hammond told of the injuries sustained.

The case is still going on. Mr. F. D. Kerr of Peck, Kerr & McElderry for the plaintiff, and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the city.

DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE OPENS CANADA'S TWELFTH PARLIAMENT

Customary Long List of Invitations Cut Off.

LITTLE DISPLAY

Canada's Part in War Reviewed in Speech.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 19. — With the usual ceremonial but much-curtailed display, Canada's twelfth Parliament was opened for its seventh session by His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire this afternoon. Lack of accommodation in the temporary quarters in Victoria Memorial Museum made it necessary to cut off the customary long list of invitations to seats in the Senate chamber during the ceremonies. This eliminated the usual brilliant assemblage of consuls-general, church dignitaries, deputy-ministers, etc., while the invitations to ladies were confined to the wives and daughters of senators, members, privy councillors and supreme court judges.

Extend Parliament.

The Duke was accompanied from Rideau Hall by his staff of aides, and, after receiving the report of Commons on the election of Speaker Rhodes, read the opening speech, which was mainly a review of the past year and of Canada's part in the war, the more important intimations it contained being the proposals to apply to the Imperial Parliament for an extension of the life of the present Parliament and to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the Confederation in an appropriate manner.

An Elusive Lad.

A young lad who slipped away from the Lakefield constable a few days ago was located on a farm a short distance from Peterborough. When the farmer was notified he promised to bring the elusive one in. The start was made, but the man landed at the police station minus a boy.

The local department will spread a net for him now.

Infant Dies Suddenly.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Simpson of High street died very suddenly last evening. The remains were taken to Roseneath for burial.

PRUSSIANS HAVE SPIES ON SHIPS TO BE SUNK

Put Wireless out of Commission to Stop S.O.S. Calls.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18—The Herald says the latest Prussian device is to place aboard every French and British steamship a spy. On passenger ships he is one of the passengers and on freighters necessarily one of the crew and pretends to be extremely anti-German. His duty is to put the wireless out of commission on the approach of German raiders. This explains, says the Herald, the silence of the big freighters George and Voltaire. On any other theory it would seem impossible that they and many others captured or sunk should not have sent out some inkling of their plight.

FRENCH FRONT UNCHANGED

PARIS, Jan. 19.— There was no change in the situation on the French front last night, today's war official statemnet says.

FIELD POSTS CAPTURED BY THE RUSSIANS

GERMAN ATTACK TO EAST OF LEMBERG WAS A FAILURE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 19.—The capture of two German field posts in the Baranovichi region on the Russian front and the failure of an attack by Germans near Zborow, east of Lemberg, in Galicia, are reported in today's war official statement.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.— Our patrols caried out successful enterprises at several places, says today's official report from the Franco-Belgian front.

Fighting has again abated, after several days' increased activity on the Russo-Galician front.

BE THERE TONIGHT

The officers of the Peterborough Health Association are hoping for a representative attendance of citizens at the annual meeting of the association which will be held in the City Council chamber at 8 o'clock tonight. Reports on the year's work will be given and plans for the future discussed.

BIG MEETING FOR HAVELOCK THIS EVENING

247TH CONTINUES TO GAIN IN STRENGTH.

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman is greatly encouraged over the week's recruiting and has great hopes that the '100 clubs" are going to be very successful. As a result of the Millbrook meeting two recruits were added to the list. They are Pte. A. Richards and Pte. J. Richards, and more will follow in a few days.

Major O'Flynn, accompanied by the 247th band, left at noon for Havelock, where a meeting will be held tonight. A "100 club" will be formed and as Havelock has done well for recruiting in the past, it is expected that the meeting will add further strength to the enthusiasm.

Lieut.-Col. W. A. McConnell has detailed Lieut. R. W. Iles to recruit at Peterborough for the 256th (Railway Construction) Batt. He will have a room at the Armories, where applicants are to remain in Peterborough until mo- examined by the doctors. All who enlist are entitled to the same pay as the other units and will be allowed to remain in Peterborough until mobilization.

The work will be very interesting at the front and will consist of laying rail tracks for the bringing up of guns and carriages to the firing lines. The officers in charge of the work are all men experienced in Canadian railroad work and this battalion will be an important factor in the success of the mechanical transport department.

Men who have been rejected for other units may be able to qualify for this work. Laboring men or mechanics of all ages will have an opportunity to enlist.

Separation allowance will also be granted to the wives of the men who attest.

Battalion Orders

Orders by Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, O.C. 247th Battalion.

Church Parade—

All officers and other ranks available at Headquarters or on duty in the city will parade at the aromries for church parade on Sunday, Jan. 21.— Roman Catholics at 10 a.m.; Protestants at 10.30 a.m. The Sergt.-Major will detail an N.C.O. for Roman Catholic party. Band will accompany Headquarters. No passes are to be given to men with the view of staying away from church parade.

Dress—

N.C.O.'s and men, belts with side arms.

Duties—

Orderly Officer for today—Lieut. J. F. Strickland.

Next for duty—Lt. T. W. Quinn.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lt.
Adjutant.

WHY WOMEN WANT THE VOTE.

MISS LAURA HUGHES, at the meeting in the assembly rooms of the Collegiate Institute last night, answered the very argument which Premier Hearst recently advanced when he told a deputation of women that it not be advisable to introduce any more drastic legislation during war time.

Miss Hughes pointed out that the Ontario Government has really nothing to do with the management of the war, that duty devolving upon the central powers at Ottawa. Giving women the right to vote would not affect the battlefield issues. Since the war broke out, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia have adopted equal suffrage, and this has not changed the current of events with regard to the war. The British Columbia soldiers, in training camps and trenches, were given an opportunity to vote on the question, and they declared by a large majority for the franchise for women.

After the war there will be a long period of reconstruction. The entire social system of the country will be remodeled. Women want to equip themselves in time so as to be ready to take a part in the work which so closely concerns the welfare of all classes.

Although the meeting last night was held under the auspices of the Local Council of Women, there was present a sufficient number of men on the platform to lend masculine sanction to the movement. The chair was occupied, not by an official of the women's organization, but by a member of the City Council. An ex-president of the Trades and Labor Council and former candidate for the mayoralty was on the platform, the accredited delegate of organized labor, to show the workingmen are in sympathy with the movement. Business men were represented; the Church sent two of its leading local clergymen; the civic government had a delegation besides the chairman, and the presence on the platform of the commanding officer of the 247th Battalion, who also made an address, testified to the friendly attitude of the military.

Miss Hughes is an excellent speaker, clear and incisive, who buttresses her every assertion with substantial argument. There were no oratorical frills in her address and no extravagant claims were made on behalf of the sisterhood. At the outset she denied that she was a suffragette, but accepted the designation of suffragist. There is a distinction as well as a difference between the two. The first is addicted to violence, such as the smashing of windows, the mobbing of officious policemen and attacks on mail boxes and public buildings. All the ways of the suffragist, however, are ways of peace. Miss Hughes believes that the women in Ontario can get the franchise without resorting to the devices of the mob. Listening to her address and observing her dynamic force, it was not hard to arrive at the conclusion that if Miss Hughes ever did assume the role of the militant she would fill it with rather more than average vigor.

Miss Hughes is not unlearned in the arts of the practical politican. She disclosed part of the plan of the suffragists when she said that the leader of the Ontario Opposition was in favor of the movement of which she is the exponent. If the Government at Toronto refuses to enfranchise the women, it will behoove the latter to work for the overthrow of the Government and help put in power the party that stands pledged to their policy. It was by such tactics that the women of Australia got the ballot, and the example has not been lost upon the suffragists in this country.

BELATED PRAISE.

POLITICIANS, amateur or professional, whether they appear on the public platform or work in the newspaper sanctuary, are after all not so very different from mere mortals in other walks of life. While an opponent remains in public life they have nothing but censure for him, his every act is criticised, often with undue harshness, and his every motive is regarded with suspicion. When he dies, his former traducers vie with each other in covering his grave with flowers. The insensate clay makes no response to the tributes, the ears of the dead hear no single note of praise. The precious ointment is withheld until the chill of death has forever settled upon the object of so much belated adulation.

While he lived, the late James Duff, as Minister of Agriculture in the Hearst cabinet, a plain man of the people, but their true friend, was probably the most ill-used public man in Ontario. It was nothing that in the riding which he represented for years he numbered his well-wishers without regard to party, or that he was most respected where he was best known. That did not suffice to save him from the poisoned darts of his political opponents.

These same opponents in the recent campaign in West Simcoe landed the dead statesman to the skies. Too bad that his praise was delayed until he could not hear it. A single flower in a living hand is worth all the bouquets that mourners can pile upon a casket.

YEARLY HEALTH INSPECTION.

THE APPROACHING meeting of the Health Association revives interest in the question of public sanitation. Outside of our own city this interest is intensified by representations made by a delegation of physicians to the Conservation Commission at Ottawa. A communicable disease is alarmingly prevalent in this country among members of both sexes, and some stringent measures are required to check its spread.

No man can be certain of his own knowledge that his physical health is perfect. Sometimes the most vigorous develop a case of cancer or some other affliction, the origin of which the brightest medical expert may be unable to explain. A man regarded as healthy may place himself in the hands of a physician for examination for life insurance or military service only to be turned down because heart or lungs, it may be both organs, are defective.

In some communities the residents are required to undergo a yearly medical examination. No man can be walking around while mortal affliction is fastening itself upon his system. He can be in this way prevented from transmitting disease to his offspring or communicating it to his neighbors. The case of the man who has a tendency to tuberculosis could be diagnosed and treated in time. Not only would the sick and afflicted be profited by such a system, but those perfectly well would be protected from the danger of infection. In time the world would be free of all maladies that it is humanly possible to prevent.

The State appoints health officers who are vested with powers to compel the people to observe certain laws of sanitation devised for the general welfare. In case of an epidemic of smallpox, the entire community can be required to submit to compulsory vaccination. If the State has a right to take these measures, it would be perfectly justified in going a step further and ordering periodical medical examinations of all persons, without regard to age or social conditions.

In the event of such an enactment, we would hear the old cry of personal liberty, whatever that may mean, if, indeed, it has any existence whatever. The theory of some on this subect would be the right to enclose themselves in their own domiciles and suffer from the ravages of smallpox or some other contagious disease, according to their own ideas. There is no such thing as liberty that permits a man to do anything that encroaches on the safety or rights of his neighbors. No man can take his own life any more than he can deprive another of existence. The sick man, too, should be made the ward of the State, and, even against his will, should be required to submit to treatment designed to cure him.

DOMINION WIDE PROHIBITION.

THE HALIFAX Evening Mail, published in a province that is under prohibition and in a city where there have been no licenses issued for over seven months, is an advocate of a Dominion-wide law making the traffic illegal. It says it believes the Government of Sir Robert Borden is thoroughly alive to the conditions, and that if its judgment of public sentiment is correct, as it believes it is, more unlikely things have happened than the enactment of such a law before the end of the war. It professes to beleve, too, that the country would give the Borden Government practically universal support for such a measure.

If there was one feature of the Ontario Temperance Act which commended it more than another it was its perfect constitutionality. No effort was spared to have it airtight so as to head off any court contests over it. A Federal prohibition law would certainly breed a lawsuit, which would not be finally settled short of the Privy Council, with the chances all on the side of an adverse decision.

Whatever may be the sentiment in favor of prohibition, there are few earnest temperance workers who would care to precipitate a legal contention, especially at such a time as the present.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IT CANNOT BE the slacker's conscience that makes him a coward.

ONE WAR SENSATION appears to last only until it is swallowed up in another.

• • • •

AFTER WEST SIMCOE the Toronto Liberals cannot say that they were not warned.

• • • •

THE DEALER of wet goods in Montreal does not insist that the orders from Ontario be written in French.

• • • •

IT WAS BAD ENOUGH to force a useless war-time election in West Simcoe. It is infinitely less excusable to repeat the folly in Toronto.

FILLING IN the blanks on the National Service cards was all well enough in its way, but after all it was a light service compared with that rendered by the boys in khaki.

ANOTHER ARGUMENT in favor of equal suffrage. Miss H. Reid, acting matron of the Isolation Hospital, can give any man in the city pointers on intelligent business management.

IN OKLAHOMA a bill has been introduced making cigarette-smoking a crime. If the reform spreads to Canada, "Ralph Connor" will be forced to become truly democratic by taking to the cob pipe.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

It Won't Fizz on Them.

(Calgary Herald.)

Not a day passes now without some record of a Canadian officer dropping his rank to something lower in order to get the more quickly to the front. The spectacle is inspiring, and should put shame into the hearts of the slackers at home who would not do a turn for their country if they were offered a field marshal's job.

Obliquity to Moral Values.

(New York Globe.)

If Germany shall fail in peace as she seems destined to fail in war, the cause of ultimate failure in both cases will be the same—the utter obliquity of the present ruler of German to moral values. They started the war and have carried it on without regard to the moral issues involved. So they are trying to force peace without regard to moral issues, confident that the universal appeal of peace with moral ideas, will make good all their own deficiencies.

Oleomargarine.

(Youth's Companion.)

How easily people are misled! Because the price of butter is high, the manufacturers of oleomargarine are clamoring to have the tax removed from their product. What they fail to disclose is that the tax on oleomargarine that is not colored to imitate butter is very low. It is only on the product that is made to look as much as possible like real butter that the tax is high, and it was high for the sole purpose of protecting the consumer from fraud. It is just as well to know both sides.

POPULAR EDUCATION IN RUSSIA

Almost all Russian villages that have a sufficient number of children possess one or more schools. During the last ten years the number of schools under the ministry of national education increased 71 per cent.

In 1916 that ministry introduced into the Duma a bill providing for compulsory attendance at the village schools for all children. Fifty-one per cent. of those between the ages of 8 and 11 years attend the schools. For the last ten years the number of persons who know how to read and write increased by 8 per cent. The war has stimulated the interest of the population in newspapers and in schools.

As a rule the children who attend school are from 8 to 11 years old. Generally they stay at school twenty-four hours a week. They are taught religion, the Slavonian and Russian languages, arithmetic and calligraphy. They prepare their lessons at school. The elder pupils study at home.

◆ ◆ ◆

The textbooks are supplied by the zemstvos and by the municipalities. The same institutions appoint the teachers under supervision of the ministry of education. They pay for the upkeep of the schools, but the ministry contributes to their expenses, paying the teachers' wages in the proportion of 300 rubles for each teacher a year. In eastern Siberia these wages amount to 900 rubles a year. The teacher receives a salary increase of 60 rubles for every five years of service. When old, he receives a pension from the state fund, which is formed by his own annual contributions and by government subsidy.

The school teacher is not liable to military service. In exceptional cases special law is required to compel him to give such service.

The pupils of village schools may pass into the primary town school, which enables them to continue their studies, and, subject to certain additional examinations, in a college. In that case pupils do not receive any special subsidies. The course of learning in the college ("gymnasium") lasts from seven to eight years after which young men become students of some high school, university, engineering or other vocational school. In these schools most students get support from public institutions and benevolent societies.

◆ ◆ ◆

Religious teaching is imparted in all schools. For non-orthodox pupils, if a sufficient number demand it, a priest or minister of their own faith is appointed. Jews and Moslems have their own religious schools.

Illiterate soldiers are compelled during their service to attend special regimental schools, where they are instructed by their officers. As a rule such men are very desirous of being taught to read and write.

In the country the zemstvos give facilities for teaching illiterate men in Sunday schools, evening lectures, and so on. Special measures are taken for agricultural instruction of the country people, and for technical teaching of the working classes in the towns. In several country districts model farms are arranged to show to the population new methods of agriculture.

Aside from the schools of the ministry of national education there are a great many schools depending on other mniistries, agriculture, trade, war, and so on.

FAMOUS PERSONS AND PLACES

E. H. Sothern, the distinguished actor, is seriously ill and has probably appeared for the last time before the footlights. Sothern is one of the most famous actors ever seen in America and compares most favorably in ability with the better English actors. As a matter of fact, Sothern has very often been taken for an English actor. He was born in New Orleans in 1859, and as a young lad appeared on the stage with his father, who was also an actor. Since that time he has toured all parts of the English-speaking world, spending some years in England, where he was extremely popular. During recent years, Sothern has been playing Shakespearian parts. He is maried to Julia Marlowe, who has played with him in Shakesperian plays.

Ranking high amongst the score or so most popular speakers of the day, Dr. T. J. Macnamara, the British Parliamentarian, admits that on one occasion his efforts were not appreciated.

He was announced to speak at a large Council school, and having unfortunately arrived somewhat late was obliged to push his way through the crowded hall in order to get to the platform.

"Finding my way barred by an exceedingly good-looking young lady leaning on the arm of an exceedingly good-looking young gentleman," he says, "I could not help overhearing the following conversation:

"What's on here tonight, George?"

"Oh, some speechifying, I believe."

"Who is speaking?"

"Dr. Macnamara."

"Oh, let's go to one of the dark class rooms, George."

In no place on the surface of the globe is rent so high as at Gibraltar, the reason being that the geographical position of the town precludes the possibility of its being extended in any direction. A long, narrow strip of what was once sea beach is alone available for building purposes. All the rest is precipitous rock.

Upon this narrow parapet in some cases less than 100 yards in width are crowded the homes of 25,000 people. As much as $5 a week is asked and obtained for the use of one small unfurnished room, and this, too, in a place where the normal rate of wages is quite 70 per cent. less than in England. Naturally the overcrowding is fearful, and the water supply being scarce and intermittent, cleanliness of living as we understand it, is almost impossible.

No wonder that in the old days the prague and the cholera ravaged the "Rock" with a virulence unknown even in the filthy and pestilential cities of the far east.

The trade and commerce department, Ottawa, is issuing to all Canadian importers a form of affidavit to be made out before shipment of restricted goods from the United Kingdom can be made.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review:

Sir,—My attention is called to a sentence or two in your editorial reference to a case and the Patriotic Fund. The article appeared during my absence from the city.

You are so uniformly fair either in criticism or remonstrance and generally loyally helpful, that I am sure that he expression was written without what we may call the innuendo being discerned. I repeat the sentences:

> "These facts were ascertained by some patriotic ladies who volunteered to investigate, fearing that there might be some just cause for complaint. No member of the Patriotic League, not even Mr. F. H. Dobbin himself, could arrive at the truth of such a case so readily and so satisfactorily. It requires one woman to deal with another when household affairs or any description of family matters are at issue."

You will, I know, agree with me, that if the statement were allowed to go without remonstrance, the imputation might be taken from what you have written that the facts were first disclosed on the enquiry made by the ladies. In this you are quite wrong.

Everything connected with this case, as with all others, was or were known to the committee months ago. Re-investigation, no matter how made, will not throw more or different light on any given case than what is known to the Fund. For on the basis of investigation we make the allowances. So, as a matter of fait, "the truth of the case" was an old affair with the committee. Please be so good as to accept my assurance.

Again, may I ask you to consider this view? I am sure you will, on reflection, agree. The Fund decries publicity in all these matters. It wisely refuses to put in print particulars, either to satisfy curiosity or as what might be assumed to be a plausible defence for action. We must never forget the errand the men have gone on. That we are at home, going on with our occupations, because they are in the trenches. The domestic affairs, the troubles and errors in life and expenditures are a matter in confidence between the committee and the beneficiaries. The information to guide the committee is really semi-confidential and will always so be respected. On the other hand the office is a public institution. Its records are open to inquiry and inspection. If you, and others, would only ask, as you have been urged to do, before making comment, either verbal or written, there will be no necessity for ignorance. In the case mentioned above you did not make enquiry from the Fund. Then why admonish?

I only refer to the matter that it may not be assumed that the committee has been less than thorough in its plain duty, to guard the Fund given to us by the people, to see that those deserving are assisted. We have rules which we may not break. But—and I say this to you in strict confidence — we sometimes bend them. Now I am sure that you will not give me away.

Respectfully,
F. H. DOBBIN.

The case in point was a peculiar one. A woman applied to the Patriotic Fund for assistance to which the committee decided she had no claim. No one questioned this finding. The applicant, however, rushed into print and complained of her treatment, creating the impression among a certain class that she had been unfairly dealt with. The patriotic ladies referred to took up the matter and assured themselves that there existed no cause for complaint, thus sustaining the verdict of the committee. All this paper did was to give currency to the letter's finding and the very reverse of any criticism of the committee was intended.—Editor Review.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

The Housewife's Tests.

Eggs that are fresh will, if placed in water, sink. To retain this freshness place them with the [illegible] end downward, in a wooden [illegible]. Failing this, place them in that position in egg-cups. Milk should be slightly yellowish with no blue tint, and when poured into a glass and back a greasy ring should be left. There should be no sediment in good milk.

Butter may be tested by smearing a little on a piece of white writing paper, then screwing up the paper and setting it on fire. If the smell is tallowy and nauseous the "butter" is not butter. Butter which is streaky or which exudes water is of bad quality.

Bananas Make Fine Pies

The woman whose family are continually calling for pie will surely appreciate these new recipes.

Banana Pie No. 1

Beat the yolks of two eggs with one-half cup of sugar until light and foamy. Peel and mash two bananas, beat into sugar and egg mixture. Add tiny pinch of salt. Add two cups of milk with rich pie crust. Bake in hot oven until custard is set. When ready to serve cover with meringue made of whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Add three tablespoons of powdered sugar. Spread on top and brown.

Banana Pie No. 2

Line a pie pan with rich pie crust. Bake and set aside to slightly cool. Just when ready to serve fill with sliced bananas. Sift lightly with pulverized sugar. Cover top with sweetened whipped cream and serve [illegible].

Chicken Souffle

Two cups scalded milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, ½ cup stale breadcrumbs, 2 cups cooked chicken, finely chopped; yolks 3 eggs, well beaten; 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley, whites 3 eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Make sauce of first ingredients. Add bread crumbs and cook two minutes. Remove from fire, add chicken, yolk of beaten eggs and parsley. Then fold in whites of eggs. Turn into a buttered dish and bake thirty-five minutes, in a slow oven or steam in cup thirty-five minutes.

Too Much "Kitchen" Work

A woman writes: Every occupation be it art, profession, business, trade has its kitchen. The sculptor, before he puts forth his dream in marble must work in mud. He calls it making the first cast. I found a woman sculptor weary after such a day and asked her for advice to girls who wanted to become sculptors. She looked at the soiled, tired hands. "Tell them to get married," she said, "and let a man work for them!"

A siege battery composed of Maritime Province men in 6½ months on the Somme front, fired 40,000 rounds at a cost of $1,250,000.

A FALSE WITNESS

By VALANCE PATRIARCHE

"Thirty below and a light wind." That was the Winnipeg weather man's report one twenty-third of December.

"Not exactly a green Christmas," people said jocularly as they rushed from one busy shop to another, pushing, struggling, laughing and spending—Oh, but spending. Money comes and goes freely in the west; those who have a competence feel sure that wealth is at hand and those possessed of wealth look forward to being millionaires when he next "deal" goes through. It is impossible to read the daily papers and not become imbued with the idea that you are destined to become a favorite of fortune. When you see that Jim Jones has sold his twelve dollar lot for twelve hundred you naturally run out and borrow on the chance of disposing of your cottage for at least three times what you paid for it. If you happen to acquire this loan at Christmas time you sally forth and join the throng in the shopping district and spend as thousands of other optimists were spending on this particular twenty-third of December.

At the busiest corner, where Main St. and Portage Ave. intersect, stood a young couple. The girl was all fur and feathers: dark and soft and she was obliged to tilt her head to see the small portion of her companion's face which was visible between a coon collar and an otter cap.

"No, Bob," she said. "I'm on my way to the North End to buy a little Christmas for some kiddies who really need it."

"Why go so far?" he asked. "Right her is an orphan who needs a little Christmas something turrible." He laid a hand on his chest and sighed audibly.

"Pore Robbie. Shall I buy him something then?"

"Something about five feet three would suit me nicely, Lady Lou, but it can't be bought. It Must—"

He broke off abruptly in order to follow her as she darted across the road; once more at her side he slipped one hand into her muff, whereupon she withdrew both hers and left him to carry the huge fur pillow to the sidewalk, where he returned it with a low bow. "As long as its not the mitten," he said.

She could not resist his large frank smile and flashed one at him in return. This little scene was observed by the Salvation Army man who guarded the pot which held donations for charity Christmas dinners.

"Keep the pot boiling," he prompted and winked his unsaved eye at the lassie who was helping him. Robin Reed drew from his pocket a half dollar and dropped it in and as he did so two men clad in sealskin coats and caps with extra, extra cigars between their teeth took up their stand in the centre of the side walk and proceeded to pitch silver dollars into the pot, turn about. When Robin had counted ten each he groaned, "Oh, come on, Lady Lou. I can see a little white bed waiting for me in the poor house."

"So can I," said Lady Lou, as she hailed a taxi and helped her in "You don't know how to do this sort thing at all," she added as they sped northward. "I planned to slip modestly into some poor hovel, leave a few gifts and run away. Now we will go tooting into the district like political candidates."

"Liberal parties, Lou, don't look so gay and Christmassy. 'I'm blue." She turned to him such a sympathetic face that he found he was prevaricating: he was the happiest devil in Winnipeg, however, he worked up quite a pathetic expression and related a story of ill-luck in connection with his first criminal case. "These people you are taking me to bless and endow with festive cheer are the deuce when it comes to law business. There's an old duffer out there who knows every man of that sneak thief gang that was operating last month, but can't lay hands on him; his evidence would clear my client in five minutes."

She gave his arm a pat and as he stooped to kiss the consoling hand the taxi stopped with a jerk. "Where to now?" asked the chauffeur.

"Er—why—is this the North End?"

They climbed out vaguely and dismissed the car. They were still on Main St. but the scene was changed; the shops were small, mean and ill-lighted and the three balls mounted guard over many doorways. There were piles of clothing and furniture on the sidewalks and before some emporiums paced a ferret-eyed individual huddled into a sheep-lined coat who breathed upward and loosened the icicles from his moustache as he prepared to accost a passer by, "Coats, boots, hats; all good an' cheap. Come in, come in." If the pedestrian had the appearance of a recent arrival in the city he was likely to find himself forcibly seized and thrust into the arms of the proprietor waiting inside the shop door.

"We won't ask at those places, Bob. What we want is some quiet little store whose owner has lived here a long time and can tell us of some poor family who won't have any Christmas unless we give it to them."

"We," he repeated softly. "Say 'we' again."

"We again want to buy toys," she added, pausing under a street light to wrinkle her nose at him.

They passed many windows so thickly frosted it was impossible to tell of what their contents might consist; then, at a corner they came upon a tiny, leaning shack, one story high where a lighted lamp had thawed a circle and disclosed to view a collection of cheap playthings. They turned in and peered through the semi-darkness. From a dim region behind the counter rose a man who wore a slouch hat and billowy garments, his voice was low and timid. Had he been big and bumptious the Yule Tide fairies would probably have purchased a modest assortment of toys and gone; as it was they departed half an hour later with the entire stock in a market basket loaned for the purpose: also they had six wool sweaters, a shawl, a boy's overcoat, and a man's cardigan jacket; this last the merchant kindly tried on stating that the sick man for whom is was destined was of about his size

The slouch hat nodded. "Ah, so poor," he lamented. "Six liddle chil dren und nefer yet a Christmas."

Lady Lou's eyes were wet thinking of it. "Never a Christmas. Fancy it, Rob. We'll have to scare up a turkey and a pudding to-morrow."

Second up and two to the right The place was easily found. It did not look as poverty-stricken as they expected but they decided their family only occupied a few rooms. A small boy ran up the steps as they approached and though they called to him, he slammed the door in their faces. After a long wait the door was opened by a wooden faced woman and leaving Robin on the steps, Lady Lou entered a bare little room. Wasting no time in explanations she thrust the armful of clothing into the mother's arms and aid the basket of toys on the floor. She was surprised at the stolid reception of the gifts. "Something for you all," she said rather breathlessly. "We'll send the dinner to-morrow." Then, as the woman remained silent. "Then man at the little shop two streets down said you had never had a Christmas. Is that really so? And you are Mrs. Owen, are you no?"

The woman nodded to both questions but made no offer to speak; she smiled a little and agreed, with another nod, to return the basket.

Lady Lou rejoined her partner in benevolence with rather a sombre face. "Of course I'm glad she wasn't effusive but somehow she made me feel apologetic, as if I ought to have offered to pay storage for that load; and she smiled in a funny way when I asked about them never having Christmases; it was a—yes, a contemptuous smile."

They sauntered down Main St. again waiting for a street car; back and forth they paced; evidently there was a tieup somewhere and at length they were chilled through and decided to walk. As they passed the scene of their purchasing Grey they heard strange sounds proceeding from within, a confused babel of voices arose; among them they recognized that of the proprietor but the tone was no longer meek and low. After a moment a look of query and consent passed between them and they retraced their steps and softly opened the door. The shop was full of boys ranging from about six to sixteen.

"Ach, fader," cried one. "Yet gif Ikey a quarter for dot red sweater und mine goes to be—"

"Fader, fader," piped up the youngest, "I got nodings but der toy. You gif to me a' cent on der toy, fader?"

The badgered shopman, minus slouch hat, was waving excited hands. "Poys, poys," he cried, "would rop your vader? Two cent a piece on der toys and ten cent on der cloes. I gif no more."

At this point, looking upon the gifts she ~~had~~ so lately bestowed with a full heart, Lady Lou could no longer contain her feelings. "Oh, you—how could you? How could you?" she cried glaring at the old man indignantly.

He cringed and in the succeeding silence Robin could be heard rustling the leaves of a note book. Presently he looked up and his grin was triumphant.

"So I've found you at last, Moses. What about Pete and Abe and the rest?" He caught his quarry's arm and held him firmly. "Easy, easy. Take your choice, Moses. Will you yet me get up a case about this con. game of yours, getting us to buy out your shop and hand the stuff over to your own family or will you give that evidence we want? I'm in the firm of Reed and Law. You know all about us. The case comes up in the morning. You identify the gang and you'll have no more trouble."

Moses was voluble in his assurances that he would be on hand, profuse in his thanks to Robin and tearful in his protests that they must have made a mistake in the address. They could still hear his wails of injured innocence as they walked down he street.

"Now," said Robin, "I'll telephone for some one to watch that duffer tonight. Gee, what luck! Its great."

"Its horrible! Abominable! It spoils my faith in human nature and the worst of it is I want to laugh. I must be shallow and cynical, Robin, or I would never laugh at such a thing—the pathetic way that old wretch said they had never had a Christmas!"

She stopped short and started at him. "Jewish! Rob! Why——Then she WAS contemptuous. Oh, Oh! She thought I was a fool."

Never having seen her humble before he thought the moment propitious. He drew her into the shadow and kissed her, very deliberately and very long. She made no attempt to release herself, but when she could speak she murmured, I'm almost afraid to offer any one a Christmas present now, but I think you said something about five feet three—"

Economy

Many women think they are saving money by buying cheap tea, forgetting that it is not the cost per pound but the cost per cup that determines a tea's economy.

You may pay 5 or 10 cents more per pound for Red Rose Tea than for common tea. But because Red Rose Tea is a blend of Indian-Assam teas with Ceylons, consisting of the choice tender shoots and buds—the parts of the tea plant that yield the largest amount of liquor and the finest flavor—one-third less is required in the pot to make the same number of cups.

The cost per cup between Red Rose Tea and common tea is then practically the same. But the flavor—what a difference!

And this distinctive and delightful flavor and rich strength is protected by the Red Rose sealed package. No air, odors or dust can get in to injure Red Rose Tea's splendid quality and economy.

House Gowns Make up in Color What They Lack in Frills

The one shown is cut in two pieces and hangs straight from the shoulder. Most of these house gowns are made of the Paul Poiret or post impressionist fabrics and make up in brilliant color what they lack in frills and furbelows.

The garment pictured is of hand blocked linen in oriental colors, but it would be quite as chic in conventional cretonnes or silks. It should be of somewhat heavy material, however.

The collectors for the Hamilton Patriotic Fund secured $90,438 on the first day of their canvass.

SOME COMMON TERMS

Aspic—Savory jelly.

Au Gratin—Covered with sauce, bread crumbs, etc., and browned in the oven or under a salamander.

Bechamel—French white sauce. Recognized as one of the four foundation sauces. The name of this sauce is supposed to come from the Marquis de Bechamel.

Bisque—Name given to certain soups usually made with shell fish.

Braise or Braising—A slow cooking process. Meat cooked in a closely covered stewpan (braising pan or braisiere) to prevent evaporation, so that the meat thus cooked retains not only its own juices, but also those of the articles added for flavoring.

As a rule a smart baby outgrows it.

"Astonishing how my

Mr. G C Inman.

"It was astonishing how my strength and fitness came back," says Mr. G. C. INMAN, of 230, HARCOURT STREET, STURGEON CREEK, WINNIPEG, for many years a well-known man in the business life of Canada. Mr. Inman continues: "It is about three years now since I first used Dr. Cassell's Tablets. I was terribly run-down and weak. Sometimes I felt I should have to leave off altogether, my work was such an effort to me, I ate little. I had no appetite, and I suffered if I forced myself to eat.

"My nerves of course were in a bad way, and my sleep very disturbed. Everything, in fact, pointed to a nervous breakdown. It was then a friend told me about Dr. Cassell's Tablets, and I got some to try. The first result was that I could sleep at nights, and then my health rapidly improved. It was really astonishing how my strength and fitness came back.

"I may add that some time ago my mother was very ill with pernicious anaemia. I urged her to take Dr. Cassell's Tablets, but she would not, so I crushed them down and gave them in food without her knowing. She was confined to bed before she had the Tablets, and now is about again well and bright."

Mr. Inman is now in England, having had to return there some little time ago to take control of the well-known firm of A. W. Inman and Son, Printers and Publishers, Leeds. Letters will reach him there.

SPOTTERS FELL VICTIM TO PLOT

LONG AND COSTLY RIDE IN SEARCH OF SOME "SCOTCH."

Two men, thought to be "spotters" on the lookout for "blind pigs" or whatever one might call persons who sell booze contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act, had one put over them. It appears that they were recognized by someone as they took a train towards a town not a thousand miles from Lindsay, and the word was flashed to their probable destination. Sure enough the two men got off there and approached a taxi driver, who was wise to their game. After the usual questions as to charges, etc., the two men took the driver into their confidence and informed him that they would pay well for a good time, and asked if he could take them to where they could partake of some "Scotch" or something just as good. Of course, the accommodating chauffeur could, if the price was no consideration, and after seeing that his passengers were made comfortable with wraps, he started on the journey. After riding for two hours or more the travellers began to get impatient and inquired, "How far have we to go?" The answer came back, "Quite a long distance yet." "Where are you taking us?" Answer: "To Montreal; that's the nearest and surest place to get your supply."

The men got out, made dread threats against the taxi driver, who was not a bit nervous in making them cough up $12.50 for their ride and experience. Smart people do not all come from Toronto.

OBITUARY

MRS. EDWARD SHEEHY

Mrs. Edward Sheehy died at Camden township on Wednesday night, aged 85. Daniel Sheehy of Peterborough is a half-brother.

MRS. ISABEL P. WATTS

De Courcy B. Cutcliffe, manager of the Union Bank at Norwood, is a nephew of Mrs. Isabel Prestwood Watts, whose death at Broadhurst Gardens, London, Eng., was recently announced.

The late Mrs. Watts was of a fine type of English gentlewomen, and possessed a most loveable and charitable disposition, and, despite her 87 years, retained all her faculties and took a live interest in passing events until she slept peacefully away. The deceased was also, in her younger days, an accomplished artist and musician, and on numerous occasions had taken part with the late Sir Henry Irving in some of his famous plays. The following nephews and nieces survive her, Major A. B. Cutcliffe now in France; Lt.-Col. M. E. B. Cutcliffe, O.C. 125th Batt., in England, de Courcy B. SHAREHOLDERS WIN DECISION

JUDGMENT BY THE OFFICIAL REFEREE.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—Official Referee J. A. McAndrew has given judgment on questions arising in connection with the liquidation of the Ontario Bank, holding that the Minister of Finance is not entitled to $70,000, but that he is entitled to the unclaimed balances on deposit in the bank, amounting to $20,000. If this decision is upheld in the Privy Council, whither it will ultimately travel, it will mean that there will be a considerable sum for distribution among the 650 shareholders of the bank. Already the shareholders have been rpaid 45 per cent. of their double liability.

Mr. McAndrew's judgment holds that the $30,000 deposit with the Minister for the redemption of outstanding circulation must be repaid to the liquidator.

HEAVY TOLL ON GREAT LAKES

TOTAL OF SEVENTY-THREE LIVES LOST WITH 14 VESSELS.

DETROIT, Jan. 19. — Seventy-three lives and 14 vessels were lost on the Great Lakes during the season of 1916, according to the annual report of the Lake Carriers' Association, made public today at the annual convention of the organization. This heavy casualty record is the most serious since 1913, when a fearful November storm claimed the greatest toll of lives and of ships in the history of inland navigation.

Three wrecks last year caused the death of 67 seamen. The first serious casualty took place on May 8, when the steamer S. R. Kirby went down in a gale on Lake Superior, off Eagle Harbor. Only two members of her crew of 22 were saved. The other two boats sank in Lake Erie on Oct. 20. Twenty-four men went down with the whaleback James B. Colgate, and the steamer Merida was lost with her entire crew of 23 persons.

The gross tonnage of the fourteen ill-fatd vessels was 16,817. The remained of the boats recorded in the casualty list follow:

Steamers—City of Midland, Panther, Topkea, Saronic, St. Ignace, Roberval, Marshall F. Butters.

Barges — Rob Roy, D. L. Filer, Sam Flint.

Schooners—James H. Hill.

CHARGE LAID UNDER THE TEMPERANCE ACT

Magistrate Opened Case at Havelock.

County Magistrate Langley held a session of the county police court in Havelock yesterday to hear the evidence in the case against W. Anderson, who, it is alleged, violated the Ontario Temperance Act.

The defendant was charged on a previous occasion with a similar offence, but was discharged.

Argument in yesterday's case will be heard in this city on Monday next when the magistrate will give a decision.

Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuted and G. N. Gordon defended the accused.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

About ten carloads of frozen potatoes have been found dumped in a field near Montreal, they having spoiled while the owners were waiting for prices to go up.

Belleville citizens decided to raise $75,000 this year for patriotic purposes. Of this amount the city council will be asked to contribute $60,000.

The royal commission appointed in 1916 to consider the railway problem in Canada, will not be ready to present any report to Parliament until April. An interim report will be presented then, with a more complete report promised for next autumn.

E. N. RHODES IS ELECTED SPEAKER BY PARLIAMENT

House May Sit Without Usual Breathing Spells—Matters to Come up for Discussion Include Equal Suffrage.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—Hearty applause, in which all members participated greeted the first official act of the seventh session of Canada's twelfth Parliament—the election of Mr. Edgar N. Rhodes of Cumberland, Nova Scotia, as Speaker.

The first resolution on the order paper is one which appropriately enough calls for the exercise of "thrift, efficiency, honesty and common sense." Mr. W. B. Northrup (East Hastings), who fathers the resolution, calls for the specific exercise of these virtues by asking Parliament to meet every day and every evening, except Sundays and statutory holidays. Th adoption of the resolution would mean the cutting out of the usual Wednesday night adjournment at 6 o'clock and the free Saturday.

Mr. Northrup has also given notice of the re-introduction of his resolution of last session, providing for divorce courts, instead of the present system of divorces by Act of Parliament. The resolution says the latter pocedure is unfair to the majority of the people "because of unreasonable expense."

On Woman Suffrage

Donald Sutherland (South Oxford) has given notice of a non-commital woman's suffrage resolution. It declares that the question of extending the franchise to women "should engage the attention of the Government at the present time." Hon. Dr. Pugsley is moving a resolution declaring for Federal extension of the Franchise to women. Dr. Pugsley has also given notice of an amendment to the Criminal Code providing for some minor amendments to the code in respect to divorce.

J. G. Turriff (Assiniboia) has given notice of a resolution which will be generally supported by the Liberal side of the House at least, calling for the adoption of the proportional representation system in the election of members of the Commons.

Col. J. A. Currie (W. Simcoe) will move a resolution calling for an immediate Imperial Conference, "in order that the whole economic strength of the Empire may be brought into co-operation with our Allies in a policy directed against the enemy."

Mr. A. B. McCoig (W. Kent) has a resolution calling for the removal of the duty on beans, in order that beans for seed may be brought in to meet the shortage caused by the failure of the bean crop of last year.

FURTHER BRITISH GAINS

LONDON, Jan. 19. — The report from British Headquarters in France issued last night reads:

"Further progress was made during the night north of Beaucourt-sur-Ancre, as a result of the successful local operations reported yesterday. In connection with the raid northeast of Cite Calonne we sprang a mine with good effect. The enemy's defences east of Bois Grenier and east of Ploegsteert were bombarded during the day.

"The enemy's artillery was active south of Sailly-Saillisell and east of Bethune. On other portions of our line the artillery activity on both sides was dormal."

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

MISS HUGHES EXPLAINS WHY

frage convention at Washington last year. Some claim that women are not intelligent enough to vote. A great many women, said the speaker, are more intelligent than some members of Parliament, not to speak of the men who help elect them. The speaker here gave some illustrations of statesman-like wisdom that had come under her notice on a visit to Ottawa.

Why Women Want Vote

The Ontario Government has little to do with the conduct of the war. To ask for equal suffrage at the coming session will not embarrass them. Four Western provinces have enfranchised women since the war broke out. When peace comes there will be a period of reconstruction and women want to be ready to take a hand in reconstructing society. Since the war broke out women have shown their possibilities. France could not continue in the struggle, England scarcely could but for the aid rendered by women. In Canada women have surprised the world. They have shown their talent for organization everywhere.

Miss Hughes then gave an account of her experience as a factory worker, a task she undertook to ascertain at first hand how working women fared. She found them underpaid and overworked. The men who employed them were defeating the end they had in view by their own stupidity. The world will never be right until women get the same wages as men for similar lines of work. Women who take the places of men at the front should insist upon the same pay; otherwise the returned soldiers will not get their old positions again.

What Suffragists May Do

Equal suffrage is not a party issue, for women have not been trained in party lines. The leader of the Opposition in Ontario is in favor of the movement and stands pledged to give women the vote if he is returned to power. Here is the Government's opportunity. If the Administration refuses to act the suffragists will find it necessary to work for their defeat and for the election of a friendly party following the policy adopted by the women of Australia. The Government needs a thorough house-cleaning before the boys come back from the trenches, and there are none quite so expert in this art as the women of Canada.

Col. Ackerman's Address

Col. Ackerman made a brief address in which he complimented the women in this district and all over Canada for the work they have done since the war started. In a local factory that he recently visited where women were engaged in the making of munitions, the manager told him that they were more conscientious and industrious than the men. Some methods other than those now in use must be employed to get men to enlist. They must be urged to their duty by their friends, even at the risk of forfeiting friendship. Their places can be filled by women as the work a great many of them are doing is such as the latter are not only willing, but able to undertake.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem, led by Mrs. John Allan.

CAPT. BURNHAM FAVORS VOTE ON CONSCRIPTION

One of Speakers at Recruiting Meeting in Toronto Last Night---First Great Effort Has Exhausted Itself.

Capt. J. H. Burham has returned from Toronto, where he was one of the speakers at a recruiting meeting last night. In his address he said that he believed that Canada's first great effort had about exhausted itself, and new methods were necessary for her to continue successfully to do her share. Conscription, to be complete he said, must be conscription of all resources. He thought that a referendum should be put before the people, and the same could be done in the space of three weeks. "Ask the people," he said. "Do you wish conscription of Canada's resources, both of men and wealth? By so doing there would still be a possibility of it being a voluntary measure."

It was resolved that the meeting present to Sir Robert Borden its anxious solicitude for the continued participation of Canadian troops in service at the front, and that he allow no influence of any kind to hinder or interfere with full and complete military and naval organization, pledging to the Premier its full and hearty support and cordial endorsement of a vigorous, loyal and patriotic policy.

Enforce Militia Act

Another resolution passed was moved by Henry O'Brien, K.C., and seconded by Miss Constance Boulton. It was to the effect that, while large forces have been raised, equipped and despatched to the front, there is still a heavy shortage from the 500,000 men pledged by the Dominion, and as a sufficient trial had been made of the system of voluntary enlistment to demonstrate its inequity, the Government of the Dominion should without delay enrol, under the Militia Act, sufficient men belonging to Class 1 (single men from 18 to 30 years) to complete forthwith the number of 500,000.

BRITAIN TO CONSTRUCT MANY SHIPS FOR AFTER THE WAR

LONDON, Jan. 19. The creation of a mighty armada of British mercantile shipping within six months after the end of the war was prophesied by a high naval authority in a statement yesterday. Facilities for shipbuilding in Great Britain, it is asserted, have been so greatly augmented during the war that British yards can easily outdistance all German competition.

"Once our effort is concentrated on merchant shipping," this official said, "it will be possible to build vessels in less than ninety days, and perhaps faster, if they are standardized ships. Even with so much labor devoted to war purposes we have been able to construct 9,000-ton liners in three months' time.

"The stimulus to shipbuilders working under war pressure and on war vessels will continue when it comes to building merchantmen, for the men will accept the challenge of the Germans. Never in her history has Britain had at her disposal such a highly efficient and large body of shipbuilders as she will have when the war closes. We can view the future with equanimity, regardless of German productions."

While the ocean tugs Roebling and Lisgar were towing the Canadian Government dredge Cape Breton and two scows from Luneburg to Louisburg, Cape Breton, a heavy gale sprang up. The dredge broke adrift, went ashore, and the captain and crew of nine perished.

Mrs. Blair, of Princeton, Oxford county, who is dead from pneumonia, would have been 102 years of age in March.

BROTHER OF MRS. DOBBIN PASSES AWAY.

William Albert Stinson, a brother of Mrs. Heber Dobbin of this city, died at Janetville on Wednesday. Deceased was in his 53rd year and had been ailing for some time. He was a member of the Orange Order, a Presbyterian in religion and a Conservative in politics.

Left to mourn his loss are the following brothers and sisters: Robert of Lindsay; Thomas of British Columbia; Mrs. Isaac Laidley of Manvers; Mrs. Jas. Bushnell of Omemee; Mrs. Heber Dobbin of Peterborough and Miss Ethel Stinson of British Columbia. Mr. Percy Stinson, station agent at Millbrook, is a son of the deceased, and Mrs. Johnston of Janetville is a daughter. The late Mr. Stinson is also survived by a widow.

The funeral was held at Janetville this afternoon.

SAVING FOR NEXT CHRISTMAS

Do you know what a Christmas club is? Have you joined one yet for the year 1917? If not, why not?

The idea is so good that everybody ought to have a chance at it.

There are three general plans for operating these clubs, each backed by some reliable bank. According to the first, the member undertakes to save a definite small sum the first week in the year, and in each succeeding week to add that amount to the sum saved the week before. Thus, if his first week's saving is 5 cents, his second week's will be 10, the third 15, and so on. Two weeks before the end of 1917, or after saving according to this plan for 50 weeks, he will have $63.75.

Certain savers prefer to begin with the highest weekly amount and scale down week by week until in the 50th week the smallest sum is due. One might begin with a $2.50 deposit and end with one of 5 cents, and he would have his $63.75 available for next Christmas.

Still a third class prefers to save a fixed sum each week. If it is 25 cents a week, the Christmas check will be for $12.50; if $1 a week, the sum will be $50, and so on.

The bank which conducts the club does not pay interest on the weekly deposits. Its expenses in handling the accounts are judged to be about equal to its profits from the use of the money paid in.

As a matter of fact, not all members of the Christmas clubs withdraw all the money deposited during the 50 weeks. Many of them learn through this method to become regular savers and patrons of banks which pay interest on savings accounts.

The idea is an old one in England. There clubs to save money are formschool under the ministry of nation clubs are perhaps as popular as the Christmas clubs. It is a form of cooperation that is distinctly helpful and one capable of indefinite expansion.

CANADA'S SONS

At the recent annual gathering held by the Veterans 1866 Association, one of the interesting contributions to the program was the recitation by Mr. Richard Sanderson of "Canada's Sons," composed by his sister, Miss Camilla Sanderson, of Toronto, who is a frequent contributor of verses on patriotic themes. The composer of "Canada's Sons," which is given herewith, is a former Peterborough lady, being the daughter of the late Rev. John Sanderson.

CANADA'S SONS

Canada's sons have answered the call.
Canada's boys so brave and strong,
Recked they nothing that some would fall.
As shoulder to shoulder they marched along.
Yes, well they know, but their hearts beat true,
And they cheered each other with laugh and song.

Oh! we are proud of our boys today,
We, who would join them if we might,
Gladly to share in the fiercest fray,
Ready to suffer as well as fight.
For fight they must; let us hope and trust
That they all may be strong in doing right.

Some loving hearts will have cause to mourn,
And eyes not used to tears will weep,
For all who have gone will not return,
And sor[illegible] some will keep.
But let them know in their deepest woe
That earth a harvest of good will reap.

What is there now for us to do—
Those of us long since past our prime—
The years that are left us are but few,
How can we best redeem the time
Let us live to show our men who go,
For us to get their work is crime

Their loved are ours till they return,
Some will come back, but many will fall;
Friends, let it ever be our concern
To do our part with a willing heart,
For sick and wounded and all who mourn.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

SPORTING NEWS

TRINITY-ST. ANDREW'S AND GEORGE ST. WINNERS

Opening Games in the Junior Church League.

The first brace of games in the Junior Church Hockey League at the Brock Street Rink last night furnished plenty of excitement and returned the sevens from George Street and Trinity-St. Andrew's as first night winners. George Street and the Presbyterians led off, and at the end of the first period each team had two goals. At the end of the second period the Presbyterians shot ahead and entered the third session with a one goal lead. Then they stopped. Neither team could find the nets until towards the end of the game when the Methodists slammed in three counters in quick succession, giving them the contest by 6 to 4.

The teams lined up as follows:

The teams:—

George Street.—Goal, Rutherford; defence, Peever, Head; rover, H. Graham; wings, Gullett and Holson.

Knox— Goal, Mahood; defence, Moore, E. Jackson; rover, Doughty; centre, Wright; wings, W. Jackson and Clarke.

Win for Union.

The Unionists won the day in the second engagement by 5 to 4. They led at the end of the first period by 3 to 2, and the Mark Street lads tied it up in the second session. In the final period, Trinity-St. Andrew's scored two counters while the Easterners had to be contented with one. Pigeon played well for the combined team, and Williams and Hagerman were prominent for the Mark Street seven.

The teams:—

Trinity-St. Andrews— Goal, Pidgeon, defence, Soden and English; rover, Henry; centre, Greene; wings, Tudhope and Batten.

Mark Street.—Goal, Nellis; defence, Wyatt and Hagerman; rover, Quinn; centre, Williams; wings, Cook and Lipsett.

Referee—Walter Jackson.

What is the Difference?

When a man deserts his wife and children, leaving them without support, the world regards him with contempt.

What is the differnt between desertion and death, if the wife and children are left without support, in either case when the husband and father failed through negligence to provide for them?

The above may sound a little harsh; I guess it does; but it may not have struck you that way before, and if the husband is insurable, is there really any difference?

Answer this vital question now that your attention has been called to it, in a practical way, by writing, telephoning or calling on the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada as with its Eighty Odd Millions of Assets, the largest amount held by any Canadian company, there is no safer, sounder or more generous and faithful custodian to be found to administer your wishes with regard to your wife and children.

CALL SOLDIERS TO TRAVEL FAR IN THEIR SERIES

Lindsay Press on the Game There Wednesday Night.

The Warder says: The Midgets were soundly trounced and with ease by one of the best teams local railbirds have ever witnessed travel at the Lindsay St. rink. Compared to the visiting soldiers, the locals were as town leaguers. They were in fast company, so fast that the Midgets appeared to be desperately slow. Time and time again the visitors swept down the ice with Hawaiian grace and ease, the locals appearing to be in a daze. Peterborough had experience, weight and speed. By what the Midgets lacked—condition, the end of the first period the Midgets were just about fagged, and were outclassed holus-bolus.

The Petes should have a long reach for the O.H.A. intermediate silver mug.

The Post says: Lindsay received the worst beating of her hockey career last night when the 247th Batt. team of Peterborough ran up a total of 21 goals to the locals 8.

The big fast Peterborough team simply swarmed all over the Midgets, outskating, outchecking and outshooting them at every stage of the game, but in spite of all that it was not a tiresome game to watch, for the locals at times showed flashes of good individual hockey. The soldiers might have run up even a larger score had it not been for the fact that Armstrong, their star centre man, had to be led off the ice minus three good teeth, which put him out of the party for good, early in the first period. Quinn, too, had to be carried off the ice after receiving a nasty smash during a mix-up in a corner, which turned the game into a five-man a side affair. The Petes lived up to advance notices and the team they presented was one of the best seen here in many moons. They should go a long way toward winning the cup. Adams and Halpin starred last night for Peterborough, while Evans was always on the job, particularly around the nets.

Adams, the Petes' right wing, looks good enough to catch a place on any team. He is a husky gent with plenty of speed and packs a healthy shot.

If Grover Halpin is the smallest man on the team he certainly is one of the most effective. His rushing last night was exceedingly spectacular.

Quinn had a lot of hard luck last night. First he lost a tooth which must have caused him considerable anoyance, and then got a smash that put him out of business altogether.

The same Quinn is a returned soldier, having been on the firing line for over a year, and in all that time he wasn't used up as badly as he was last night.

The 247th played clean hockey for a team that is as fast and as heavy as they are.

THE GROUP WINNERS

Of the sixteen groups in the Ontario Tankard the following have been returned winners:

Group 2—Peterborough.
Group 4—Parkdale

Hard Game for the Juniors To-night

THE REGULAR LINEUP AND HARD ICE WILL HELP.

Murray, McIntyre, Montgomery, Graham, Cherrett, McFee and Bartley will line up at their regular positions in the task before them tonight at Brock street rink. Oshawa is coming with their strongest team, and as hard ice is available, everybody will have to go the limit. Lawson Whitehead will referee.

Wm. Davidson was re-appointed secretary of Stratford public school board for the thirtieth time.

EXIT LINDSAY FROM THE GAME

Major O'Flynn was notified this morning that Lindsay would default to the 247th the balance of their O. H. A. games. This will leave the next week free to the local team.

It is the intention of the major to get one of the Toronto senior teams down here on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week to give the Soldiers a good work-out and at the same time to let the Peterborough fans see the class there is to the local team.

If the T. R. & A. A. seven can be induced to play an exhibition game it certainly would draw a bumper gate.

Major O'Flynn is a very confident manager and anticipates no trouble in giving the Belleville team a good trimming.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Harry Long left today to visit friends in Corbyville.

The Progressive Club desire to extend to Mr. R. J. Devey and those who took part in the Geisha their most grateful thanks for the handsome donation of $250. This represents the entire profits from the three performances and is most substantial evidence of the patriotic spirit of Mr. R. J. Devey and the members of his Dramatic Society.

Yesterday afternoon St. Peter's Patriotic Club held their weekly tea at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum. The tea tables were beautifully decorated with daffodils. The hostesses, Mrs. B. Law, and Miss Nora Shevlin, were assisted by Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, the Misses M. C. Kelly, E. O'Brien, M. Shevlin and E. McCabe. A nice sum was added to the yarn fund.

A sock shower will be held tomorow afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Harry Thompson, 475 Hunter Street, by the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., for the Secours National.

Mr. Robt. Sturgeon, who has been laid up with a very severe attack of la grippe, is able to be at his office again.

Mrs. B. Dawson of Campbellford is visiting friends in the city.

Mr. A. E. Caddy of Campbellford is in the city.

Mrs. A. C. Osborne of Uxbridge spent the day in the city.

REV. T. H. MITCHELL STAYS IN CHARGE AT ST. ANDREWS

Informed Congregation at Annual Meeting Last Night He Will Not Quit Until War is Over—Very Successful Year.

Rev. T. H. Mitchell, minister in charge of St. Andrew's Church, told his congregation at the annual meeting last night that, while he had told the management some time ago that he would be obliged to give up the charge in the spring on account of his health, he found that he would be able to remain until the war is over and Rev. Jas. Rollins returns. This statement was heartily applauded by the audience. There were over 100 at the meeting, Mr. Mitchell presiding. Supper was served in the school room by the ladies before the session began. The reports of the various societies were received, all indicating a busy and successful year.

The receipts of the Sudnay school for general purposes amounted to $275.85, and besides this $77.35 was raised for missions.

St. Andrew's Patriotic Society raised and expended $575 during the year.

The session reported that 43 new members had been added since the meeting a year ago, making the total number now on the roll 530.

The organ committee have raised $700, which discharges the last cent of debt on the new instrument which is the pride of the congregation.

The total amount paid out for current expenses was $3998.57, which was $141.17 less than the total receipts. This reduces the overdraft of $640.40 to $499.23.

The amount raised for the various mission funds was $3608.76, making the total income of the congregation $7597.33 for the year.

Mrs. T. F. Robinson was appointed to the board of Protestant Old People's Home, Mr. E. B. Fowler to the Nicholls Hospital Trust, and Mr. J. McClelland to the Charity Board.

All the retiring members of the board of management were re-elected. These were Messrs. A. McFarlane, G. A. Gillespie, G. Walter Green and W. A. Richardson, the present clerk. The number on the board was increased to fifteen, the following new members being elected: Messrs. Howard Waram, E. Latimer and E. Walton.

The year just closed has been in every respect one of the most successful in the long history of the congregation.

RE-ELECTIONS TO PLOUGHMEN'S ASSOCIATION

TOWNSHIP CONTESTS TO BE CARRIED OUT ON A WIDER AREA.

The County Ploughmen's Association held their annual meeting in the County Council chamber yesterday afternoon. The drifted roads prevented the presence of the president, Mr. Joshua Smithson, of Otonabee, and Mr. John Gillespie presided.

The attendance of members was large and the reports encouraging in every respect.

The officers were elected as follows:—

President—Joshua Smithson.
1st Vice-Pres.—John Gillespie.
2nd Vice-Pres.—C. E. Moore.
Sec.-Treas.—Chas. Brown
Directors for 1917:
North Monaghan—J. McIntosh and H. G. Webber
Otonabee—W. A. Anderson and W. Cleghorn.
Ennismore —John Young and D. Crough.
Asphodel — Max Brown, William Breckenridge and Wm. Knox.
Douro—M. Walsh
Belmont—Wes. Johnston
Dummer—C. J. Darling
Harvey—R. Shaw
Smith—J. H. Garbutt and A. B. Mann.
Peterborough—H. B. Cowan
Auditors—Wm. Collins and J. A. McGregor.

Delegates Appointed

Messrs. J. H. Garbutt of Smith and Wm. Knox of Asphodel were appointed delegates to the annual meeting of the Provincial Ploughmen's Association to be held in Toronto on Feb. 8, and the treasurer was instructed to send the annual fee of $10.

More Township Contests

It was suggested to the directors that they endeavor to arrange a competition for the best plowed field of five acres or upwards, to be held in each townshap and that liberal prizes be offered. It was suggested that the district representatives might act as judges. This is merely suggestion which it is expected the directors will fully consider. Ennismore already holds a township contest that is bearing good results.

The financiers of the association are in good shape, according to the report of the auditors. The year 1916 was successful in every way and the progress made was commended. The directors hope for increased interest

APPOINTMENT OF JUDGE RUDDY IS MOST POPULAR

(Orillia Packet.)

Ruddy of name, mayhap also of countenance, is Ontario's new County Judge. Judge Ruddy was a Peterborough K.C., and of him the Uxbridge Times says: Judge Ruddy was born at Victoria Corners, being the fourth son of the late James Ruddy, who is well remembered by the older citizens of this part of the country. The new judge was educated at Uxbridge High School, Toronto University and Osgoode Hall. He first commenced practising law at Millbrook about twenty years ago, later going to Peterborough where he finally formed a partnership with Capt. J. H. Burnham. M.J. Judge Ruddy has been employed on some notable cases, and at one time was chosen to carry a case before the Privy Council in England. He should be well fitted for his new position.

LAID TO REST

Many members of the Salvation Army and friends of the late Mrs. Thomas Yost attended the funeral service held in the Army Temple yesterday afternoon. Adjt. McElhiney conducted the service and Mrs. McElhiney sang Home at Last, and the band played the Dead March. There were numerous floral tributes.

The pallbearers were R. C. Braund, H. Gray, F. Calvert, H. Payton, T. Brooks and J. Thompson, the latter three bearers being members of the 247th Batt. band.

LIVES SAVED BY WORK OF THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Sick and Suffering Brought Back to Health.

YEAR'S REPORTS

The Peterborough Health Association held its annual meeting in the ouncil Chamber last night. Rev. ather Phelan, the president, presided, and he said he was delighted ith the splendid attendance. He as very thankful for the enthusiam shown during the past year and oped for even more this year. Refering to the finances, the president tated that while they were thankul for the grant made by the City ouncil last year, he hoped for a ery much larger one in 1917. He eartily thanked the executive for heir co-operation and assistance at ll times.

Secretary's Report

Dr. Cameron, the secretary, presented his report for the year as given below, and it was adopted.

The year 1916 has seen the completion of another twelve months' ork of the Peterborough Health Association, and when we take into onsideration the disturbed conditions under which we are living in onsequence of the war, I think we re justified in saying that the year n the whole has been a successful ne. To have carried the work of uch an association through at all hould be a matter of congratulation o those who are interested in its perations. Fortunately, at our last nnual meeting we had elected a umber of ladies and gentlemen as embers of our executive who have hown a sincere desire to promote he welfare of the society. With the ble assistance of the president, Rev. r. Phelan, we have had regular and ell attended executive meetings. arly in the year the executive waited upon the City Council and made a equest for assistance to the extent f $100 per month, but unfortunately r our society, the City Fathers ere unable to do better than continue the $50 which they had been iving monthly during the previous ear. Appeals have been made to the ublic in various ways from which ums of money have been received, nd this amount, together with that eceived from the ladies of the urses' Supervision Committee, has nabled us to carry our work through the end of 1916; and here we wish draw to your attention the splendid work of the ladies who carried ough the successful reception recently held at the Empress Hotel, nd their splendid work, as I above stimated, on this occasion enabled s to close the year free from any ncumbrances.

The Nurses' Supervision Committee have met regularly, and from eir report you will see that their ork has been very thoroughly carried on. I think I can say that no request coming to their notice has gone answered.

I am sorry to say that owing to l-health. Miss Mercier, one of our urses, has been unable to attend to er duties for about half the past ear. For this we are sorry and can nly hope that she may be speedily restored to complete health. Miss amilton, our other nurse, stepped the breach, and I am glad to say done a splendid work, putting ith her very best efforts to carry the work o fMiss Mercier as well the work of Miss Mercier as well hich Miss Hamilton will present to u this evening, you will be able to dge something of what she has accomplished.

SEATTLE WON

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

SEATTLE. Jan. 20.—Seattle defeated Portland by 8 to 3 in a Pacie Coast league game last night.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF GENERAL NURSE.

"I was called to nurse a baby six months old. When I first attended it, it weighed six and one-half pounds. The child cried and whined almost incessantly while awake, and was so wasted that the limbs resembled those of a bird and the fat entirely disappeared from the body. The treatment prescribed by the doctor was faithfully carried out and proper food given. In four months the baby weighed sixteen pounds.

MANESTI IN FOE HANDS

Germans Take Village and Repulse Roumanians

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 20.— An official statement today says — Western front: Near Wytschaete and west of La Bassee attacks by British patrols last night were repulsed. Reconnoitering enterprizes launched between Doler and the Rhine-Rhone Canal were successfully carried out by Wurttemburg troops.

Roumanian front (Front of Archduke Joseph): In the Eastern Carpathians, north-east of Belbor, minor Russian detachments repeatedly attacked our positions unsuccessfully. The enemy, who at one point had entered by a surprise attack, was driven off in hand-to-hand fighting.

North of Suchitza Valley the Roumanians repeated their desperate attacks at the same point as on the previous day. In addition to several hundred dead which are lying before our positions, the aggressors lost 400 men prisoners.

Army group of Von Mackensen: Heavy snowstorms and insufficient light impeded the activities of our artillery; nevertheless, the town of Nanesti, situated on the Sereth River was taken yesterday by German troops by storm and in hand-to-hand fighting.

On the Macedonian front the day and night passed calmly.

Miss Ward Speaks at the Armories

Miss Ada L. Ward will no doubt draw a large attendance at the Armories tomorrow night when she will deliver one of her blackboard talks on situations on the battle front in aid of recruiting.

Miss Ward's services are in demand all over the Dominion and the citizens of Peterborough are fortunate in being able to have a chance to hear her.

The band will be in attendance and a silver collection will be taken.

On Monday night Miss Ward wil address a meeting in the Collegiate Institute under the auspices of the Teachers' Association.

TRIAL NEXT WEEK.

COBOURG, Jan. 20. — Alice Townsend, whose home is in Norwood, was committed to jail here for trial on the charge of abandoning her newly-born baby at Hastings, where it was found and adopted. She is to come up for trial next week before Judge Ward.

BATTALION 153 STRONG

First Church Parade to St. John's.

Military News

Norwood Soldier on Casualty List

The strength of the 247th Batt. stands at 153 today. The first church parade will be held to St. John's Church on Sunday morning.

Corp. H. L. Stewart of Millbrook, previously reported wounded, is now reported wounded and missing.

It is rumored that Capt. H. B. Kenny, chaplain of the 139th Bn., with a number of other chaplains, are to be released from military service to resume their pastorates.

The recruiting meeting held at Havelock last night was successful in every way, and Major O'Flynn was so delighted with the results that he decided to stay over in the village. Two recruits were signed up at the meeting, and four others will join next week.

The town hall was packed with the citizens of the village and the surrounding country to hear what Major O'Flynn and Capt. Hamilton had to say, and they were given a great reception both before and after the addresses. The 247th Band were much appreciated for their splendid concert and everyone was enthusiastic.

Reeve Mathison occupied the chair and as chief magistrate of the village was proud of the enthusiasm. He presented the gold medals to the parents of Pte. Lyman Reid and Pte. E. Jones, on behalf of the Citizens' Recruiting League. Both these men had given up their lives for their King and country.

Lieut. Iles, who is recruiting for the 256th Railroad Construction Bn., has attested two men, Pte Fred Coles and Pte. Wm. Edwards. More applied for examination as to fitness.

Pte. Francis John Moore of Lang is the latest recruit to don the khaki and badge of the 247th. Lang has done well during the past week. Five recruits from that section of Otonabee have attested.

Lieut. Gordon A. Flavelle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Flavelle, left last night for Ottawa, from which point he will leave almost immediately for England to train for the Royal Naval Flying Corps, for which branch of the service he has been accepted.

Mr. Jack Wilford, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Wilford, sail at the same time as Lieut. Flavelle. He has already completed a course in aviation at Newport News, and returned from there less than three weeks ago. He has also been accepted as a member of the Royal Naval Flying Corps.—Lindsay Post.

Owing to a snowstorm at Buffalo on Thursday the G.T.R was obliged to commandeer several cars of coal to operate their trains.

Premier W. H. Hearst and Sir Edmund Walker, addressing Patriotic Fund captains, declared that nobody should question the right of a soldier's wife to go to the movies or buy a new hat.

Nearly three million dollars has been raised by the Toronto and York Patriotic Fund Association at a cost of about $24,000.

PTE. ADAM STARK
Son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stark, Indian River, who enlisted in Winnipeg with the Cameron Highlanders and has been serving in the trenches for over a year.

Sampson Before Magistrate Again

County Magistrate Langley is hearing the evidence in other charges of cattle stealing against Clarence Sampson this afternoon.

The evidence is the same as in the previous case, except that the identification of the hides by the owners is necessary.

Crown Attorney Hatton is prosecuting and A. E. Dixon appears for the defendant.

G. A. GILLESPIE PRESIDENT FOR ANOTHER TERM

RE-ELECTIONS BY PETERBOROUGH AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

TO SIGN LEASE FOR PRESENT GROUNDS.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie was re-elected president at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Agricultural and Exhibition Co., which was held in the Council Chamber this afternoon.

The reports of the officers were received and adopted.

President—G. A. Gillespie
Vice-President—C. E. Moore.
2nd Vice-President—Jas. Baptie.
Sec.-treasurer F. J. A. Hall.

The directors were instructed to sign a lease of the present exhibition grounds for three years.

The date of the fair was fixed for Sept. 13, 14 and 15.

Mr T. Brown was appointed superintendent.

A motion expressing regret over the death of Vice-President J. J. Turner, Sr., was passed and the secretary instructed to forward a copy to members of the family.

Minstrels Played to Large Crowd

A very successful minstrel show was held in the parish hall of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Ashburnham, last night. The large crowd enjoyed the entertainment immensely. The management was guided, by Mr. Jack McCabe, while the musical directing was in charge of Mr. Dan Leonard. Mr. A. Weatherhead presided at the piano.

AT OTTAWA SHOW.

Mr. James Baptie has returned from Ottawa, where he was attending the poultry show. He reports the exhibition a fine one.

BRITISH STEAMER SUCCESSFUL IN BATTLE WITH SUBMARINE

Submersible Fired 210 Shells Getting 26 Hits.

Steamer Replied

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The British steamer Lindenhall, which arrived here today, fought with a German submarine for an hour and forty minutes while on a voyage from Cardiff to Naples in mid-December. When between Gibraltar and Naples the Lindenhall was signalled by a submarine to stop, but instead put on full speed ahead. The submarine pursued and fired 210 shells of which 26 struck the steamer, who returned 86 shells from a 12-pounder at the stern. Finally the Lindenhall took refuge in a small bay near Palermo, and the submarine abandoned the chase.

BELGIANS CONDEMNED

Lads Under Seventeen Get Prison for 15 Years.

HUN OUTRAGE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HAVRE, Jan. 20.—Thirty Belgians have ben condemned to death by the German military government at Leige because they attempted to escape to Holland and from there to join the Belgian army. Four others, lads under 17, have been sentenced to fifteen years in prison. News of this outrage has reached the Belgian Government through most trustworthy channels.

WATCH FOR MISS BENNET

REMEMBRANCE FROM S. S. CLASS AT COLDSPRINGS.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Pamment, Coldsprings, was the scene of a very delightful social party when the members of Miss Bennet's S. S class gathered for an evening's fun. In the midst of the entertainment a presentation of a watch was made to Miss Bennet, and the following address was read:

Dear Miss Bennet:

We, the members of your Sunday school class and some of your many friends, thought that this gathering would be a good opportunity to express to you our appreciation of your untiring and unselfish interest, not only as teacher of your class but in the community as a whole.

Many times you must have felt discouraged when you had difficulties to surmount, but "every cloud has its silver lining," and your work has and will bring forth in time the results you desire.

We would ask you to accept this watch, not as a reward for what you have done: we could not do that, but as a slight tangible token of our esteem, and we trust that in the wearing of it you may think of the time you have redeemed in helping to fit us for the better life.

We know you appreciate any little token we give you, so we do not expect any reply, but we hope to spend many happy social times together, such as we are having tonight.

Signed.
Mrs. Reid, Cassie Gillespie,
Mrs. Tully, Mrs. Pamment.

LEGISLATURE OPENS FEB. 13

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., has received an official summons to attend the Provincial Legislature on Tuesday, February 13th, the opening date.

Equal Suffrage will be one of the more important questions to be considered. Religious instruction in schools, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act, will also be brought up.

Temperance advocates will impress upon the House the desirability of making the advertisement of liquor in the province illegal, and another effort will be made to have the Act amended to prohibit the importation of liquor.

The League would like to send another shipment before the end of the month, and would ask everyone who is knitting to hand in as many pairs as possible before that time. This is the weather when the boys need these nice, warm, comfortable socks more than at any other time, and the League hope to be able to make a shipment every two weeks. The sacrificing of a little time will make this possible and the packages more generous. The League thank their numerous knitters for the noble work they are doing, but they still have yarn for many more knitters.

Three Rows of Small Houses in East End Wrecked.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 20.—It is officially announced that between thirty and forty bodies have been recovered thus far from the ruins of the munitions factory, the scene of the explosion last night. About 100 persons are reported injured seriously. Three rows of small houses in the neighborhood were almost demolished.

The explosion occurred in the east end of London.

GERMAN RAIDER SUPPORTED BY SUBMARINES

EQUIPPED WITH COLLAPSIBLE SMOKESTACKS TO CONCEAL IDENTITY.

IS PAINTED BLACK.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

RIO JANERIO, Jan. 20.—A Pernambuco newspaper says the German commerce raider is accompanied by three extremely small submarines, which act as scouts. The raider is said to be capable of 25 knots speed. A steamship which arrived yesterday at Bahia says a strange steamship, painted black, has been sighted off Ceara, Brazil, running at high speed. She had four smoke stacks. The Ger- collapsible stacks. She changes the colapsible stacks. She changes the number of stacks in use from time to time to conceal her identity.

REVIVES QUESTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — A statement by the German Admiralty that neutral subjects in the crews of vessels captured by the German raider "have been removed as prisoners of war" will raise the complicated question if any Americans are among them. The whole question turns on whether an armed merchant vessel is a war vessel and the difference between United States and Germany on that point is still unsettled. The German Admiralty statement made just when the armed ship issue between the two countries is becoming more complicated is taken to foreshadow a more pronounced attitude on Germany's part.

CHARLES FISHER HURT IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Mr. Charles Fisher of North Monaghan, met with an accident last night, when the horse which he was driving shied at an engine at the C. P. R. station. Mr Fisher was thrown out and the cutter overturned. The horse ran about one hundred yards before being stopped.

The cutter was broken and the harness damaged considerably. Mr. Fisher was not seriously injured.

THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION.

A YOUNG BOY at Auburn fell sick and the nurse employed by the Peterborough Health Association was called in just in time. It was found that the boy was threatened with tuberculosis, and prompt measures were taken. He was placed in a tent so as to get the advantage of pure air. He was given medical treatment and the proper diet. The disease was uprooted and the boy saved from a lingering and painful death.

Is it any wonder, then, that this case, reported at the annual meeting of the Health Association last night, aroused the grateful appreciation of the entire community in which it occurred? Every resident of Auburn is now a firm believer in the mission of the Association, and the financial support of that district is assured. Mr. James Kendry set the example by sending in a cheque for $100, for which donation he was elected a life member of the Association.

The Auburn case is only one of scores that could be cited. The value of the work of the Association is not to be overestimated. When the number that have been saved to lives of usefulness is taken into account, the expenditure becomes a small matter in comparison.

The education of the public with regard to this disease is all-important, and it is the nurses employed by the Association upon whom this duty devolves. That it is always faithfully and intelligently performed no one will question. The Association is certainly entitled to the support, financial and otherwise, of every resident of Peterborough. No one can tell when the insidious malady upon which the Association wages war will invade his own household.

THE GROWTH OF LIFE INSURANCE.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the Prudential Life Insurance Company shows clearly that the general public in Canada and the United States are more and more realising the value of investing in this form of saving. It is the only way in which the majority of the heads of families can provide for their dependents when they themselves are taken away. The Workmen's Compensation Act, beneficent as it may be, is limited in scope and falls far short of making full provision. That Act is inoperative unless the head of the family is killed by accident while on duty. The percentage of workmen who meet such a fate is comparatively small, and no man who relies entirely upon this form of State insurance has discharged his full duty in the matter.

More than $591,000,000 of paid-for life insurance was issued by the Prudential Insurance Company of America in 1916, and at the lowest expense-rate in Prudential history, according to the forty-first annual figures of the company, read by President Forest F. Dryden at the opening session of an international business conference of Prudential field representatives held in Newark, N. J This issue, Mr. Dryden explained, represents a gain in insurance in force of over $283,000,000.

President Dryden also stated that the Prudential now has 15,000,000 policies, representing a total of over $3,000,000,000 in force, continuing the Prudential, although one of the youngest, as the second company in the world in this respect. Since its organization in 1876 Mr. Dryden stated the Prudential, recently mutualized, has paid a total of over $428,000,000 to its policyholders, including more than $28,750,000 not called for by the policy contracts. These payments in 1916 alone totaled $47,278,000, covering an average of 550 claims every working day of the year.

Although the Prudential writes insurance only in the United States and Canada, it has paid 1,184 war claims for a total of $364,000.

It is the first time in thirteen years that the Prudential has called its men in from all over Canada and the United States for a conference with Home Office executives, and it is believed that he gathering, which lasted three days, will result in much good to the agency force.

UNION BANK OF CANADA.

THE ANNUAL STATEMENT of the Union Bank of Canada for the year ending November 30th, 1916, as published in another column, affords an exhibit of growth which is surprising even in these days of generally enlarged bank deposits. This great bank, with its headquarters in the West, and its splendid and old-fashioned system of branches throughout the East, has profited by the financial recovery of both sections of the community, and has secured far more than its proportionate share of the increased savings of the people of Canada. Its total assets, which a year ago amounted to about $90,663,000, are now in excess of $109,000,000, an increase of eighteen and a half millions. The non-interest-bearing deposits have increased by more than eight millians, and its interest-bearing deposits by nine and a half millions, while its note circulation also shows a substantial advance.

This increase is the more noteworthy because it follows a year which was also distinguished by marked advance. The total assets rose during 1915 from $81,561,000 to $90,663,070, or at the rate of 11 per cent., while the further advance in 1916 to $109,000,000 was at the rate of 20 per cent. The increase in two years amounts to $27,500,000.

Owing to the reduced demand for commercial accommodation and the paying off of loans by many business firms which have made large profits during the year, the item of current loans and discounts in Canada has not yet been restored to its pre-war dimensions, and the new funds at the disposal of the bank are largely invested in cash and liquid assets. The bank holds 56½ millions of these against total public liabilities of about one hundred millions, constituting an extremely strong reserve. No less than $14,445,700 of this reserve is in the form of "Canadian Municipal Securities and British, Foreign and Colonial Public Securities other than Canadian," almost the whole of which item consists of securities of the Imperial Government issued for the financing of munition business in Canada. This is a new departure for the Union Bank, whose holdings under this heading a year ago were only $395,000.

Profits for the year were about the same as last year, and were subject to the same deduction for contingent account. They sufficed for the maintenance of the usual dividend and bonus, together totalling 9 per cent. upon stock, and of the regultr appropriation for pension fund, together with a war tax on $50,000 and a donation of $5000 to the British Sailors' Relief Fund, with only a slight reduction ($13,816) in the balance carried forward.

This bank has maintained its dividend and bonus and met all charges for deprecation and contingencies throughout the war out of its annual profits, and has now a larger profit balance than at the end of 1913. The immense increase in the scope of its business during these years, under President Galt and General Manager G. H. Balfour, holds out the prospect of greatly increased earnings upon the return of normal conditions.

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION.

A MEMBER from a Western province has given notice that he will introduce into the House a resolution calling for the adoption of the proportional representation system in the elction of members of Parliament. Under such a system the minority, often but slightly less strong numerically than the majority, would not be left without representation.

There is little hope that the chtnge will ever be adopted if it is left to the members of the House. Any man elected to Parliament is apt to believe that the plan which resulted in his selection is the perfect one. A plebiscite on the question, however, would probably convince the lawmakers that the people as a rule favor some more equable system of choosing representatives, and that the mtjority are not always disposed to make away with all the spoils of victory.

BUSINESSLIKE SESSION.

THE GOVERNMENT preaches thrift in war-time on the part of the people. Members of Parliament can set the country an excellent example if they adopt the suggestion of Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P. for East Hastings, and apply themselves closely to the business before them, cutting out the Wednesday night holiday and holding sessions on Saturday. The present is no time for useless vacations, and the sooner the work of Parliament is transacted the better.

Mr. Northrup has not yet abandoned his idea of provincial divorce courts instead of leaving with Parliament the sole right to dissolve marriages. If the various provinces have the right to control their own matrimonial laws, it would seem only logical to extend them control in the matter of divorce.

No marriage can be dissolved in Canada now except on scriptural grounds. There is no objection to the divorce law except in the matter of expense. It is a privilege of which only the well-to-do can avail themselves. If provincial courts are established, it will be no easier to obtain a divorce, as no attempt to change conditions is contemplated. All that Mr. Northrup has in mind is further provincial autonomy and giving the poor an equal chance with the more opulent.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WHAT HAS BECOME of the old-fashioned Liberal who set his face steadily against a war-time election?

• • • •

THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION, like many another good institution, requires only to be known to be appreciated.

• • • •

BUT THERE ARE anti-suffragists as well as those in favor of equal franchise, who must have their little joke.

• • • •

THE PARTY that holds out for a coalition government is proceeding on the theory that half a loaf is better than no bread.

• • • •

IN SPITE OF one investigation after another and a multitude of official reports, the price of food keeps merrily on its way skyward.

• • • •

IT IS PLEASING to note that the opening of Parliament was regarded as something more serious than a mere d[illegible] parade or show of millinery.

• • • •

THE WOMEN of the Western provinces who can vote for members of the Legislature are surely intelligent enough to have a say in the choice of Federal representatives.

• • • •

W. F. MACLEAN, M.P., says that Ontario needs a new leader. If the matter were put squarely up to Mr. Maclean he would no doubt confess with becoming modesty that he has such a man in mind.

• • • •

AND WHILE OTHER municipalities are in the throes of a campaign for the Patriotic Fund, Peterborough city and county raises the money by taxation without any apparent effort, and the burden is equally borne.

• • • •

A FRENCH DIPLOMAT says that the people who suffer through war come out of it regenerated. Perhaps so, but it is quite possible to regenerate a nation without depriving so many of the inhabitants of legs and arms.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Draws the Line at Laurier.

(Mitchell Advocate.)

Our Liberal friends are deceiving themselves if they think Conservatives who may criticize the Government are going to vote for Laurier. A government that pursues a vigorous war policy is bound to receive criticism even from friends, but there is no Conservative who on polling day will take chances upon having a government with Laurier at its head.

Eyes Have They, But See Not.

(Portland Oregonian.)

Against the incontrovertible facts which point to universal service as the only safe course, pacifists have no better argument to advance than to term it conscription and militarism, thus seeking to cast opprobrium on it. Either they are mentally incapable of seeing or they refuse to recognise the distinction between compulsory service performed at the behest of an imperial master for purposes of conquest, and that which a democratic people voluntarily imposes on itself as a whole for purposes of defence.

A PROMISE WE CANNOT IGNORE

The responsibility that rests upon the stay-at-homes to maintain the efficiency of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is the responsibility of keeping faith with men and women who have trusted us—even without knowing us personally.

Every man enlisting for the front, whose family would be dependent on the Fund, went forward with a free mind because of his confidence n our promise to take care of his wife and bairns. If we have to mortgage our houses that promise must be kept.

As a matter of fact, no Canadian voice has been raised to suggest any other course, but there have been expressions of opinlin that the time has come for the Fund to be maintained by o'her than voluntary contributions. Whatever the future may develop, the Fund for 1917 must be raised on the voluntary principle. This being a fact, not a theory, there is but one thing to do—to go raise it.

Get the Men You Want in Quebec

(Bunks Falls Arrow.)

Whilst contending that Canada should send every man she can possibly spare to the fighting line, The Arrow must confess that it is getting tired reading the stuff some men are getting off about the "falling off of enlistments." Do these men really suppose that enlistments should keep up at the same ratio as they did during the first two years of the war? Have they forgotten that in Canada the total enlistments ran away up above four hundred thousand and that not far short of that number have actually qualified for the fighting line? Has not Ontario done its part nobly? Has not this North country been bled white of its young manhood until the scarcity of help is so great that in some sections it is a continuous struggle to get in enough firewood to keep people from freezing to death How are the hands of our boys at the front to be held up if necessary production falls off at home? If more men are wanted, go to Quebec Province—which has done next to nothing in this respect—and get them. Don't try to ride a willing horse to death. Go to Quebec, wher a hundred thousand eligible men can easily be spared, and get your men. Never mind Jack Godfrey and those other fellows who are trying to soothe the "lacerated" feelings of the bilingualists by conciliation and other milk and water subterfeges—drawing a red herring across the redder trail of war. Get the men you want in Quebec.

SOME THOUGHTS ON MARRIAGE

(Chicago News.)

In a kindly endeavor to give human nature all the credit that may be coming to it, a reader of the Daily News lays down the hypothesis that many lovely girls marry worthless men and many substantial men marry frivolous women because the lovely girls and the substantial men involved are deceived by the parties of the second part into believing that the latter have all the virtues of the first part.

This hypothesis is flattering to the lovely girls and the substantial men in question, but, one fears, it will not stand careful investigation. It assumes that lovely girls and substantial men marry, whereas experience goes to show that people marry them—a vital distinction. Perfectly good people, by the very nature of their goodness, are often negative, inert. Not wishing to do wrong in a naughty world, they refrain from doing. No such scruples affect the busy self-seekers. Being positive forces, they use the virtuous as pawns in their game of self-advancement.

What makes so many perfectly worthy people peculiarly susceptible to the fascinations of the wicked is that these worthy ones are bored by their lives of negative virtue and unutterably weary of associating with one another. They crave a little excitement, and if the hope is held out that they may snatch a brand from the burning, the double appeal to egotism and the normal desire for a colorful life is well nigh irresistible.

The hypothesis is, perhaps, quite as near the facts as is the other hypothesis advanced by the charitable-minded reader of the Daily News. It also, however, is more fanciful than sound. Some innocent bystander—if there be an innocent bystander—or some impartial student of human nature may be moved to declare that marriage is never by design but always by accident. In American marriages, particularly, reason too commonly plays no part. Reason is frequently thought sordid and unworthy to accompany the tender and uplifting passion which serves to maintain our diverce lawyers in the luxurious manner to which they have been accustomed.

There are, of course, many fortunate marriages which might be explained either as "happy accidents" or as results of a carefully prepared system and a cautiously conducted campaign. One is entitled to take one's choice of these explanations, since one never can quite tell about such things.

PETES ARE PUT OUT OF DISTRICT FIGHT BY OSHAWA IN OVERTIME

Locals by Great Work Tied Count of Regular Play.

FINAL SCORE 8-7

Oshawa Juniors spilled things for fair last night. After the Petes by a herculean effort had landed on what appeared to be Easy Street, the visitors took the local youngsters round a dark corner and applied the knockout. It was 8 to 7 after ten minutes of extra play, the score at the end of the regulation sixty minutes standing 7 to 7. Oshawa look the logical winners of the district as they should easily dispose of Bowmanville, and land the honors without a defat.

It was a thrilling game of hockey, the big excitement being produced in the closing minutes of the third period, when the Petes by a concerted attack on the enemy nets, succeeded in overcoming a two goal lead held by Oshawa, the game ending a tie. And while the locals scored only two counters they might have got a dozen had somebody kidnapped the visitors' goaler, for it was he, after all, who staved off defeat. He handled shots from close in and afar in a manner that earned him a berth among the real good ones. The Petes had Manager Bradley's lads shoved into the two corners and they were playing with all the dash that was in them. Shot after shot was directed at Smith, but he stoppel all but two, thus keeping his team mates on the sunny side of possible victory.

In the first five minutes of the overtime, neither team managed to score. The Petes had continued their aggressive play but their eqorts were fruitless. All was going well in the second five minutes until Montgomery pulled off a Laura Jean Libbey on the neck of the visitors' centre man. The embrace so confused Flintoff that he went down in a bundle and Montgomery was chased from the game. With a minute to play, the Petes held on momentarily and then the puck travelled north, Rowden got the last pass and shot the rubber into the netting. A second later the fateful gong sounded and the Petes were trounced.

Petes Scored First

All the way from start to finish it was a great game. The Petes got into the scoring first, when Cherrett took a nice pass from McIntyre, who had rushed, and scored in three minutes. Then Oshawa found the nets. McIntyre contributed another rush that netted the Petes' third goal, Cherrett taking he rubber and scoring. Bartley made it 3 to 1 on a nifty shot and the fans were looking for the locals to land a safe lead. But it was not to be. Oshawa scored two in a row on shots by their wing men and the visitors' right winger put his team ahead on another shot. McFee accidentally kicked the next goal in for the visitors but got it back shortly afterwards by accepting a pass from Graham. The period ended with the visitors maintaining their one goal lead.

The second period was filled with classy hockey but both teams went scoreless.

Bartley Evened Up

After seven minutes' play in the third period, Bartley put the Petes on even terms and they looked to have a fighting chance at holding the visitors. The fans had long since become aware that the opposition were not to be trifled with and were calling upon the Petes to go their hardest. But the Oshawa rover took the next two counters and the scenery was changed. About the same time the locals broke into an attack that fairly glued the Bradley lads to their end of the ice. The visitors were played to a standstill and it was only the exceptionally good work of their netman that kept the Petes from running up a high score. Two was their best, however, and the period ended with the score tied.

The teams:—

Peterborough.—Goal, Murray; defence, McIntyre and Montgomery; rover, Graham; centre, Cherrett; wings, McFee and Bartley.

Oshawa.—Goal, Smith; defence, Osborne and Feagan, rover, Rowden; centre, Flintoff; wings, Venini and Swynyard.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limstone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

THE DAILY REVIEW

Doing Our Bit

All of us cannot fight. All of us—men, women and children—can do something towards winning the war.

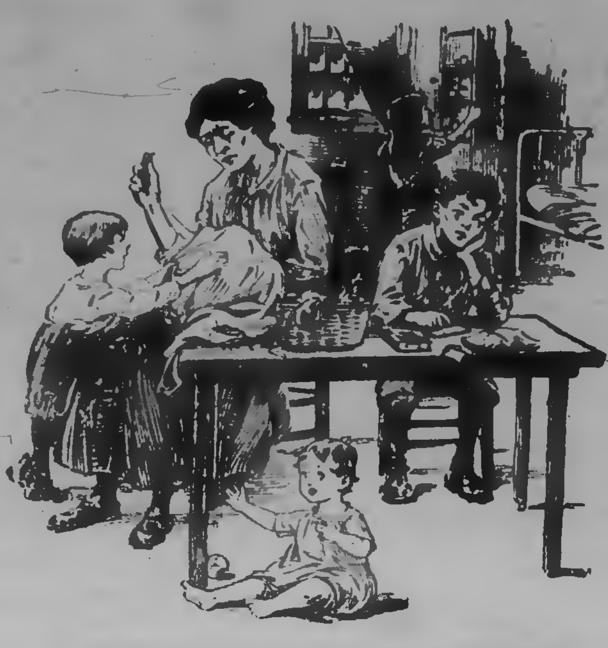
Are we seeking that "something," or are we evading it? Are we looking for the "bit" we should do, or trying to forget it?

Take the Canadian Patriotic Fund. It has been created to care for the families of our soldiers in those cases—and those only—where need exists. Experience has shown that this means in two families out of three. Up to December 1, 1916, the people of Canada have given $16,500,000 to the Fund.

That is generous giving, isn't it? But the country is still at war; our armies are still growing; the soldiers' families are still in need; the Fund must still be maintained. And what do we find? In every part of the country men crying that they have given enough to the Fund—that Government should now take the burden.

Given enough! When the Canadian lad in the trenches is dead-tired, ready to drop in his tracks, does he chuck his job, declare he has given enough, and call on Government to get another man? Given enough! Is there a man in Canada has given enough if women and children are in need while he, the stay-at-home, has a dollar to spare?

No! This Fund, above all funds, has a claim on every citizen who is not himself a pauper. The fact that Government has not assumed responsibility for it is the fact that makes every man responsible for it—even if he thinks the Fund should be maintained by Government moneys.



Are YOU helping to insure this home against need?

Government Should Not Control, Because—

1. Government would have to treat all alike. The Fund helps only those in need. If Government paid the families of each soldier the average sum paid by the Fund the extra burden on the country would be between eight and nine million dollars yearly.

2. By paying the average sum those families in districts where cost of living is low would receive more than they need; those in high-cost areas would be paid too little.

3. Costs of administration would be enormously increased. This work is now done, for the most part, by willing workers without cost. Of every hundred dollars subscribed, Ninety-nine Dollars and Forty-six Cents go to the families! Never was a voluntary fund so economically administered.

4. The work would suffer. There would be no more of the friendly, almost paternal, relation now existing between the administrators of the Fund and the families. Government works automatically. The Fund's visitors are friends in need, therefore friends indeed.

5. Taxation would be unequal, for some counties and some provinces are already taxing their people for this Fund. Are they to be taxed again by the Federal authority?

6. The richer classes would be relieved of work they are cheerfully doing. They are now bearing, and bearing because they have the financial power and the patriotic willingness, the larger share of the burden.

7. The Fund blesses him that gives. It is a vehicle for public spirit—a channel for patriotic endeavor. The work of administering it has uncovered unknown reservoirs of unselfishness and sacrifice. Men and women have thrown themselves into this work because they found in it the "bit" for which they looked—their contribution to winning the war. Why stay their hand and stifle their enthusiasm?

8. Last, but not least: Government control means raising the money by selling Government bonds. Government bonds mean future taxation. And that means that the returning soldiers will pay, through long years, a large share of the cost of caring for their families—a cost we, the stay-at-homes, pledged ourselves to bear.

Men and women of Ontario: Bend your backs once again to this burden of

The Canadian Patriotic Fund

If you live in the rural districts see to it that your county councils make grants worthy of the counties and of the cause. If in the towns, start campaigns for individual subscriptions. And personally, taxed or not taxed, give as you can afford, give as your conscience tells you is your duty, your war-time part, in this day of national sacrifice.

Ontario will be asked in January to assure the Canadian Patriotic Fund that it can depend on having six million dollars in 1917 for the families of Ontario's soldiers.

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

Four million of these dollars must be secured from individual subscriptions. If there is no Branch of the Fund in your town or county send your subscription direct to the Head office, Canadian Patriotic Fund, Vittoria street, Ottawa.

FACTS AND FIGURES IN SUPPORT OF MUNICIPAL BATHING BEACHES HERE

Suggest Bathing Centres at Inverlea Park and on Little Lake With Ample Building at Each Point.

A meeting of a special committee of the Playgrounds Association to consider better public bathing facilities in Peterborough met in the Y.M.C.A. rooms Friday evening, every member being present.

This committee is taking the leadership in securing data and information to present to the City Council at its first meeting the first Monday in February. Petitions listed that will be presented to the Council are made on behalf of ten organizations, also a large number of individual letters, and a general citizens' petition prepared by Mr. Ketcheson. There seems to be no doubt but that the City Council will take favorable action regarding providing suitable public bathing centres and houses, as there has not been any public movement in the past better supported than the appeal to Council to solve the bathing problem.

The Playgrounds Committee yesterday went thoroughly into the problem and were of the opinion that if two bathing centres were arranged, one at Inverlea Park and the other at a convenient point on Little Lake, these centres properly supervised, the bathing problem would be largely solved. Members of the committee who investigated the needs last summer reported that during the heated period, more than 1,500 boys and girls and adults were found bathing in the Otonabee daily at ten different points. Should the City Council arrange and approve two bathing centres, shutting off promiscuous bathing at other points, provision would have to be made to accommodate 500 bathers daily at each of these points.

Plan of Building

A plan of a building was considered that seemed to be adapted to accommodate the crowd likely to result on appointment of two bathing centres and the consequent concentration of bathing. The building considered adequate is 20x80 feet in size and would contain a public dressing room for boys and men, 14x40 feet in size; also a public dressing room for girls and women, 14x32 feet in size, a caretaker's room 8x20 and eighteen private dressings rooms 4x6 feet in size. The private dressing rooms would be provided with locks and seats and the public dressing rooms with benches and all necessary equipment, the building itself to be nicely painted on the outside and the floor inside painted three coats and to be laid to allow drainage from wet bathing suits.

Accommodate 125 People

A building like the one described would accommodate at least 125 people comfortably at one time. That this building is none too large may be seen by the statement that more than 125 persons are often

A WONDERFUL YEAR!

To the Policy-holding Owners of the Prudential Insurance Company of America :

During 1916 your Company issued OVER FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY-ONE AND ONE-HALF MILLION DOLLARS of paid-for life insurance at the lowest expense-rate in your Company's history. This is the largest year's business ever paid for by the Prudential. The gain in insurance in force was $283,000,000.

Although your Company is but forty-one years old, you are now the holders of 15,000,000 policies, representing a total insurance in force of over THREE BILLION DOLLARS.

Since your Company was organized, it has paid to its policyholders the great sum of $428,000,000, including more than $28,750,000 not called for in any way by the policy contracts. The 1916 payments to policyholders were over $47,278,000.

This wonderful growth and these remarkable figures reflect anew the confidence the insuring public has in The Prudential, and are a re-indorsement of its aims, its achievements and its service.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS

T. M. Dodds, Bridgeburg, has been appointed principal of Barker street public school, Niagara Falls.

Niagara township fruit growers voted down a resolution that the government be asked to remove the duty on fresh fruits and vegetables in winter months, and to prohibit imports during the summer months.

seen in the water at one time at Inverlea Park alone. Last summer 137 were counted in the water at Vermont Marble Works at one time; 80 people were found swimming at 'The Jacks" at the foot of Dublin St. at one time; and at each of a number of other points there were from 50 to 100 boys and girls observed in the water at one time. Any person who is at all observant surely has been convinced before this that it is unfair to the young people of the community that there are no public dressing places, supervision, or plan for safeguarding the swimming provided for the large number of bathers along the Otonabee.

The Cost

To solve the bathing problem and to arrange two bathing centres cannot be accomplished without some expense. Two buildings like the above located at each end of the city, together with their equipment would likely cost $1400 and an additional $100 should be expended in cleaning the beaches and providing some life saving apparatus. The caretakers could probably be secured at $35 per month and the expense of two caretakers for the season would likely be $250. The Playgrounds Association will have in the city this year four expert male and female supervisors who could be utilized for part of the time in teaching swimming. Sergt. Kidd of the city police force and a man from the fire department could likely be used ~~for this same purpose~~. The salaries of the playgrounds supervisors should be met in part by receipts from bathing houses if their services are to be used as swimming instructors.

Ask Council for $2,000

It is thought, however that to give the movment a good start, the Council should give an appropriation of at least $2,000 to cover the expense of the buildings, equipment, and making some provision for the supervision. If the buildings mentioned are obtained, the plan would be to follow the same methods employed in other cities by collecting a small rental for the use of the private dressing rooms, bathing suits and towels. It is thought that several hundred dollars per season would be obtained from these sources, which would go a long way towards paying the expense of the supervisors.

It is the opinion of the leading citizens who are interested in the project that when the Council take up the matter of public bathing seriously, that proper provisions must be made; no half way steps would be advisable. The buildings must be attractive in appearance and in every way adapted to the purpose for which they are intended. It would be the greatest folly to put up any kind of structures unless they could be properly supervised, for the effort is to guard the morals and safety of the young people in every possible way.

Bandsman Allan Clarke of the 247th Bn. is renewing acquaintances in the village.

The Lakefield choral class held their monthly social evening Monday, Jan. 8th. The meeting was spent in a short practice, after which games were played and refreshments served.

Miss Melissa Alford is spending a few weeks in Lindsay the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. E. Bogue.

Mr. O. A. Langley has returned from Montreal.

The members of the Lakefield choral class drove to Warsaw on Friday, Jan. 12th, to take part in the concert given by the Warsaw choral class.

The many friends of Mrs. A. G. Lawless sympathize with her in the loss of her brother, Pte. Hugh E. Bromley, who was killed in action on Nov. 12th. Pte. Bromley was born near Shawville on Feb. 28th, 1882. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bromley, of Clarendon. Pte. Bromley enlisted with the 90th Winnipeg Rifles, 8th Bn., 1st Can. Contingent.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Gillis of Fenelon Falls spent a few days in the village the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Northey.

You will be warmly welcomed at the Lakefield skating rink. Manager Morin looks after the comfort of his patrons in good shape.

Despite the stormy weather on Jan. 19th, a load of young people of Peterborough drove to the village to skate, after which they had an oyster supper at Alford's restaurant.

Mr. Wilbert Webster has commenced his ice-cutting on the Strickland bay and will be able to supply all his customers.

Owing to the storm and bad roads Mr. Jos. McKee had to postpone his sale until Jan. 23rd.

Mrs. H. Ball and Miss Pearl Ball are visiting in Norwood.

Although the day was stormy and the roads bad, Mr. Lackie Nolan had a very successful sale. Mr. Nolan is one of Douro's oldest residents, he having reached the age of 93. Mr. Nolan enjoys the best of health.

The box and weight social at Brailey's school house last night was a success from every standpoint, notwithstanding the bad roads. A nice crowd went from the city, and a sleighload from Fraserville were on hand to help make the evening a success. The program was enjoyed by all, and about $12 was realized to help the school.

CANADA'S FLAG MADE BY 31 S.S. MEMBERS

SUCCESSFUL ANNIVERSARY CONCERT AT GEORGE STREET CHURCH.

The Sunday School anniversary concert held at George Street Church last night was pronounced an outstanding success both from the point of merit of the program and the attendance. The presentation of Making Canada's Flag by 31 members of the Sunday School was the feature of the evening and executed in an admirable manner, reflecting credit on the performers and their instructors, Mr. J. H. Renwick and Mr. C. Parsons.

Rev. E. A. Pearson, a former pastor of the church, was accorded a very cordial welcome and he gave a short address. Veterans of 1866 and South Africa also spoke.

The anniversary will be continued on Sunday, when Rev. Mr. Pearson will preach morning and evening.

WASH WITH WARM MILK

Costly Beauty Aid of Nero's Wife Still Recommended

A woman writes: In Quo Vadis, there is a passage describing the driving of a flock of milk goats from Rome to a seashore summer palace of the Roman Emperor Nero. Poppæa, his wife, bathed daily in goat's milk; her cream-white skin, her wonderful complexion, her delicate beauty, it was alleged, came from this daily bath. Histories and researches into the lives of the wealthy men and women of those days, show an almost unimaginable luxury and a love of beauty.

We of to-day with our scientifically prepared creams and perfumes, have not yet attained the splendor of those we look upon as almost barbarians. They went through the most elaborate bathing process daily, and the women bathed in rich milk. No doubt it was fattening. Some of the oils and fats that all good milk contains must have been absorbed by the skin. The acids also bleached and gave that lovely milky tint so much desired by womanhood all these centuries. Indeed, such baths are beautifying, if expensive.

A pint of milk would make a very good face wash. A pint of buttermilk in a basin, can be used several times to bathe the face, and it will bleach the skin and, often remove freckles. Pure sweet milk should also help make the skin soft and white. Every woman who can afford it, will find a daily wash with warm milk extremely beneficial.

Mountain Blocks Wireless

Wireless operators on board vessels stationed west of Cape Otway, at the southern point of Australia, have observed repeatedly that it was impossible to communicate with vessels situated in the port of Melbourne. This is supposed to be due to the fact that the mountain, which forms the cape, contains large quantities of minerals, which absorb the electric waves.

Lots of Coal in Chile

The Chilean government is devoting much attention to developing the coal mines of that country, some of which extend three miles under the ocean.

If every man could have his own way, how quickly others would get out of it.

Edna Walton as "Judy" and Albert Roscoe as "Jarvis Pendleton" in "Daddy Long Legs."

"Daddy Long Legs," the one big dramatic success of this and last season, will be presented here for the second time at the Grand Opera House on Saturday, January 27th, by Henry Miller's special company. The play, which was written by Jean Webster, a niece of the late Mark Twain, is a dramatization of the famous Daddy Long-Legs letters which were published as a serial story by one of the big magazines three years ago, and which subsequently came out in book form and proved a fabulously successful "best seller." The comedy sets forth a fascinating love story in which tender sentiment is delightfully blended with bubbling, whimsical humor. Its central characters are a very quaint little Cinderella and a decidedly up-to-date Prince Charming, and the love story in which they figure becomes a veritable idyl of buoyant youth.

THE MIRACLE MAN

Who Achieved His Greatest Marvel in the Perfect Re-Creation of Music

THE NEW EDISON is not a "talking machine." It does what no talking machine can do; what no talking machine manufacturer would dare attempt to do.

The New Edison has been compared in public, before 300,000 music lovers, with such great artists as Marie Rappold, Anna Case, Julia Heinrich, Alice Verlet, Christine Miller, Arthur Middleton and Thomas Chalmers, (as well as a dozen others). Thus it was proven, beyond all question, that the living voices of these great artists cannot be detected from the New Edison's Re-Creation of them. Remember that the artists stood beside the New Edison and sang in direct comparison with it, and that the audiences could not distinguish the artists' voices from the New Edison's Re-Creation of those same voices.

The NEW EDISON

accomplishes Mr. Edison's ambition to re-create all forms of music with such literal perfection that the original cannot be told from the Re-Creation.

COME TO OUR STORE THIS WEEK

We want you to hear the re-created voices of Zenatello and Rappold, and the masterly bowing of Spalding and Flesch.

REPORT OF THE AUDITORS TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE UNION BANK OF CANADA.

In accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, we report to the Shareholders as follows:—

We have audited the above Balance Sheet with the books and vouchers at Head Office and with the certified returns from the branches.

We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

In addition to our verification at the 30th November, we have, during the year, checked the cash and verified the securities representing the investments of the Bank at its chief office and principal branches and found them to be in agreement with the entries in the books of the Bank relating thereto.

In our opinion the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the affairs of the Bank, according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

We have not yet reached a point when it would be wise to try to envisage what will happen in the near future, but that need not stop us from taking stock of where we stand—what have been the effects of the past two and a half years of warfare—on Canadian banks in general, and on the Union Bank in particular. The outstanding fact, of course, is the unshaken solvency of our institutions—then comes the remarkable increase in deposits—a pleasing feature of which is the growth of savings accounts, showing that the rank and file of our people are alive to the importance of spending less than they are earning.

Our banks have followed the wise course of carrying ample cash reserves, and of keeping themselves in a liquid position to enable them to meet any possible contingency, and also to do their part in financing the war expenditure of the Government. So far they have taken many millions of British and Canadian loans, and are prepared, and able to take further large amounts as required. It is splendid evidence of the soundness of our banking system and no less of the ability with which our banks have been handled during these times so full of uncertainty, anxiety and peril.

And now to come to our own case. The General Manager will give you his analysis of our statement, and will refer more particularly to the financial aspects. The Union Bank is now in its 52nd year. Starting in Quebec with a small capital, it had a hard road to travel until its management awoke to the value of the great field for development which was opening up in the Northwest prairies. Seizing upon this opportunity which offered itself in the early eighties the Union Bank proceeded to establish itself throughout the West, and by following a wise and liberal policy towards its clients has reached a position of strength and influence that was beyond the dreams of any of us a few years ago.

The Shareholders should not be disappointed that our earnings have not exceeded those of last year, but this is entirely due to our sound policy of maintaining a strong and liquid position. This we know will meet with your entire approval. Your Directors have resolutely refused to countenance speculation, but they have continued the policy of assisting the Bank's clients in the legitimate expansion of their business, and have always had before them the importance of encouraging production.

London, England.

Our London Office continues to show satisfactory progress. We have been established there for five years and the gratifying increase in our business is due entirely to the wise and able advice and attention of our Advisory Committee, Major J. Leigh Wood, C.M.G., Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Sidney Peel, and Mr. F. W. Ashe.

With the rapid growth of our resources has come the need of improving our facilities for handling the produce of the country, and, to this end, it is gratifying to your Board of Directors to be able to announce today that we shall in the near future, open an agency in the City of New York. Our Foreign Exchange Department has increased its business in a satisfactory manner during the past year, and the contemplated arrangement will better enable us to handle the rapidly increasing business between London, the United States, and Canada.

United States.

Following our London plan, we shall have an Advisory Committee for this bank at New York, and I am happy to inform you that Mr. Stuyvesant Fish, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mr. Gilbert G. Thorne have consented to act upon that Committee. It is unnecessary for me to add anything further, as the names of these gentlemen are well known in Canada, the United States, and abroad, and we are indeed fortunate to have worked out a programme for the future which carries with it so much promise.

We are greatly pleased to report the completion of arrangements whereby the Bank is assured of the able services of the well known firm of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, counsellors-at-law of the City of New York.

We intend to feature a statistical department in New York, through which all information concerning Canada can be readily obtained by our friends in the United States, and through which we expect to be able to quickly furnish such information as may be desired by our home friends in regard to United States affairs.

Agriculture.

Conditions generally throughout the country are far more satisfactory than could have been foreseen. The remarkable harvest of 1915 gave freights to our railroads, a market to our manufacturers and merchants, employment to our people, and showed the Empire what Canada is capable of doing towards supplying food for the world.

Last year, the harvest was not so abundant but the prices realized were so high that never in the history of Canada were our farmers, speaking generally, in such good shape financially. Every farmer has it now within his power to do a real service to the cause by bending his energies towards increasing his production of foodstuffs, which are so urgently needed by the world.

I shall not go into details of conditions in the various provinces as the reports of our superintendents will appear in our annual book form. These reports have been most ably prepared and are well worth reading.

I must not conclude these brief remarks without an urgent appeal to every one who may hear or read them. We must win the war. We cannot all fight but we can all serve the cause in one way or another. We can produce and we can economize. Remember that everything we import has to be paid for—many luxuries are still brought in which we could perfectly well do without, and each one of them makes the balance of trade against Canada so much the greater. Production, whether of foodstuffs or of munitions, intelligent economy, efficient management—these need not be empty phrases—they can and should be put into effect at once, not a moment should be lost. There are two questions which every man in Canada should ask himself—what can I do? and what have I done for my country to-day?

I have an announcement to make that, I am sure, you will be sorry to hear. Mr. Balfour has decided to retire from the position of General Manager after forty-seven years of service—no one should find fault with his decision to take a well-earned rest. He has filled, in succession, every post in the Bank, from that of junior clerk to general manager, and has filled that position during the past thirteen years, which have, without question, been the most prosperous in the history of the Bank. We all feel that the remarkable progress of the institution is, in no small measure, due to the ability and well balanced administration of Mr. Balfour. To his personality is also due the fine esprit de corps which pervades this institution at the present time. The story of his career should be a stimulating one to every officer in the service as it shows what possibilities are before every able, energetic young man if he does his work faithfully and with a single eye to the welfare of the institution. During the many years I have known Mr. Balfour he has been, uniformly, the same courteous and high-minded gentleman. We all have a sincere affection for him and it would be a real misfortune were we to lose him but I am glad to say that he has agreed to join the Board and we shall therefore retain the benefit of his wisdom and experience. You will be asked today to approve of a resolution increasing the Board of Directors of this Bank from 15 to 16 in order that Mr. Balfour may immediately take his seat on the Board.

Your Directors have decided to appoint Mr. Harold B. Shaw, General Manager. He has been in the Bank's service for twenty-six years, has been Assistant General Manager for the past eight years, and previous to that, filled the position of Superintendent of our western business for eight years. Mr. Shaw is a well trained, conservative and able banker, full of energy, and devoted to the best interests of the Bank. Your Directors have watched his career closely and are satisfied that he will fill his new position with success. The friends of the Bank may rest easy in their minds knowing that the policy of the Bank will be unchanged, and that Mr. Shaw will carry on the traditions of the Bank, which may be summed up as "service and security."

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS.

In presenting the 52nd Annual Statement of the Bank to the Shareholders, there are but few changes in the balance sheet, in your hands, which require explanations or comment. Owing to the exceptionally profitable harvest of 1915, the balance of trade with Great Britain being greatly in favor of Canada, the tremendous expenditures of money in this country for war purposes; and the abnormally high prices obtained for an average crop in 1916, assisted by economy—money has been abundant and general trade conditions satisfactory.

Prosperity in Canada has been clearly demonstrated by the ease with which money has been obtained by the Federal Government for war purchases, and the steadily increasing bank deposits.

Notwithstanding the fact that less anxiety prevailed than in 1915, the same conservative policy has been followed during 1916, owing to their being, as yet, no indications as to when the war may end. What effect the cessation of hostilities may have on business generally, owing to war contracts being summarily discontinued, is a question difficult to answer, but husbanding resources would seem to be the only wise policy to adopt and so long as the war continues there is no other prudent course to follow.

Profits.

The net profits for the year amounted to $651,183.67, as against $659,688.01 in 1915, or $8,504.34 less, being 13.02 per cent. on paid-up capital; a result with which we were well satisfied, having in mind the fact that exceptionally ample provision for all bad and doubtful paper had been made before closing our books, and to the Bank maintaining very strong cash reserves throughout the year. These profits have been disposed of as follows: dividend of 8% and bonus of 1% paid to shareholders, $450,000; War Tax on note circulation, $50,000; British Sailors Relief Fund, $5,000; Contingent Account, $150,000 and the usual contribution to the Officers Pension Fund of $10,000, leaving $93,160.42 to be carried on to the new Profit and Loss Account as against $106,976.75 brought forward from last year.

With regard to setting aside $150,000 to a Contingent Account, this is purely a precautionary measure which we deem wise owing to fluctuations taking place from time to time in the valuation of securities held by the Bank.

Deposits.

The deposits amount to $89,267,000 against $72,685,000 in 1915, an appreciable increase of $16,582,000, of which $7,000,000 is in non-interest bearing and $9,500,000 in interest-bearing deposits.

Reserves.

The percentage of quick assets to liabilities to the public has increased to 56.65% from 47.96% last year and 36.27% in 1914. The wisdom of maintaining strong liquid reserves, will, I am sure, be commended.

Circulation.

Although the crop was not moved out nearly as freely the past season as it was in 1915, notes of the Bank in circulation were in excess about $1,200,000, bearing evidence of greater business activity throughout the country.

The Dominion Government war tax on our circulation was $50,000.

Total Assets.

The assets of the Bank have passed the century mark, being $100,040,228, an increase of $13,377,165, over 1915 when they amounted to $86,663,063.

Dominion and Provincial Government Securities.

Our holdings in these securities have increased $1,415,000, made up entirely of Canadian War Loan issues.

Canadian Municipal Securities, and British, Foreign and Colonial Public Securities Other Than Canadian.

Since the last statement under review we have purchased $14,000,000 of British Treasury Bills, which accounts for the large increase in securities under the above heading.

Call and Short Loans, Elsewhere Than in Canada.

These loans are higher by $4,000,000 than in 1915, and are secured by British Treasury Bills, in London.

Branches.

Seven branches have been opened during the year, viz: Province of Alberta—Clairmont, Etzikom, Cluny. Province of Saskatchewan—Bulyea, Hazenmore, Prussia, Hatton; and fifteen branches have been closed, as they were not being operated at a profit, viz: Province of Ontario—Geneva and Welland streets, St. Catharines; Rockland, Cayuga. In Province of Quebec—St. Catherine and St. Christophe streets, Montreal; Jonquieres. In Province of Alberta—Seven Persons. In Province of British Columbia—Vancouver Heights, Granville and Robson streets, Vancouver; City Heights, Vancouver; Enderby, Prince George, Squamish. In Province of Manitoba—Clearwater (Sub. to Crystal City), Sargent and Arlington streets, Winnipeg. In Province of Saskatchewan—Verigin.

Staff.

We have a male staff of 1218 and female, 365, or a total of 1,583, whose duties are greatly increased, and are being cheerfully performed, owing to so many others having volunteered for overseas duties. The steadily increasing cost of living is a very important factor with all persons on salaries and the Bank has endeavored to lessen the burden as much as possible in its periodical adjustment of salaries.

658 members of the staff have enlisted for overseas active service. Of these we regret to announce 43 have been killed, 28 wounded and 3 are missing, leaving 584 still in the field. To the sorrowing relatives our heartfelt sympathy is extended.

This is the last occasion on which I shall have the pleasure of addressing you as General Manager of the Bank, as I am relinquishing executive duties on the 31st instant after nearly forty-seven years of active service, the last thirteen and a half of which I have been General Manager.

The Bank has shared to a very appreciable extent in the prosperity of the country during this latter period, and I am sure the following figures in this connection will be read with much interest

	1903	1916
Capital Stock	$ 2,400,000	$ 5,000,000

It is needless to point out that such marked success could not have been achieved without the active co-operation and loyal support of a capable staff of officers, who have, at all times, devoted their best energies to furthering the interests of the institution they served. I desire to take this opportunity of expressing to them, one and all, my very great appreciation of their valuable assistance.

After seeing the progress of the Bank from 1870, when its operations were very restricted, and it had only three branches, to its present position of one of the important financial institutions of the country, I am retiring with mixed feelings of pride and regret, pride at the enviable position occupied by the Bank, and regret at the severance of such long-standing relations always made pleasant and congenial by the ready assistance of Directors, Executive and Staff.

I esteem it a great honor to be invited to join the Board of Directors of the Bank, and it will be a pleasure and satisfaction to me, if elected by the Shareholders, to retain my connection with the Bank in that capacity. I trust, too, that my intimate knowledge of affairs of the institution may prove of some assistance in an advisory capacity as a Director.

The President has been good enough to refer to my services and retirement in very kind and appreciative words. My relations with the Presidents, Vice-Presidents and Directors with whom I have been associated have, at all times, been very pleasant, and their advice most helpful. I desire to express my very great appreciation of and thanks for the kindly manner in which Mr. Galt has alluded to my resignation.

ASSISTANT GENERAL MANAGER'S REMARKS.

I desire to thank you for the kind words with which you and the Directors have introduced me to the public.

I wish to assure you Sir, also the Directors and Shareholders of the Bank, that I shall assume my new position with a deep sense of its responsibilities.

I should like to add my testimony to the splendid example which has been set by Mr. Balfour to every member of the Staff, and to express our regret at losing him in an official capacity at the end of this month. It is with the greatest of satisfaction that we have heard that he is to join the Board—for we know that we shall still keep him as a friend and advisor.

I shall do my utmost to live up to the best traditions of the Bank and to carry on the wise policy of my predecessors.

REMARKS OF MR. F. E. KENASTON OF MINNEAPOLIS.

The important change taking place to-day in the general management of the Bank whereby Mr. G. H. Balfour is resigning as General Manager after forty-seven years of service, and the appointment of Mr. H. B. Shaw, who has so well served the Bank for a number of years as Assistant General Manager, to full Managership has impressed me very strongly. When you take into account, Gentlemen, forty-seven of the best years of a man's life, devoted in the most loyal and faithful manner to the upbuilding of a business institution, and when advancing years bring him to reason with himself that it is better to shift the burden of responsibility on to younger shoulders and enjoy a well-earned rest after so many years of arduous work, we must conclude that the severing of the ties which bind men together in business life is a serious thing. I wish to endorse fully all of the words of eulogy which the preceding speakers have used in connection with Mr. Balfour's long years of service, and his decision to now resign the burden of General Managership of the Bank, and to congratulate the Bank, at the same time, that he is to be made a Member of its Board of Directors, so that the vast fund of information and detail knowledge possessed by him of the Bank's business will not be lost to the institution.

Mr. H. B. Shaw, who is now to be the General Manager of the Bank, is too well known to you all to need any words of introduction from me. He has been connected with the Bank, in one position or another, during all of his working life, and, for many years, has been Assistant General Manager. His well known efficiency and great ability as a banker is sufficient warrant to us all that the affairs of the institution will be in good hands.

The present business conditions brought on by the great war, have made New York City a great financial centre and in order to avail itself of its proper share of the Empire's financing at the present time, and to assume its share of solving the financial problems which are bound to ensue at the close of the war, the Union Bank has deemed it wise to establish an agency in New York City.

The Officers of the Bank, in their negotiations for suitable connections there, have been most extraordinarily fortunate in securing the services of Messrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Gilbert G. Thorne, as Members of an Advisory Committee. These gentlemen are so well known everywhere on this continent that it seems superfluous to say a word in their praise, but I cannot pass by the opportunity of saying that the names of these gentlemen, connected with any business institution or enterprise, is an absolute guarantee of conservatism, integrity and efficient management, and is an endorsement of the Union Bank itself, not only in New York City, but in the Dominion of Canada as well—a fact in which we, as Stockholders, should take great pride. In summing up the situation, gentlemen, I am free to say that the Union Bank is going into New York City with its agency under the most favorable auspices possible.

On the 26th of August last, the Directors of the Union Bank, accompanied by a few invited guests, began a trip of 18 days of inspection of Western Canada with reference to business conditions and prospects generally, and specifically, with reference to its own branches extending throughout the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

During this trip we met 192 Branch Managers, with whom the Directors discussed very freely their respective local conditions and prospects. The meeting of these Branch Managers, (most of them young, vigorous, intelligent men) to some of us was a revelation. We found them, uniformly, loyal and enthusiastic workers for the good of the Union Bank, well advised as to their own local conditions, and what was required for the betterment of these conditions as respects mixed farming. The paying of greater attention to stock raising thereby minimizing the risk with which a business or a community constantly stands in peril, by reason of depending upon one crop only.

We saw some very wonderful agricultural development at different points, and a very noticeable appearance of thrift and prosperity in the purely agricultural districts among the farmers. We also found a very satisfactory condition prevailing in the larger towns and cities of the West with regard to commercial affairs, which seem to have been reduced to dealings in staple articles and necessities of life, rather than the luxuries. In these lines there was reported a very satisfactory volume of business. We also found an enormous amount of liquidation of indebtedness, particularly among the farmers, by reason of the exceptionally large crops of grain, with good prices, during the years 1915 and 1916.

The trip was very interesting to many of the Directors by reason of the passing through of so much new and hitherto, to them, unknown territory, and particularly the Peace River country, which seemed to open up an enormous field for settlement at a later date. The Peace River country is now being invaded by the iron trail under the vigorous auspices of Mr. J. D. McArthur, who has extended the rails of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway to Peace River Crossing, and it is to be hoped that he will receive a full measure of reward for the courage he has displayed in this undertaking, and in this connection, it is only proper to state our hearty appreciation to Mr. McArthur for the many courtesies received at his hands during the progress of this trip.

Messrs. T. Harry Webb, C.A., E. S. Read, C.A., and C. R. Hegan, C.A. of the firm of Webb, Read, Hegan, Callingham & Co., were re-appointed as auditors of the Bank.

The following were elected Directors: Sir William Price, Honorary President; Mr. John Galt, president; Mr. R. T. Riley and Mr. Geo. Thomson, vice-presidents; Messrs. W. R. Allan, G. H. Balfour, Hume Blake, K.C., M. Bull, Major-General John Carson, C.B., B. B. Cronyn, Edward L. Drewry, E. Haas, J. S. Hough, K.C., R. O. McCulloch, F. E. Kenaston and Wm. Shaw.

LITERARY RAMBLES

A short time ago I was talking to gentleman from a small town many miles distant from Peterborough. He was a farmer, a man who had all his lifetime been engaged in agricultural pursuits. To all outward appearance he was as far removed from being a scholar as could possibly be imagined. Yet, that man had read as much as many who have had far greater advantages, and his conversation showed that he had used discretion in his choice of literature.

He accounted for his liking for books by the fact that his mother had inculcated the taste in him at an early age, and he had always resolved, no matter where his lot was cast, to keep up in the best way he could with the current thought of the day. In the course of conversation he enquired concerning the circulation in the Peterborough Library, also as to the quality of literature that found most favor with our readers, and as to the class of people who indulged to the greatest extent in reading. I told him that fiction was certainly the most favored branch of literature in ours as in all other libraries, that the mechanics were our best patrons and that they also undoubtedly chose the best books. "That is all right as far as it goes," he said, "but do these men diversify their reading? Do they ask merely for books dealing with their particular trade, or do they relax occasionally and go in for an occasional taste of fiction, or travel, or history?" I was obliged to confess that so far as my observation went, the laboring man seemed almost entirely to devote himself to such books as dealt with the particular business in which he might be employed. "That is a great mistake," he said. "Nobody can expect to get the same freshness and crispness out of life who keeps in the same old rut and does not wander afield to see what there is over the next hedgerow. If I had taken that view of life and, simply because I was a farmer, indulged in nothing but treatises on agriculture and pored over the blue books that our provincial and Dominion governments so lavishly expend money on, I would by this time have been no better than a clod and my vote would have been as valueless to my country as that of some benighted foreigner. The newspapers are really the greatest enlighteners of the age. It is from them that the ordinary individual, who has no time to spare on an extended course of reading, gets what smattering of knowledge he can, but nevertheless there are times when even the newspaper cannot supply one's requirements, and it behooves us to turn to other fountains of knowledge for refinement. It is useless for anyone to say that he has no time for reading anything but the newspapers. Everyone has time. Sir Alexander Bell used always to have a book open before him on the dressing-table. Hogg, the Ettrick shepherd, utilized the time spent on the moors in delving into all sorts of literature.

"I have often thought," my friend went on, "that very few people realise the true value of reading. The great majority take to fiction for the sake of 'killing time.' I do not know of any expression in our language that I hate more than that. The idea embodied in it strikes me as absolutely devoid of common sense. Long years ago I read a saying of that wise old man, Benjamin Franklin, that has always remained in my memory. It was this: 'If time be of all things the most precious, wasting time must be the greatest prodigality since lost time is never found again.' And I often think, when I hear someone saying that he is doing so and so in order to kill time, that he has not even begun to realise the value of life. If you can get your reading public to see that there are other branches of literature quite as interesting as fiction and far more profitable, you will render a service to your whole community. Take, for instance, Biography, History, Fine Arts. There is something in all of these subjects that one can never find in even the greatest novel. You know what Bulwer Lytton said about fiction? 'I have known some people,' he said, 'in great sorrow fly to a novel, or the last light book in fashion. One might as well take a rose-draught for the plague. Light reading does not do when the heart is really heavy.' That was what Bulwer Lytton, himself one of the outstanding figures in fiction-writing of the last century, had to say as to its value compared with the arts or the sciences. Personally," my friend went on, "my preference is for Biography. I never tire of reading all that there is to read concerning that great period of English literature, the 18th century. What wonderful names appear in that grand epoch—Swift, Pope, Bolingbroke, Johnson, Congreve, Berkeley, Cibber, Savage, and the hundreds upon hundreds of others whose names cannot be placed on paper. Those were the days when literature was beginning to come into its own, although the men who produced it was often looked at askance. What great men there were. Boswell's immortal work tells us much of many of them, but in order to get a satisfactory glimpse of those days we have to gather our knowledge from many sources. Isaac Disraeli's "Calamities of Authors" tells us much, and his "Curiosities of Literature" tells us much also. These are books that are rarely taken up in these days, but it is well worth the time expended to read them, and also to read the lives of other great authors not named therein, and see what manner of men they were who have brought our literature to so sublime a height."

This and much more my friend imparted to me. I left him with many regrets. The hour that I had spent in his company had been a profitable and a pleasant one.

MARKET PRICES

Prices on the market this morning for meat and fowl were very much higher than usual and the housewives were doing considerable grumbing over the cost of their week's supplies.

Eggs were a little easier and could be easily got at 50c for good fresh ones, while butter remained steady at 43c to 45c for the choicest. In a few instances a few baskets were sold at 42c.

Dressed beef was higher and in most instances 13c was paid for fronts and 15c for the hinds. Pork was also higher, seling at 20c and 21c. Some heavy pork sold at 19c and 20c.

Morris & Brown shipped a car load of butcher cattle to Toronto and report that good killing beef is exceptionally scarce in Peterborough county.

Hogs took another jump and are quoted at $13.25 for next week's delivery.

Good chickens sold at increased prices. A pair of fine pullets brought $2.75 and in a few instances individual birds sold for $1.10, and they weighed between 7 and 8 lbs. each and were crate fed. Geese sold at 20c to 22c and a few turkeys at 25c per lb. There were no ducks offered.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:—

Business in grocery lines has continued good during the week Prices for the most part have held steady, with advances recorded in a number of lines. Flour is in firm market in the face of a steadiness in wheat and a dispositon for the prices of the latter to hold within narrow margin. Demand for mill feeds of all kinds is keeping up well. Demand for flour from the mills is comparatively light at present. Some fairly heavy stocks were laid in by some some time ago, when the market was strong and advancing and until these are worked off there is not expected to be a heavy demand. Reports from the Argentine about the damage to the grain crop there are confirmed. It is estimated the amount of wheat available from that source will be only in the neighborhood of 1,000,000 tons as compared with 2,500,000 tons in a normal year.

Sugar holds steady in a quiet market. Reports from Cuba continue to be favorable to a large production during the present campaign. Production is now well under way there. For the balance of the present month it is expected the price of sugar will hold firm, but slightly cheaper sugars are looked for during February, when all of the sugar centrals will be grinding on the island. Butter is easier in tone, but eggs have again become firmer in price in the face of a heavier demand. Live hogs are higher in price with deliveries light. The higher costs of containers are operating to advance prices on many lines. Reports from molasses producing centres in the South indicate there will be a big crop of West Indian. Teas continue in a firm market with advances recorded in the primary market. Coffee is also in firm market with advances recorded in certain instances. One line of package cereals was reduced during the week.

DINING CAR SERVICE FOR GRAND TRUNK COACH PASSENGERS

The Grand Trunk Railway System, which has earned a continent-wide reputation for the excellence of its dinign-car service, has just adopted a new method of drawing the special attention of the travelling public to the many reasonably priced dishes served in its dining-cars. With the desire of emphasizing to all passengers that the smallest order receives the same courteous attention as the larger one, the railway has designed a special menu. This is to be distributed in the first-class coaches on the train and it shows sample items served in the dining-car. It has been felt that many people having reason to travel only occasionally, had experienced a certain diffidence in entering the ding-car. It is believed that this wider distribution of information regarding the facilities for obtaining a meal at a minimum cost consistent with the highest standard of service, will do a great deal toward removing this feeling.

TENDERS FOR PULPWOOD and PINE LIMIT

Tenders will be received by the undersigned up to and including the 1st day of February, 1917, for the right to cut pulpwood and pine timber on a certain area situated on the Black Sturgeon River and other territory adjacent thereto, in the District of Thunder Bay.

Tenderers shall state the amount per cord on pulpwood, and per thousand feet board measure, on pine, that they are prepared to pay as a bonus in addition to dues of 40 cents per cord for spruce, and 20 cents per cord for other pulpwoods, and $2.00 per thousand feet, board measure, for pine, or such other rates as may from time to time be fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, for the right to operate a pulp mill and a paper mill on or near the area referred to.

Such tenderers shall be required to erect a mill or mills on or near the territory and to manufacture the wood into pulp and paper in the Province of Ontario.

Parties making tender will be required to deposit with their tender a marked cheque, payable to the Honorable the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, for ten thousand dollars ($10,000), which amount will be forfeited in the event of their not entering into agreement to carry out conditions, etc. The said $10,000 will be applied on account of bonus dues, as they accrue, but the regulation dues, as mentioned above, will require to be paid in the usual manner as returns of cutting of wood and timber are received.

The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

For particulars as to description of territory, capital to be invested, etc., apply to the undersigned.

Who Can Tell?

Who can tell the working of children's minds, or how, all unwittingly we may make ourselves appear unjust in our dealings toward them?

This was brought home to Mr. Hewit the other day as he took his young hopeful, aged six, for a constitutional. The youngster was evidently thinking hard, for he was silent—which was unusual.

"Daddy," he said, looking up suddenly, "I want to get married!"

"Do you, my son? And who to, may I ask?" answered the proud parent, looking at him.

"I want to marry granny"

"Do you, inded? And do you think I would let you marry my mother—eh?"

"Well, why shouldn't I?" retorted the tender logician, "You married mine, didnt you?"

While assisting at a wood-cutting bee on the premises of John Service, Dereham township, near Ingersoll, Wm. Tackle received injuries which may prove fatal.

TO TRANSPORT CIRCUS BY THE MOTOR TRUCK

HEREAFTER CANVAS CITIES WILL BE CARRIED BY MOST MODERN OF CONVEYANCES.

(By Lambert G. Sullivan.)

Watering the elephants no longer is to be an easy way for the youth of America to secure free tickets at the annual visit of the circus. Hereafter they will have the more complicated task of carrying water to the automobile trucks, pointing out the best places to get gasoline and otherwise conduct themselves as up-to-date youngsters.

For now comes the news that the circus has abandoned its time honored methods of transportation and that hereafter the canvas cities will be moved by the most modern means of transportation—namely, by motor truck.

This news was given out in an interesting anouncement made this week by the United States Circus Corporation, 410 West 42nd Street New York, one of the largest circus companies in the world, that it had placed an order for 100 three and one-half ton trucks with the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Co. of Springfield, O.

The trucks are specified for immediate delivery, which means that when the United circus starts on its annual pilgrimage next spring, it will be moved exclusively by the motor truck.

Change Due to Company

Economy was the primary cause of the change of the circus compny from horses to trucks. The 100 trucks will do away with the necessity of carrying several hundred truck horses, which are valueless from a "show" standpoint and which always have been a big expense to circuses owing to the cost of their feed and maintenance as well as the big losses on acount of sickness and death.

While the trucks represent a higher outlay of capital at the start than horses would, it is believed by the circus officials that they eventually will result in a big saving.

In adopting the motor truck method of transportation the circus authorities have demonstrated a touching confidence in the condition of American highways which probably they will regret more than once during the coming summer. As a great part of the circus transportation will be over country roads, it is likely that before the end of the year President Spellman of the circus corporation will become as great a good roads booster as W. G. Edens of Illinois highway fame.

It is hoped the circus authorities will not cherish the mistaken idea that such thoroughfares as the Lincoln highway, the Dixie highway, the Jackson highway and other famous roads are actualities. Otherwise cost of the circus exhibitions this year will be given midway between towns, with the rings set in eight or ten inches of mud.

The idea of a motor equipped circus is said to have been first conceived by the late Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill). He is said to have made the assertion some time ago that before ten years had passed the big circuses all would have adopted the truck idea.

COUNTY COUNCIL

Inaugural Meeting of County Dads on Tuesday.

The County Council for 1917 will hold its inaugural meeting on Tuesday. The personnel of the new council is considerably changed since its meeting in December, the new members being Messrs. Griffith, Rye, Bell, Clark, Young and Nichols.

As soon as the council assembles and the qualifications of the members certified to by County Clerk Elliott, the selection of a warden will be proceeded with. It is probable that the choice will fall on Reeve Brown of Asphodel, who was the runner-up against Warden Darling last year, although there is some talk of Reeve Squire being a contestant.

Last year it took six ballots to decide the choice of Warden Darling who was elected by the deciding vote of Reeve Anderson of Otonabee as the senior representative of the highest assessed municipality.

The Property Committee will have quite a lot of work this year. The contract for the repairs to the Court House will have to be let and this will be a very arduous task as there are quite a few changes in arrangement of the court and other rooms to be made.

The Roads and Bridges Committee will have the alterations to the Wallace Point Bridge to attend to.

Generally there is an unusual amount of work to be undertaken.

The New Council

The personnel of the Council is:—

B. Squire, Norwood
H. G. Fitzgerald, Lakefield
Wm. Matheson, Havelock.
M. Brown, Asphodel
W. E. Griffith, Belmont
N. Lean, Burleigh
C. J. Darling, Dummer

Winter Hard on Baby

The winter season is a hard one on the baby. He is more or less confined to stuffy, badly ventilated rooms. It is so often stormy that the mother does not get him out in the fresh air as often as she should. He catches colds which rack his little system; his stomach and bowels get out of order and he becomes peevish and cross. To guard against this the mother should keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. They regulate the stomach and bowels and break up colds. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FASHION HINTS

The close-fitted effect at the waistline is a notable feature of this charming dance frock. Fashioned in rose soiree and beautifully set off by the cream metal lace, this garment is also notable for the treatment of the basque, which is beautifully embroidered and trimmed with silk roses.

A call has been sent out to the western section of the Canadian Council of Agriculture to meet in Winnipeg on February 1st to discuss sample markets.

The Laval (Montreal) Hospital unit is being established temporarily in a hospital in Paris with 1,400 beds. Its own building, now under construction, will be ready by May.

At the Patriotic Fund luncheon at Hamilton, 12 dozen eggs contributed to the Fund, were auctioned off in dozens and realized $291, some dozen lots bringing the fabulous price, even in these times of high prices, of $30.

READ THE REVIEW

Parliament is now in annual session, which promises to be one of the most important held since Confederation. Every supporter of the Borden Government, every person interested in public affairs should read The Review. This paper will have the best reports of the proceedings in the House. LIVES SAVED BY WORK OF

The year on which we are entered presents the same difficulties as the on through which we have just passed. We think that with the same earnest attention on behalf of our executive that we will be able to caryr the work through in a satisfactory manner even though we are compelled to be without the services of one nurse.

Before closing this report, I wish to express my sincere thanks to the president for his courteous and ever ready assistance to me, the secretary, and also to ask your thorough co-operation for the year 1917.

Financial Statement

Mr W H. Dunsford, the treasurer, made the following statement of the finances of the association. He also stated that there were 69 subscribers to the funds of the association.

Miss Edith Hamilton, general district nurse, read the following report on the year's work:

During the year there were 187 patients:

Obstetric	38
Surgical	46
Medical	103
Total	187

which had to be visited once or twice a day, making two thousand and fifty visits in all. Five hundred and forty eight were paid for by the patients themselves, making the sum collected $137.00 One thousand five hundred and two were free visits.

The following dressing have been supplied by the Association for free patients: 250 grs. morphine, 30 yards of sterile gauze, 13 pkgs. absorbent cotton, old linen, adhesive plaster, bandages, lysol, tr. green soap, olive oil.

The work has been aided by the following donations: Clothing, Mrs W. J. Green, clothing: King's Daughters; old linen, Mrs. Gallivan, Mrs. Mowat and Mrs. Davidson; magazines, Mrs. Matthews.

I have been called on fifteen times for night duty.

In studying this phase of nursing many questions and problems occur. Perhaps the first question that arises is, How does care received by a patient in the district differ from that received by a patient in hospital or private house? When it is possible to train a helper in the home to give care in my absence, there is practically no differnce, for in the average home there is usually someone who can be taught to assist in the nursing. Of all the departments of nursing, district work has the greatest oportunity for doing good, that it is the most depressing work in the profession no one will dispute.

I was called to nurse a baby six months old. When I first attended it it weighed six and one-half pounds. The child cried and whined almost incessantly while awake, and was so wasted that the limbs resembled those of a bird and the fat entirely disappeared from the body. The treatment prescribed by the doctor was faithfully carried out and proper food given. In four months the baby weighed sixteen pounds.

I was called to a home where the father on account of ill health had not been able to work for two years. It was a case of carcinoma of the throat. The Association supplied morphine and two quarts of milk daily for three months.

A girl aged eight years. Nurse was attending her mother, who was ill. She coughed quite frequently and complained of a pain in her side, and was attending school. The nurse asked permission to have her taken to the doctor. He examined her and found she had pleurisy in her right side; medicine was provided for her by the Health Association and she is now in good health.

These are just three cases, which occur daily, but they show to some extent that life is being saved, which is so necessary during this period of destruction.

TUBERCULAR WORK.

The following report is submitted for the year 1916:

During the year Miss Mercier had 29 tubercular patients under supervision, six of whom required daily treatment, a number being under observation and a number convalescing. It will be a matter of great pleasure to the members of the Association to know that a number of the tubercular patients have made great progress towards recovery.

Nineteen dollars have been collected for services rendered, and the following supplies have been given out: six sputum cups, five hundred and sixty refills, carbolic acid, a large quantity of old linen, comforters and clothing.

The following articles have been loaned: ice-caps, three rubber rings, thermometers, head rests, mattresses, two tents, a verandah chair, verandah curtains, cots, etc.

Nine hundred and forty-seven visits have been made in all, Miss Mercier making 539 and Miss Hamilton, the general nurse who relieved for six months, making 408.

Father Phelan congratulated Miss Hamilton on the splendid work that she had accomplished during the year.

Mr. Geo. W Powell also extended great praise to Nurse Hamilton for the excellence of her own work and for showing the spirit of a true nurse by also adding to her duties the work of Nurse Mercier, who was ill for the greater part of the year. He also commended the backing that the Nurses' Supervision Committee had given on all occasions.

Dr. Cameron also spoke in the highest terms and the work done during the year by the Nurses' Supervision Committee and Miss Hamilton. Over $460 had been expended by this committee for milk and eggs which was in charge of Mrs. Scott.

Executive Committee

The following were chosen to compose the executive committee for the year 1917: Mesdames Aylmer, Kendry, Denham, Scott, Coulthard, Gardiner, Helson; Messrs. Dunsford, Mason, R. Denne Abbott, Powell and Peck; Drs. Neal, Cameron, Mann, Gallivan and Rev. Fr. Phelan.

Gift of $100

Mr W. H. Dunsford announced that a cheque for $100 had been received from Mr. James Kendry of the Auburn Woollen Co., and by a unanimous vote of the members Mr. Kendry was elected a life member of the association.

There are now two life members, Mrs. (Dr.) Geo. Burnham being the other one.

The executive will meet next week to elect their officers.

Nervous Disorders

If your hand trembles or is unsteady, it is a sure and early sign that your nervous system is at fault. The trouble if not taken in time will develop slowly to a worse stage, and there is no person more to be pitied than one suffering from nervous trouble. You feel unaccountably weak after exertion, lose flesh, turn against food, and suffer palpitations and indigestion after eating. Sometimes sharp pains shot down your spine and legs, and often neuralgia robs you of your sleep at night. There are some of the troubles that indicate the presence of nervous disorders. If they are neglected they result in a complete nervous collapse, sometimes in paralysis. Dr Williams' Pink Pills have won a great reputation in curing all forms of nervous diseases. The nervous system depends entirely upon the blood supply for nourishment. Dr Williams' Pink Pills actually increase the supply of rich, red blood; feed, strengthen and tone the nerves, enabling them to perform their functions and dispel all signs of a breakdown. Mrs. W. Wainlott, Beeber Bank, N.S., says:—"I was sick, run dowwn and awfuly nervous. The slightest noise would startle and annoy me. I suffered pains around the heart and every particle of color left my face and hands. I always felt tired, and slept poorly at night I was so poorly that my friends thought I would not recover. I tried many medicines but they did not help me. Then I read of Dr. Williams Pink Pills and decided to drop all other medicines and try them. It was fortunate I did for in the course of a few weeks I found them helping me. I continued taking the pills for some weeks longer and they completely cured me. I earnestly advise every weak woman and girl to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and I am sure they will not be disappointed."

You can get these pills through any medicien dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

UNION BANK HAS A NEW GEN. MANAGER

Mr. H. B. Shaw Takes Place of Mr. G. H. Balfour, Who Is Retiring.

New York Agency With a Strong Advisory Committee

After 47 years in the service of the Union Bank of Canada, Mr. George H. Balfour has resigned the general managership, and has been elected a director, that the benefit of his long experience and mature judgment may be preserved to the bank.

Under Mr. Balfour's management the Union Bank has made great progress, particularly in the West, where it has a very extended system of branches, reinforced by a strong representation throughout Eastern Canada. Mr. Balfour's experience covered both parts of the Dominion, five years as manager in Winnipeg and twelve years in the same position in Montreal, while during his thirteen year period as general manager the head office was transferred from Quebec to Winnipeg.

MR. H. B. SHAW
The New General Manager of the Union Bank of Canada

Mr. H. B. Shaw has been associated with the bank 25 years, since he started as a young man of 18 in the Quebec branch. Much of his experience as teller, accountant, branch manager, superintendent and assistant general manager has been gained in the West and with the conservative instinct of the experienced banker, he combined the vigor and enthusiasm of comparative youth and a thorough knowledge of the banking needs of a new and rapidly developing country.

The New York Agency of the Union Bank is opening under the auspices of an advisory committee which includes Messrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Gilbert G. Thorne. With a strong branch in London, Eng., and in influential Eastern Canada directorate, the Union Bank is in excellent position to handle its rapidly extending business.

THE WEATHER

Sharp again, and with a promise of still colder to come. Yesterday morning's figure was 9 below, and it has not risen to the zero mark all day. Some of the coldest days of the year are requently around this date, or a few days previous or afterwards. On the morning of Jan. 19, 1904, we had it 30 below zero. This was the morning on which a disastrous fire occurred at Roy's Studio on Hunter St., and will be remembered by some of the firemen. Another cold Jan 19 was in 1901, when it was 18 below zero in the morning and 12 below at noon. The following year on the same date it was 12 below. On Jan. 19, 1897, we had a temperature of 13 below.—W. P.

Every Second Belgian Is Destitute!

3,500,000 Are Wholly or Partially Dependent on Charity.

The war goes on, but Belgium stands still, or rather slips back a little deeper into her misery! German rule grows harsher and more vindictive as certain defeat looms up ahead. Belgian reserves of money are steadily dwindling, and now fully half the population must be fed by charity or starve.

To make the situation worse, the great sympathetic public of Great Britain, Canada and the United States is beginning to look upon Belgium's need as an old story, and to be less generous in their giving. Meanwhile prices of food are soaring and the money given does not go as far as it did.

As it is, the Belgian Relief Commission has been compelled to cut down rations to what seems the absolute minimum—the smallest amount that will support life. If further reductions have to be made the weaker must go under, and the children, on whom Belgium's future depends, must be permanently stunted and weakened by want.

Meanwhile Canada as a nation, and we as individuals, are unusually prosperous. True, there are many calls on our purses, but there are few of us, indeed, who cannot easily spare enough to feed at least one Belgian family.

FRENCH FIRE DEFEATS TWO ATTACKS BY GERMANS

Foe Repulsed Northeast of Wood Caurieres.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 22. — (Official Statement.) — "On the right bank of the River Meuse, after violent bombardment, German troops yesterday evening attacked on two different occasions trenches to the northeast of Caurieres wood. The fire of our artillery together with that of our machine guns checked these enemy attacks and our lines were maintained without break. Artillery fighting proceeded actively during the night in the sector of Cote de Poivre.

In Lorraine and Alsace there have been patrol encounters.

The night passed quietly on the remainder of the front.

BERLIN OFFICIAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—Official Statement.—Western Front: Near Lens a minor British attack was repulsed in a hand grenade engagement. Near Beaonvaux and east of Pont-au-Mousson reconnoitering detachments brought back several prisoners and one machine gun from short incursions into hostile positions.

Eastern Front, Front of Prince Leopold: West of Friedrichstadt nocturnal attacks by Russian raiding detachments were repulsed.

Roumanian Front, Front of Archduke Joseph: In the Eastern Carpathians, outpost engagements with the results successful to us occurred at several places. North of the Oituz Valley there have been intermittent lively activities by artillery on both sides.

Army Group of Von Mackensen—West of Fanciu a hostile company attacked our protecting positions on the Putna. The attack was repulsed.

CAMPBELLFORD WELCOMES HERO

CAPTAIN HODGE RETURNS WITH MILITARY CROSS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 22—Capt. H. E. Hodge, who went overseas with the first contingent and was invalided to Canada, returned home Saturday night and was welcomed by the band and a large number of citizens who crowded the station. Capt. Hodge brought with him a Military Cross which he won at the front. He took part in the fighting at Regina Trench, won by the Canadians, and was wounded in the knee. He first served in the 2nd Batt., and later was transferred to the command of the machine gun section of the 12th Brigade in the 4th Division.

SOME CHANGES IN LAWN AND GARDEN COMPETITION; SPECIAL PRIZES DONATED

A well attended meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Horticultural Society was held Friday evening last, when plans for the season's work were discussed. It was decided to make some changes in the lawn and garden competition held by the society each year. A resolution was passed barring any of the directors from participating in this contest. Two classes will be made, one specializing the working man's lawns and gardens. In addition to the regular prizes offered by the society for the latter class, special cash prizes will be offered as follows: Mr. W. J. Kennedy, $5; Mr. W. Stocker, $3; Chief Howard, $2. It is hoped by these special inducements more enthusiasm will be in evidence this season.

A long list of plant and shrub options was gone over for distribution to the members this spring. This will shortly be published in the press. An active canvass for new members will also be made to bring the membership of the society up to one thousand.

MELVILLE, Sask., Jan. 22.— The wife and three children of A. Biotrch were burned to death on Sunday morning in the destruction of their house during the absence of the father who was at work in the Grand Trunk yards.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

County Magistrate Langley reserved judgment until Saturday next in the case of Inspector Stewart against A. Anderson of Havelock for an alleged infraction of the Ontario Temperance Act.

The evidence was taken at Havelock on Thursday and the argument heard this morning. There are some close technical points to be decided and the magistrate will give a written judgment.

ELECTION IN N. W. TORONTO TODAY.

The Review will bulletin the result of the election in Northwest Toronto, which is on today. The result should be known by six o'clock or earlier.

In the last election Mr. McPherson got a vote of 5,975, while his opponent obtained 3,556, making a majority of nearly 2,500. It is estimated that Mr. Cane, the Liberal candidate, this year will not be able to poll nearly so large a vote as Mr. W. O. McTaggart, the last candidate for the Liberals, as he is not as well known, and a majority of nearly 3,000 is expected for the Conservative candidate.

MUNITIONS FACTORY AT BAGDAD IS BOMBARDED

Attack Carried Out By British Airplanes.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 22— British airplanes have bombarded a Turkish munitions factory in Bagdad, it was officially announced today in the following statement: "On Saturday our airplanes dropped six bombs of 100 pounds each in and around a Turkish munitions factory in Bagdad citadel."

TRAINS BEHIND; ROADS BLOCKED

SUNDAY'S BLIZZARD HELD UP TRAIN TRAFFIC AND COUNTRY ROADS.

Sunday's blizzard interfered with railway traffic so that many trains were delayed, all the trains running through Peterborough this morning being behind time.

The country roads are blocked and many schools have been closed because it was impossible for the pupils to get to their studies.

Light Vote in Ennismore

A very light vote is being polled in the Ennismore bye-election today as many farmers are unable to break through the drifts which followed the blizzard yesterday.

SENTENCE OF THREE YEARS IN PENITENTIARY

TWO SENTENCES IMPOSED ON CLARENCE SAMPSON ARE CONCURRENT.

NO WORD OF APPEAL.

MAGISTRATE GIVES SOME KINDLY ADVICE TO PRISONER.

Clarence Sampson was found guilty on Saturday on two additional charges of cattle stealing, and was sentenced to three years in the Kingston Penitentiary, the sentence to run concurrently with the previous sentence of three years.

County Magistrate Langley heard the evidence on Saturday, and the facts adduced were the same as in the Carveth case, except that the owners of the cattle taken identified the hides from natural as well as artificial markings.

A. E. Dixon appeared for the prisoner and Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuted.

This disposes of all the charges made against the defendant. Nothing has been heard of the appeal which it was intimated would be taken at the previous trial.

Magistrate Langley addressed the prisoner, explaining to him the ticket of leave system at the penitentiary by which with good conduct he might have his term shortened, and also the presence of the penitentiary library, of which he might take advantage, and by his application thereto improve himself generally.

Prisoner's wife and mother were present when sentence was imposed and the scene that followed was affecting.

FIRST CHURCH PARADE

The 247th Batt. held their first church parade to St. John's Church Sunday morning, when Rev. Canon Cornish preached an appropriate sermon to the soldiers.

UNITED STATES MAY ENTER WORLD LEAGUE FOR PEACE

The President Addresses Senate on Question Whether Country Shall Depart From Traditional Policy of no Entangling Alliances.

PRESIDENT BREAKS PRECEDENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. — President Wilson, in a personal address to the Senate today, laid down the question of whether the United States shall depart from its traditional policy of isolaion and no entangling alliances and take part in a world league to preserve peace after the war.

Shattering a precedent of more than a century, the President, regarding the Senate with its treaty-making power as his counsellor in foreign affairs, explained why he believed the time had come for the world to know America's position, and he discussed the underlying causes on which he believed the permanent peace of the world can be maintained. While President Wilson was speaking directly to the senators after the manner of Washington, Madison and Adams, his address was in the hands of all foreign governments or on its way to them.

President Wilson notified Vice-President Marshall earlier in the day that he wished to address the Senate on the subject of foreign relations, and arrrangements for his appearance were made at once.

It is stated that no President since George Washington has taken such a step.

PHYSICAL STANDARD FOR NON-COMBATANT UNITS

O.S. Construction and The Forestry Battalions.

The new physical standard for recruits for construction and forestry battalions and for the skilled railway employes section of the Canadian Expeditionary Force is set forth in a letter received by the officer commanding the 247th Batt. from the D.A.A. and Q.M.G. No. 3 District as follows:—

Special Enlistment

Authority is hereby granted for you to enlist into the unit under your command, all men who are not fit for infantry units, but who come under the description as published in Divisional Orders No. 59 dated Jan. 11, 1917, as follows:—

The following relaxations in physical standards of recruits for construction and forestry battalions recommended. Minimum height, 4 ft. 11 in. Care must be taken that boys under 18 are not enlisted Vision first lowest standard of vision, second, recruits whose vision can be raised to standard by aid of glasses; third, men who have lost one or the sight thereof, but whose sight has not been listed as results of injuries or progressive organic disease within three years. One-eyed men should be taken on as incapacitated men entitled only to Class 3 pension. $280 per annum, if they lose sight of sound eye.

A note to this effect should be made on attestation paper and initialed by recruit. Moderate degrees of flat feet will not constitute cause for rejection, but recruits should be tested by five mile walk or if necessary X-ray plates made. Many so-called flat feet, due to great development of plantar muscles. Loss of one or two fingers either hands accepted if medical board considers the recruit capable of labor; also loss of two toes, on either or both feet, provided they are not the great toe. Men deaf in one ear, but hearing normally in opposite ear and otitis Media. In this case same proviso re pension. Pension age limit, 48 years. Care should be taken as to condition of arteries of men over 41 years of age.

The above relaxations in physical standards also apply to Section Skilled Railway Employees.

Pension Awarded

F. H. Dobbin, of the Peterborough branch of the Patriotic Fund, has received notification that Mrs. Annie Smith, mother of Sergt. Clarence M. Smith, who was killed in action, has been granted an annual pension of $206 per year from Sept. 16, 1916.

Mrs. Smith lost two sons, Clarence and Maxwell, the latter having died in England.

Two More Recruits

Lang and Havelock are upholding their splendid record for furnishing recruits for the 247th Batt. This morning each sent in a man, who is now wearing the King's uniform. They are Pte. Eric Kimball of Lang and Pte. Archie Delbert Hubbel of Havelock.

Letter from "Giver."

A letter signed "A Giver" has been received at the Patriotic Fund office. The facts referred to are quite well known, but the rules require that certain attention and assistance shall be made for a stated period. When that has elapsed the matter will come under the care of the military authorities. The letter will be forwarded to the proper hands, and any action taken, in a military way, will be at the discretion of the Paymaster-General.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, JANUARY 22, 1917.

MILITARY TRAINING MAKES THE MAN.

NO MATTER HOW brilliant may be the academic career of a young man, he requires a course in the wide university of the world to complete his education. He will find this, if anywhere, in a term of military service, and will come out of it with every faculty developed and his manly character fully formed. Life in the trenches will teach him to endure hardship without a murmur, he will learn unselfishness, discipline and, best of all, that he cannot hope to achieve anything worth while without a strenuous struggle. Living constantly in danger of death cannot fail to have its effect upon his moral nature.

Miss Ada L. Ward brings to the mothers of Peterborough a message of comfort. Their boys in khaki are going through an educational course in Europe that will make them better men, and when they return they will be fitted for the battle of life, surpassing in every respect and in every line of duty the faint-hearted who remained at home.

HOW WOMEN COULD GET THE BALLOT.

THE WOMEN OF ONTARIO who demand the franchise, not as a reward for any extra exertions they may have made to help the soldiers, but as a right to which they are entitled by human and divine economy, naturally object to being placed in the same category as children with intelligence undeveloped and with imbeciles. The august law that has been evolved from the superb wisdom of man is not yet clear as to whether woman is a person in the meaning of the Act.

Not only are the women of Ontario, so long as they are denied the franchise, regarded as no better than those who are made the wards of the State, but they are subjected to the identical treatment that is being meted out to the negroes of the South. The race that was rescued from actual slavery fifty years ago and were enfranchised by their earthly saviors, are now being deprived of that right by their former owners.

There was, perhaps, no blessing of freedom which the negro prized quite so highly as the ballot that was placed in his hands. He may not have understood the spirit which animated the people of the North to break his shackles, but at all events he felt it his duty to vote as voted the men who in the Civil War wore the blue uniform, thus showing that even if he was deficient in native intelligence, he was not lacking in that somewhat rare virtue, human gratitude.

One State after another in the South is by clever manipulation of the law depriving the negro of the right to vote. Why this is actually necessary is not apparent, as the votes cast by the colored race were rarely counted by the white inspectors of elections, or if they were they were registered in the column where they would do the most good. When a State disfranchised the negro it was because the colored electors exceeded the white electors in numbers. When a vote was taken to deprive the former of the ballot, the amendment to the State constitution invariably carried, thus demonstrating that counting the vote is vastly more important than marking the ballots.

When the negro was shorn of even the right to go through the formality of handing in a ballot at an election, he went on strike by refusing to work for the white man. He preferred semi-starvation to toiling for his former owners. The white man of the South is naturally averse to physical exertion and requires the muscle of the slaves to save him from actual want. Then, too, the colored man began a migration to the Northern States, where he is not only sure of the vote, but that it will be counted as registered by himself. The cheap colored labor that has enabled the white man to live in tolerable ease, is seeking more promising fields. In order to induce the negro to remain in a climate for which he was designed by nature, it may be necessary for the people who profit by his presence to enfranchise him again.

If the women of Ontario are not allowed to vote, there are other provinces in the Dominion where they enjoy that right. A feminine migration to the West might open the eyes of the anti-suffragists. But even if all the provinces enfranchise women, another question arises—that of their right to vote at Dominion elections. That is a matter which will be thoroughly discussed at the present session of Parliament, notice of a bill to that effect having already been given.

MR. CANNON, NATIONALIST.

FORMER SPEAKER SEVIGNY of the Dominion Parliament was recently appointed Minister of Inland Revenue, and this rendered it necessary for him to appeal for endorsation to his constituents in Dorchester. The Liberals nominated Lucien Cannon to oppose him, and the campaign now in progress shows day by day that Mr. Cannon is the greatest Nationalist of them all, a charge which the Opposition put forward as the reason why Mr. Sevigny should be defeated.

There is no Nationalist, as that term is generally understood, in the Borden Cabinet. The Government's record since the war began is all the proof this statement requires. All the members of the Cabinet must be unanimous on any policy adopted. No Nationalist taking Henri Bourassa or Col. Lavergne as a type would support a government or remain a member of a cabinet that set out to raise half a million men for the war or to levy taxes to support them. If Mr. Sevigny were a Nationalist, he would not stultify himself by accepting a seat in the council of the nation. His very selection is proof that he agrees with the war policy of the Government.

Mr. Cannon, however, speaks on the public platform with a frankness that can mean nothing but disaster for his party, if not in Dorchester, then in another portion of the Dominion.

"Are we," he asked at a public meeting, "to ruin our country from the point of view of men and wealth and everything else, for England? I say, 'No' without hesitation. If you elect Sevigny, there will be no end to the sacrifices that Canada will have to make."

Has not that utterance the true Nationalistic ring? Would the redoubtable Bourassa himself go further than did Mr. Cannon? If the election of Mr. Sevigny means that Canada will further persevere in making sacrifices, will it place the new Minister of Inland Revenue among the enemies of the Empire?

Again, on the public platform Friday night, Mr. Cannon further revealed the faith that is in him. "Why," he asked, "are you obliged to put another stamp on your letters, also when you buy medicine for your sick wife?"

If Mr. Cannon does not know, he is hardly the man to represent a constituency in the Canadian Parliament. If he does know and objects to the tax necessary because the country is at war, he is less worthy than ever for public place. No loyal Canadian citizen is protesting against paying his share of the necessary expenses. Men in Ontario have been interned or fined in the police court like common criminals for utterances less treasonable than those of the Opposition candidate in Dorchester. The trouble with him is that his Nationalistic head is unable to grasp the idea that all this expense is not incurred, all these sacrifices are not being made, through a sentimental regard for England so much as in defence of this country itself.

REGULATIONS RE RACING.

A DOMINION STATUTE, designed to regulate horse-racing, enacts that no more than fifteen days' sport shall be held on any one race track in a year. The object of the law is obvious. Horse-racing was becoming a passion instead of a pastime in some sections of the country, and it was proposed to curb what was really developing into an evil.

The law, like so many other Acts of Parliament, has been evaded. For example, in Windsor, where the inhabitants as a rule care not who governs the country, so long as they are afforded an opportunity to bet on a horse race, there are fifteen race tracks, fourteen of which have been established since the law referred to became effective. When the fifteen days of legal racing is finished on one track the scene is shifted and the exhibition moves on to another track, so that by making the circuit, Windsor can abandon itself for two hundred and fifteen days every year to the sport of kings.

Oliver Wilcox, M.P. for Essex, has given notice that at the current session of Parliament he will introduce a bill to further amend the racing law. No county or other municipality can have more than one track, the racing on each of these to be limited to fifteen days a year, so that the purpose of the original law will be achieved.

The necessity of the proposed legislation is certainly significant. It demonstrates that our lawmakers, three-fourths or thereabouts of whom are professional lawyers, cannot draw up an enactment capable of resisting a charge either from the proverbial coach-and-four or a cavalcade of bang-tailed thoroughbreds. A good deal, too rests on the interpretation. The spirit of the present law is obvious, but it is the letter rather than the spirit of every statute to which the interpreters pay religious observance. There should be more equity and less law, more common sense and less specious pleading.

The promoters of the race track pastime should never have been permitted to make sport of an Act of Parliament, resorting to technical tricks which would not have been recognized in transactions between individuals. Many a law put into force by our various legislatures, Federal or provincial, appears to accomplish little beyond making more business for the men who make a profession of either attempting to break or sustain them.

THE KAISER MUST GO.

AN OUTSPOKEN Bavarian newspaper takes the stand that the German Empire will never be stable, the peace of Europe never assured, until the Kaiser is dethroned and the members of his family barred from succession to the throne.

According to recent despatches this is one of the conditions of peace upon which the Allies will insist, even though no reference was made to it in their recent note to the United States. Ever since he succeeded his father as Emperor of Germany the Kaiser has been preparing for this war. He is responsible for all the slaughter and suffering that has followed in its wake. He has shown himself a man who has no regard for either his kingly word or the cast-iron agreements entered into with the other powers. He is a monster of cruelty who will stop at nothing to gain his ends. Any terms of peace to which he agreed would be ignored in the future if his convenience called for another breach of faith. Europe will never be safe, the rights of the smaller nations will never be preserved inviolate, while the Kaiser has the German military machinery to help him in his mad thirst for conquest.

Even if he passed from the scene and was succeeded by the Crown Prince, matters would be infinitely worse. The heir-apparent to the German throne lacks the essential attributes either of a ruler or a common mortal. He is a paranoiac, a creature of a decadent age, not fit to be entrusted with authority over a regiment, let alone power to shape the destiny of an empire.

NEW JOKES FROM NEW BOOK

The following extracts are taken from a new book, "A Book of Laughter," by Edwin Pugh, and published by Cecil Palmer and Hayward:

"The joy of advising people how they should spend their money is nearly equal to spending it oneself."

"We ought to be thankful that a woman doesn't choose a husband for his real character, but often in spite of it. It is only her butler she is particular about."

"What she said was quite true and yet not the truth; like some religions and all advertisements."

"'Pluck, my boy, pluck,' said the city magnate. 'First and last, pluck's the one essential to success.'

"'Yes,' his humble friend assented. 'I know all about that. The trouble is to find someone to pluck.'"

"'What an idiotic sign,' said Jones pointing to a hairdresser's shop window bearing the legend: Hair cut while you wait.

"'Not at all,' said Brown. 'As a rule you generally wait while they cut some other fellows' hair.'"

"A coroner was holding an inquest on the body of an Italian. The only witness was a small boy of the same nationality, who spoke no English. The coroner asked him—

"Where do you live, my boy?"

The boy shook his head.

"Do you speak English?"

Another shake of the head.

'Do you speak French?"

Another shake.

"'Do you speak German?"

Still no answer.

"How old are you?"

No reply.

"Do you speak Italian?"

The boy gave no sign.

"Well, gentlemen," said the coroner to the jury, "I have questioned the witness in four languages as you have seen for yourselves, but with no result. It is therefore useless to proceed. The court is adjourned."

COMEDY OF GRAFT ACTED IN CHINA

"FOR ways that are dark and for tricks that are vain the heathen Chinee is peculiar." This we learn on the authority of the late Bret Harte, and his penetrating observation has just been confirmed by an incident which recently happened at Shanghai and set all China laughing. The Peking correspondent of The London Times sends to his paper a story from which we gather that even Chinese of such exalted station as Ministers of Justice are not altogether free from the "ways that are dark," but unfortunately for these members of the Cabinet the trick, on this occasion, was distinctly vain. To quote The Times:

"The funniest thing in China today is the Parliament, one of the main results of the agony through which the country has passed. To be more explicit—Parliament has been made to look supremely ridiculous by a gigantic swindle engineered by some of its members.

"From distant Yunnan, the birthplace of the antimonarchist movement which destroyed Yuan Shi Kai, there recently set forth a band of patriots bound for the capital. The party included the newly appointed Minister of Justice, seven members of the resuscitated Parliament, a large-hearted general who had led a brigade in the fight for freedom, and the A.D.C.'s and secretaries and servants of the above-mentioned notabilities. At a certain stage of their journey by sea to Shanghai a telegram was sent giving warning of their approach and requesting the Customs facilities usually accorded to high officials."

Here it must be observed that the Chinese Customs are not controlled by the Central Government at Pekin, but are in the hands of a body of foreign officials who collect the revenue derived from this source, pay it into certain designated foreign banks, and this money is allotted to pay interest on the foreign loans secured on the Customs revenues. Under these circumstances the English and French officials of the Customs Service are not, as a rule, overawed by the dignity of Chinese members of Parliament, who generally received as even-handed treatment as mere plain citizens or foreign merchants, but, on occasions, even Homer nods. To return to The Times story:

"On arrival at Shanghai the baggage of the party was bowed past the preventive officers without examination, and joyfully removed to a native hotel in the International Settlement.

"There then followed a quick distribution of the baggage to the far corners of the city. The municipal police, however, just arrived in time to catch the last four trunks, and to arrest the M. P.'s in charge. These gentlemen bitterly opposed the examination of their belongings, and swore that the trunks contained nothing but official papers. But the foreign policemen, being without bowels, forcibly opened the boxes, and found them filled to the brim with opium. They obtained other evidence, which enabled them to trace twenty more trunks to the official residence of the Chinese city magistrate. These, being found in an adjacent house, were given up, and on examination were also found to contain 'official papers'!

"The case is now before the Mixed Court in Shanghai. The opium seized is valued at 1,000,000 taels (say $750,000), and there are 36 trunks still missing, believed to contain opium worth 1,500,000 taels. The General and three members of Parliament are in prison, with bail refused, because of their connection with the case. On one of them was found a letter to a friend containing the naive confession that they 'were worried over three things—how to get back our lost "face"; how to dispose of the opium in the magistrate's Yamen; and what to do with the rest of the opium'! Warrants are now out for several others of the party, but apparently not for the Minister of Justice, who vigorously denies complicity, stating that he traveled independently with a single servant and a small quantity of baggage. Unfortunately for the Minister, the trunks which passed the Customs were labeled 'H. E. Chang Yotseng and Delegates,' and it will be for him to show that his name was used without his knowledge.

"The case has created a great sensation among the Chinese. Those opposed to Republics and Parliaments and such like rejoice in loud voices, pointing the finger of scorn at the stuff of which Parliaments are made. The other side are in the depths, because their 'face' has been rubbed in the dirt."

Between Two Fires.

The young doctor and his friend, the drug clerk, were sitting at the club window, when a richly dressed woman passed.

"There goes the only woman I ever loved," sighed the young M. D.

"So?" queried the other. "Then why don't you marry her?"

"Can't afford it; she's my best patient."—Mule.

Vindictive.

He—"And that night we drove the Germans back two miles."

She—"Drove them, indeed. I'd have made them walk every step of it."—Liverpool Post.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: The approach of Dollar Day reminds us of all the special days—Tag Day, Shamrock Day, etc.— observed in this city, but I wish to ask the citizens to be good enough to observe another special day, to be called "Milk Bottle Returning Day." If all the ladies in town would be so kind as to hunt up all the milk bottles that may be taking a rest on the pantry shelves or elsewhere, and return them to their milkmen they would have all kinds of blessings called down upon them by that patient long-suffering mortal who is on the doorstep seven days a week, no matter what the weather may be.

Milk bottles, like everything else, have gone up in price and are likely to go higher, and by not returning the empty bottles the ladies are putting the milkmen to considerable and unnecessary expense. Personally, I hav lost fifteen dozen bottles in the last two months; doubtless some of them have been broken, but the large majority are in my customers' houses, resting.

Any day would do for Bottle Day, but to give the ladies lots of time to hunt them up, let them take Saturday, Jan. 27, to put out the bottles and yatch the smiles on the face of the

SOLDIERS AFTER THE WAR

Macaulay said that for a hundred years after Cromwell the effects of the discipline of his "Ironsides" were still felt in almost every important walk of life in England.

We know that for twenty-five years after Appomattox the soldier vote North and South influenced legislation in every State of the Union. Those millions of soldiers had been taught to think in units of hundreds of thousands.

Along this same line Mr. Barrett says that the political effect upon Europe after the war which will be exerted by twenty million veterans will surpass all present belief or expectation.

A man who has faced an enemy's musket for two or three years is apt to think more robust thoughts than he would had he remained behind a ribbon counter.

THE WILD CAT OF THE UPLANDS

AN ALGONQUIN PARK STORY

By Archie P. McKishnie

FOR nearly an hour the wild cat had lain flat on a limb of the big button-wood, pale green eyes fastened on the man who was fishing for trout in the stream below. Her drab grey body, blending as it did with the shade of the tree's bark, might easily have been mistaken for a protuberance on the limb. Once the angler, bungling a cast, turned and looked at her—as she thought—and her red jaws opened in a hissing snarl so low that the ears of the man who was frowning upon his snagged fly, did not catch it.

Which was as well perhaps for the old cat who emboldened to such indiscretion from the fact that her four blind kittens were even then craning their red necks in search of her in the punk-lined nest in the hollow of the tree, resented the near presence of a human menace to her little ones. The fact was the angler carried on his person an automatic Colts no larger than a bicycle wrench but which in his hand was capable of taking the nine lives of any wild cat in as many seconds, with one steel-nosed bullet to spare in case there should be a tenth life somewhere concealed in that furry body. Moreover he had been heard to say that sooner or later he would take deadly toll of the yowling animals that skulked about his camp at night and robbed him of rest by their blood-curdling cries.

But he did not hear the soft but venomous spit of the old cat nor catch the baleful glitter of her eyes. He saw only his perfectly good Silver Doctor securely and hopelessly snagged in the branch of a dwarf ash and he hastened to retrieve his prized fly by carefully reversing his reel.

There is something about a metallic click of any kind that will instil the wildest of terror into any bush animal of the cat family. At the trap-like click of the spring the old cat lowered her round head, flattened her ears and backed swiftly along the limb until she felt the tree hollow beneath her hind legs. Once more in the safe darkness of her den she gave way to cold fury. She switched her short tail, swollen now to twice its normal size, and ripped the softwood from the inner walls of the tree with long claws as she slipped down the musky-smelling interior to her hungry family. Reaching her kittens she cuffed them soundly on the ears, each one in turn, hissing wickedly at the remembrance of the clicking reel.

Then suddenly her whole manner changed; the long grey hair on tail and spine lowered; the fire in the green eyes melted away. One of those little groping noses had touched her breast and awakened within her the instincts of motherhood. She stretched herself out on the brown punk-strewn floor and with curved velvety paws gathered the kittens close against her. And thus she lay, eyes closed to mere slits, orange nose turned to the faint light of the opening above purring hoarsely and claws extending and contracting as the wee hungry mouths drew sustenance from her abundant supply.

When, at length, the full-gorged kittens sank against her in sleep she washed them carefully with her rough tongue singing a low purring song the while; then gathering them to her once more, she twisted her grey body into a ball and throughout the balance of the day slept, waking at intervals [illegible] the young stirred or [illegible] for food.

IT was late night when once again the wild cat slipped carefully out on the limb of the button-wood and gazed suspiciously below and about her. Directly beneath, so close that its soft fingers swept the protruding roots of the big button-wood, a wild brook raced like an endless chain of silver beneath the light of a low-hanging moon.

As she crouched there, eyes and ears alert for danger signs, an owl swooped noiselessly in from the lake-marshes and settled on a branch close beside her. In his talons he held the lifeless carcass of a rush-mouse, but before he could rend that tender tid-bit with his curved beak the wild cat's armed claw flashed out and bird and animal were snatched into her red cavern of a mouth.

Swiftly she ate of her purloined meal, then, her hungry stomach clamoring for more, she slipped down the trunk of the tree, and keeping well in the shadows glided swiftly away into the deeper timber. As she skulked through the spicy-smelling darkness she became aware that other night hunters besides herself were abroad in the shaggy hunting field. The soft breeze blowing up from the low-lying swale told her that the swamp-coon and mink were stalking the bog land creeks in search of musk rats and frogs; little choking cries and muffled squeals from brush and thicket told her that fox and weasel were finding it a good hunting night and far, far down in the bottom lands a low wavering note like the cry of an owl, but barbed with a little snarl that cut deep into the hearts of the smaller forest dwellers, told her that her big cousin, the lynx, was crying his triumph or his disappointment over quarry captured or lost.

The old cat moved forward swiftly and stealthily until she came to a wide stream hedged on either side with tall rank growing fern. This she leaped with a single bound, and as she touched and gripped the moss-covered root of a tree, a big grouse roosting close to the ground sprang to wing with a twittered complaint. Quick as a flash the cat sprang too and slashed out at him with her claws tearing a tuft of brown feathers from his side. Then, as he pitched through the interlaced branches of the tree another animal which had been quietly stalking him launched itself upon the bird and bore it fluttering frantically to earth.

With a low growl the animal, another wild cat much larger and heavier than the mother cat, squatted upon his kill, worrying it and tearing it with his teeth. The mother cat, belly flat on the moss, tail twitching and teeth bared in a grin of anger, watched him. He arose at length and swaggered with his prize into the open where he stood with it beneath his claws glowering about him with the air of a conqueror. Then she raised herself and with bared fangs crept slowly towards him.

It was then the male cat became aware what animal it was who had flushed his quarry and driven it into his claws. He had come into the open prepared to give battle to the meddlesome interloper of his hunting ground, but one glance at that sinister animal of his own kind was quite sufficient to make him change his mind. Leaving the grouse on the moss he backed swiftly into the thicket and the female, with a low cry, sprang forward and set her long teeth into it. As she ate she muttered low in her throat and kept her green eyes on the thicket wherein crouched the animal who had been so ignominiously driven from his kill.

That big cat was the mate from whom instinct had prompted her to stray and hide some time before her kittens were born. Now that he had found her and close too to where her kittens lay hidden she knew that he would try to find them and kill them, as males of the cat family have a habit of doing, and all the fury in her wild nature awoke and her green eyes, probing the thicket, fairly shot sparks of fire, as her long claws bit deeply into the mucky earth beneath her.

With the male it was different. He knew that the cat eating the bird that was rightly his, was none other then the one who had played and hunted with him but a short time ago and for whom he had diligently sought ever since she had slipped away and hidden from him, and as he sprawled flat on his belly among the leaves and gazed back into those cold uninviting orbs, he purred hoarsely.

By and by he pulled himself a little further forward and gave a low growl of recognition. Perhaps he expected an invitation to join her from his one-time mate, but if so he was disappointed. However, he was by no means discouraged. He slid forward still further and mewed softly. Receiving no notice save a flash from those baleful never shifting eyes that watched his every movement, he was emboldened to commit an indiscretion. He had asked her, as plainly as cat-language could convey it, a question and she had not answered. He felt that silence probably gave consent and in exuberance of joy of the anticipated reunion he rolled out of the thicket into the moon-painted open, for all the world like a foolish, play-crazed kitten would do.

The action was ill-timed, the result fatal to the big cat's hopes. With a spit of anger the mother cat sprang upon him and before he could twist upon his back and defend himself from her attack, down his grey side she inflicted two ragged gashes that smarted and dripped red as he shot like a bullet into the thicket again.

Deep in the sheltering shadows he sat moodily down and watched his mate of used-to-be finish her meal. He was not angry. He was surprised and a little afraid, but not angry. Never in his life had he been angry at the animal who lay just outside and ate of the meal he had provided. Nor was this the first time he had received punishment from her teeth and claws. But he had never fought back because it is not in the nature of wild animals to fight with the females of their kind.

He lay down finally flat upon the leaves and put his round head between his paws. Her baleful eyes were still turned towards his thicket and he looked straight back into them and twitched his short tail, not angrily but coaxingly. He was lonely for her. He wanted her to join him again in the night hunts and the gambols on mooon-sheeted open and tree-top and the long dreamless day-time sleeps in close dark hiding places; this was his one predominating desire and she had repulsed him.

Suddenly he noiselessly arose and lifting his head carefully sniffed the breeze. Then softly he glided down the spicy-scented timber until he reached the open where the moon rays lay like a carpet of silver and the song of the rushing brook rang loud and clear. Carefully he skirted the fringe of heavy timber until his nose detected the track of the mother cat. He back-trailed it until it brought him to the foot of the big button-wood. Reaching up along the trunk of the tree he sharpened his claws by drawing them through its already badly-riddled bark, then, with a huge yawn he sat back and licked the ragged slashes on his side.

All at once his manner changed. His actions up until now, furtive and unhurried, became alert and active. With a single bound he leaped high up the tree-trunk and climbing swiftly to the great fork of its top he vanished in the fissure that marked the entrance to the mother cat's home.

One minute later the big cat stood upon the punk floor of the den. Lying there, their four wee noses close together, were the kittens. He reached down and lifted one of them up in his mouth and at its frantic cry the others opened their weak mouths and spit little puffing spits of defiance at the marauder.

Laymen and Church Union.

The following are a few of the thousands of Presbyterian laymen who heartily approve of the Church Union movement, and permit their names to be attached to the following appeal to the people of Canada:

"We recognize that the basis of union permits and expects existing congregations to continue in every particular exactly as before

"We regret any insinuation that the big city church (whose congregational life will be absolutely unaffected) is selfishly indifferent to a movement which we believe could meet the religious needs of the country and place the united church in a position to assume a national responsibility for the Canada that is to be.

"We believe conditions generally, but especially in the more sparsely settled districts, demand Union for the sake of efficiency and effective leadership, and to avoid unseemly rivalry, overlapping and waste."

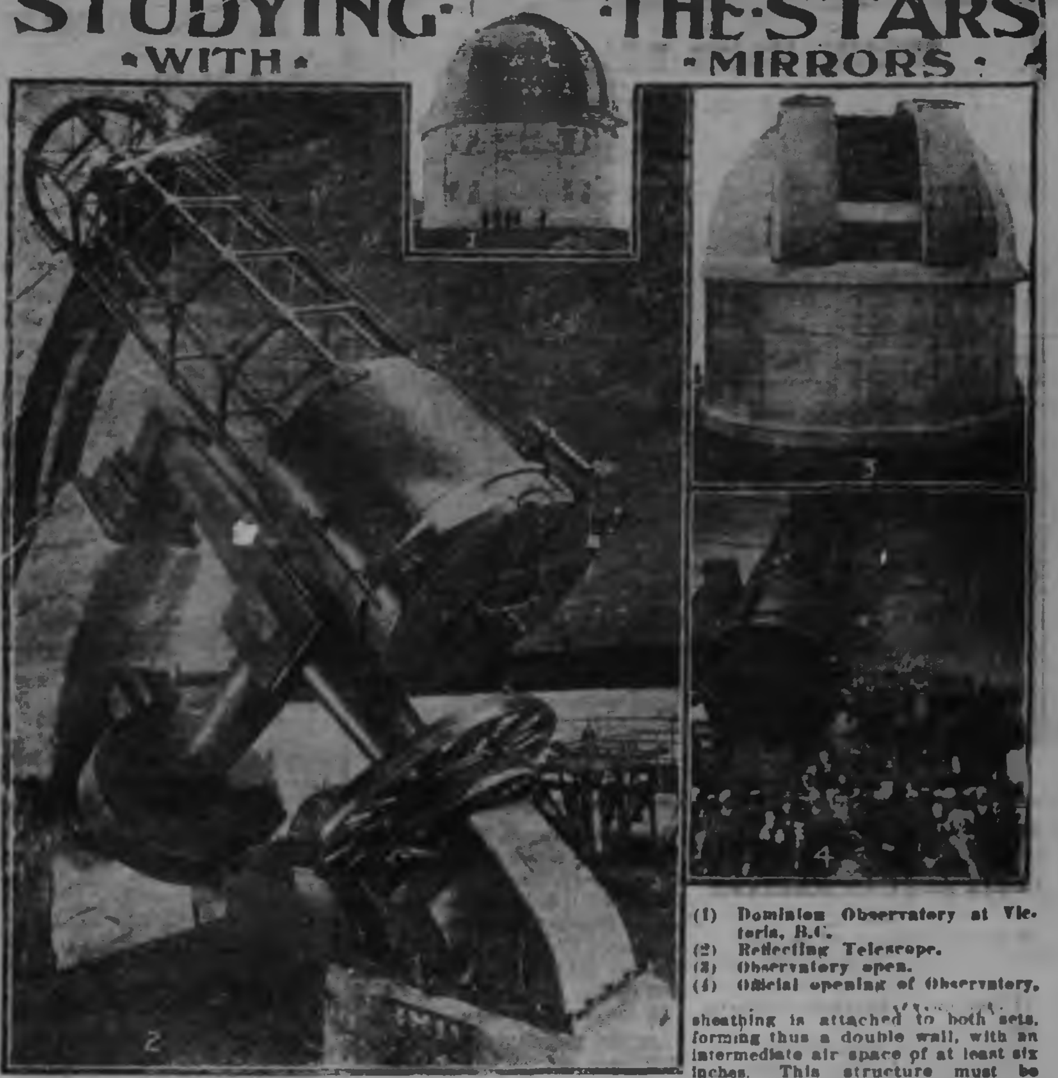
STUDYING THE STARS WITH MIRRORS



(1) Dominion Observatory at Victoria, B.C.
(2) Reflecting Telescope.
(3) Observatory open.
(4) Official opening of Observatory.

IT is with the reflecting telescope that many of the most brilliant discoveries about stars are made. Its construction, however, is not so generally understood as that of the refracting telescope, the form of instrument which is so often seen in the parks or on the streets of our cities and through which the passer-by can get a peep at the moon for the trifling sum of five or ten cents.

The lens at the upper end of a refracting telescope is called the object glass. It collects the rays of light and brings them together at a focus to form an image, which is viewed with a magnifying eyepiece. The largest refracting telescope is the well-known Yerkes instrument. It has an object glass forty inches in diameter.

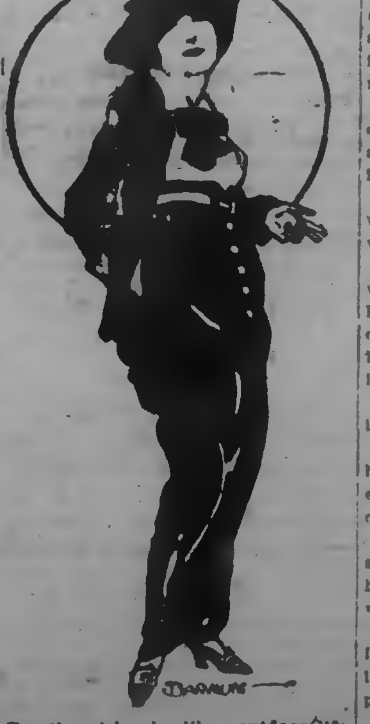
But the biggest reflecting telescope in the world belongs to Canada. This has been erected at Victoria, B.C., which is only a short journey from Vancouver by C. P. R. steamers. In a reflecting telescope, the light is collected by reflection from the surface of a concave mirror. If this surface is ground to a parabolic shape, the rays will all come together at a single point to form an image, just as with the refracting telescope, but this point will be situated on the same side of the mirror as the object, and hence the observer who tries to look at a star will find his head in his own line of vision. In order to overcome this difficulty, a second reflection is made to take place so as to deflect the beam of light and form the image at one side of the tube, where it may easily be examined with an eyepiece. This second reflection is accomplished by means of a plane mirror or "flat" inserted in the upper end of the tube and set at an angle of 45°. This flat will necessarily cut off some of the light falling upon the principal mirror, but since it is not large and since its supports are made as slender as possible, there is no serious loss.

The building of the seventy-two inch Canadian instrument may be taken as an illustration of some of the mechanical difficulties to be surmounted. One shows the mounting. The ends of the polar axis are supported on steel castings which are bolted to the heads of concrete piers. The permanent pier erected at Victoria is shown also. The polar axis must be set parallel to the axis of rotation of the earth. In the latitude of Victoria it makes an angle of more than 48° with the horizon. To the uprights of the framework of the walls are attached horizontal ribs which are for the purpose of supporting the sheet metal walls. The sheathing is attached to both sets, forming thus a double wall, with an intermediate air space of at least six inches. This structure must be made extremely stout in order to bear the enormous weight of the dome. One of the pictures shows the building complete. This is furnished with a system of shutters which with the double wall permit the interior of the building to maintain an even and moderate temperature. Electric motors are used in moving the telescope and dome. These are controlled by push buttons. An important part of the gearing is the clockwork, which carries the telescope with the rotation of the heavens, so that a star can be kept in the field of view as long as it is desired. This must be made so that the telescope moves with absolute steadiness.

The optical parts of the instrument are being made by Brashear at Allegheny. The large mirror is twelve inches thick at the edges and will weigh over four thousand pounds.

The reflecting telescope is used for direct photography, both for recording very faint objects and for getting fine details of brighter objects, such as nebulae. We can also get photographic images of very faint stars, the twentieth magnitude having already been captured. It is also extremely valuable for spectroscopic work. A long exposure is required even with the great forty-inch Yerkes refractor to obtain the spectrogram of a star of the fourth magnitude.

Paris Sends Apache Costume For Outdoors



For the girl, who likes outdoor life there is a very sensational rig sent out from Paris—the "apache."

The costume, to be strictly in the fashion, is made of corduroy with a perfectly plain peg-top skirt with hip pockets. It is form-fitting at the waist like a man's trousers and it is further held by a leather belt, also of masculine design.

A simple white silk shirt with turn-over collar and a soft tie is worn with this skirt. The coat is a conventional box with plenty of patch pockets.

With this costume may be worn the student's beret, an Apache flat cap, or a "long backed tam," although the "beret," which is the hat shown in the picture, is the most picturesque.

THE CARE OF THE PIANO

Extreme heat or cold, or draughts are as fatal to the health of a piano as to that of a human being; therefore it should never be placed too near a fire or a window.

The best place to choose is a part of the room which is out of a draught and where a fairly good temperature is maintained.

The keys should on no account be washed, as that discolors the ivory. If they are stained rub the stains out with a little lemon juice and salt; if sticky, rub well with a dry wash leather.

Do not lift up the keys when dusting. It spoils the "action."

A piano should never be placed hard up against a wall, as that deadens the sound, as do also books or ornaments on it.

No piano can possibly be heard to advantage in a room which is either heavily curtained or overcrowded with furniture.

Do not let baby hang on the piano. It is very amusing to watch his fat little fists banging away—but the piano—that suffers.

A good plan to ensure the correct temperature of the room in which the piano stands is to keep a growing plant there. So long as the plant thrives you can tell that any changes of heat and cold there may be are not sufficient to affect the piano.

Great care should be exercised in the choosing of a tuner, otherwise the instrument may be ruined. It should be tuned every three months. The best plan is to make a yearly contract with a good tuner.

Above all things, keep the top of the piano open, or rust will in time spoil the mechanism. It is only in very large concert halls, however, that it is necessary to have the top of the piano open when playing for "full sound."

Some matrimonial alliances are defensive as well as expensive.

PASTOR FAVORS EQUAL BALLOT

REV. T. H. MITCHELL BELIEVES WOMEN SHOULD HAVE FRANCHISE.

"Women are the great moral sentinels of the world," said Rev. T. H. Mitchell in a sermon at St. Andrew's Church last night. "I believe women should have the ballot and I have been preaching it for twenty years. Give them a chance to mold some of their visions into law."

The subject of the discourse was Pontius Pilate's wife, who was taken as a type of her sex, as showing the capacity for moral alarm, the keen perceptive faculties and the affection of women. In all that throng she alone spoke one word in favor of the persecuted Nazarene.

Mr. Mitchell prayed that the time would soon come when men and women will appear at the polls and settle great moral issues together.

Empress Bus Smashed

The bus of the Empress Hotel was badly smashed early this morning when the horses attached to it ran away. The driver had gone into the hotel to get a couple of grips to take to the C.P.R. station and the slamming of the door of the bus started the horses off and in their fright the bus collided with a post near the C.P.R. station. The horses were not hurt.

BRUTAL GERMANS

Men in the Prison Camps Suffer Horrible Cruelties.

In spite of all the efforts of the Germans, revelations of the life in German prison camps occasionally leak out.

The following details of life in the prison camps of X—— and Z—— reached me, writes a correspondent to The Daily Sketch, from very sure sources. This was the daily routine:

"We got up at 6 a.m.," said the informant, "and were given our cup of 'war' coffee—mostly breadcrumbs and bad chickory—no milk, of course, and just a slice of black bread. We were forced then to stay outside until 11.30.

"It was very cold in winter. We used to be soaked through often with the sleet and rain, for the Germans had stolen all our coats, waterproofs, woollen jerseys, etc., when we were captured.

"One man had no shirt for months except a potato sack he had managed to procure.

"Outside in the prison yard we passed our time trying to dig up stray potatoes, for the yard had formerly been a potato field.

"An odd potato was a great find. We used to hunt round for scraps of wood, too, in case we got a chance to light a little fire.

"At 11.30 came the next meal, consisting of potatoes and water or carrots or turnips and water, a very small quantity for each man, and no meat, of course.

"When we had emptied our half-filled dish of this stuff, we used to line up at the cook-house door to see if there was some left over, each man in turn holding up his little dish.

"But we never knew when the cook, instead of pouring a little in, would turn the hose-pipe on the next man—his German way of showing there was no more to be had.

"The afternoon was spent much as the morning had been, and in watching for the bread cart, in the hope of being able to steal a loaf, for we were simply starving men, ready to risk our lives for bread.

"Many of us still bear the scars of bayonet wounds inflicted in the prison camps, sometimes for stealing a piece of bread, but as often for no reason at all.

"It was in another camp where conditions were pretty similar that I heard of a starving Russian soldier who parted with his military medal, his one treasure, the compensation for all he had endured, for a piece of bread.

"It was in this same camp that, moved with pity for the Russian prisoners who were suffering terribly, each British prisoner, as soon as his parcels from home began to arrive, took one Russian under his protection.

"Their sleeping accommodation, like that of the British and other prisoners, was 'simply a heap of rotten straw on the floor, a blanket, and any amount of lice.'"

"When," said another informant, "the Russians who had been driven out of the camp some time before and forced to work in the German firing line had been literally worked to death, occasionally some were sent back, but only when the Germans found there was nothing more to be got out of them.

"A party who came back in 1916 were in a lamentable state, dragging themselves wearily along. We collected all the soup powders, condensed milk, tea—everything we could possibly spare out of our home parcels—for them. They were glad to get it, poor fellows, though many of them died before they could eat a mouthful.

"A favorite punishment was to make a man lie down flat in the dirtiest part of the courtyard on his face for hours at a time; and, of course, there was also the better-known one of tying a man up by his hands to a post, and then kicking away the block of wood beneath his feet on which he had been made to stand."

DEATH TOLL GROWS.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—It is now stated that there are between 50 and 60 dead and 112 patients in hospitals undergoing treatment as the result of Friday night's explosion.

SUCCESSFUL MOVEMENTS.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—An official statement last night says: "We carried out a successful raid last night east of St. Eloi, dispersed enemy working parties northwest of Neuve Chappele, and carried out effective bombardments of the enemy's post in the neighborhood of La Bassee canal and southeast of Bois Grenier."

SCIENTIFIC WAY TO KEEP YOUR HOMES

Every housewife dreads the awful housecleaning period which comes both spring and autumn. The overstrict, too conscientious housewife observes both periods and religiously cleans every room in her house twice a year. Almost every woman cleans house at least once a year, either in spring or in autumn.

It has always seemed more sensible for city dwellers to have their housecleaning period in the autumn rather than in the spring. In the first place, the average city apartment is closed up for the summer when its occupants leave town during the hot weather.

During the hot weather much more dust sifts through windows and doors from the street and settles on the furniture than in the winter, so that when the autumn arrives another cleaning is needed.

Consequently it has always seemed more to the point to clean your home in the autumn and have it neat and in good order for occupation all through the winter. Now, we might suggest that, instead of devoting ten days or a fortnight to uninterrupted housework, you take a room at a time and do one room a week.

This idea, or one similar to it, originated in the brain of a clever housewife who had dreaded the very idea of the annual housecleaning for years. She had hated all the heavy work, bunched in together for one long stretch. Finally the idea occurred to her that by doing one room a month she would do away with that hated period. This housewife had a six room apartment, and she found that by cleaning one room the first Thursday in every month she gave every room a housecleaning twice a year.

So she started putting the idea into execution. The first month she cleaned the living room, the second the dining room, the third one of the bedrooms, the fourth the kitchen, the fifth the second bedroom and the sixth a little room which was used as a sort of study and the bathroom as well, because both were small enough to do in one day. Then the seventh month she began all over again.

It made no difference in the affairs of the house, because she arose a little earlier one Thursday a month and did extra baking and cooking for that Thursday on the day preceding.

She found that this method did away with all the unsettled state usually attendant on housecleaning periods and, still more important, relieved her from all that after-exhaustion which so often follows a too thorough housecleaning.

When you have the house once in condition you can adopt some such schedule and give up one day a month to cleaning thoroughly one room. You will surely be delighted with this arrangement if you once try it.

Dear Sir.—I am in receipt of your favor of the 10th with policy No. 415000 for $1,000 and cheque for $557.25 covering policy No. 200807. which matured on the 1st of November last.

Allow me to thank you and your excellent company for this very prompt and entirely satisfactory settlement. I have before me as I write the illustration or estimate given me the time the policy was taken out 15 years ago, showing what might be expected under the various options at maturity, and these have in every case been exceeded by actual results. True, the excess is not large, but this merely goes to emphasize the wonderful efficiency with which the business of the company is conducted.

Yours very truly,
"Wm. Cross."

LADS IN TRENCHES ARE NEARER RELIGION THAN PEOPLE AT HAND

Moral Side of the Soldier's Life is Described.

BY MISS WARD

That the religious and moral welfare of the soldier boys at the front is well taken care of, was made clear by Miss Ada L. Ward last night at the Armories, where she addressed a fair sized audience. Stories told by Miss Ward were of scenes on the battle front and in the hospitals in France.

In speaking of the fact that last night's meeting was a recruiting one she complimented the ladies and gray haired men who were present, but wondered where the recruits were to come from.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman, who presided, told of the great work carried on by the ladies in entertaining the men after returning from trench duty, giving words of cheer and furnishing first aid with cups of cocoa or coffee. He related many personal experiences with the ladies, like Miss Ward, who, by means of motor trucks, were able to render so much aid to the weary and footsore men.

Miss Ward started her address by telling of the scenes witnessed by her in England about the time that war was declared, when the Belgian refugees started to arrive there. She had never up to that time realized the meaning of war and those at home had not the slightest conception of its meaning. At that time she longed to do her bit and envied every man she saw in khaki. The Government had given her a chance and, in company with other ladies, she went to France and tried to give what comfort was possible to the men who were fighting to uphold Britain's honor.

Miss Ward said that the women generally were much touched by the first arrivals of Belgians and regretted that their only weapon was their tongues. She felt sure the war would have been over long ago if she had had a chance to talk to the Kaiser. He would stop the war in order to stop the woman's tongue. She gave great praise to the answer the colonies had made to the call of the Motherland.

Nearer to God

Many mothers had objected to their sons enlisting," said Miss Ward, "because they believe that their moral and religious life would be in danger when they got to the front. This was far from the facts. The men in khaki were nearer to religion there than the people at home. "You don't know the meaning of religion here, with your fine churches, lights and good food. You have got to be in danger, face to face with death in order to test your religion." The speaker told of being in eight Zeppelin raids. The people had hurried to the basements for protection and could hear the bombs dropping one by one "You could not do anything else and all around you would be heard men who were strangers to church say, "Good God:" "Oh God;" "My God:" "God save us" and other appealing expression You will see more religion in the men at the front than in all the well-dressed congregations there are at home, said the speaker.

For centuries Protestants have been fighting Catholics. elders fighting elders, wardens fighting among themselves, but all that is forgotten in the true religion found in the trenches. In one tent in France hung the sign, "Divine service held here every Sunday: Church of England at 9 a.m.; Mass for Roman Catholics, 11 a.m.; service for Nonconformists at 3 p.m." and the Jews had a service on Saturday. All differences were forgotten and the speaker pointed out that such a condition would not be thought of in Peterborough- a union religious meeting in one building.

Special Message

The special message which the women of England had sent to the women of Canada was one of thankfulness for numerous gifts of money wheat and fruit. "But," said Mrs Ward, "all the gifts sent fade away in the gift of the brave lads you sent your own flesh and blood. They were the pride of England for their steadfastness, devotion and loyalty."

It was wonderful the unselfishness that the men developed. They shared their parcels and at all times were on the look-out to share their comforts. The men were all thinking of the folks at home—father, mother wife, sister, brother, sweetheart. Miss Ward had seen them on a Sunday look at the time and think that it was Sunday School time and they would all bare heir heads and think of the mother at home. Some of these men had never known what prayer or religion was before. They were nearer to God and one another than ever before.

Great Comradeship

The speaker appealed to the mothers not to hold back the boys who wanted to go on religious or moral grounds. It was found in its true form on the battle front. There was no mother there to see that the socks or underwear were changed, no slippers to get into, nor no bed to climb into. The men were back to primitive conditions. It was marvellous the comradeshipe and the great link of friendship that developed in them. War was different from peace. It took the red hand of war to show the true band of true brotherhood. The home training was never forgotten. Most of the letters to home finished with "God bless you."

Never Complain

Miss Ward told of the time of the great advance on the Somme last July. The wounded were being brought in and they never had a word of complaint. Give them a cigarettes or a piece of chewing gum and they would grin and bear the pain. The men developed a great manhood at the front. The soldier training told.

In conclusion Miss Ward appealed to every physically fit man to get into khaki, to every mother to send her son, and to the girls to have nothing to do with a man who did not try to do his duty to King and counry.

The 247th band, which had contributed many delightful selections during the evening finished the meeting with God Save the King.

GENERAL BRUSILOFF

Addressing officers of the Russian Staff on the southwestern front. Gen. Brusiloff, according to The Russkoe Slovo, uttered the following prediction: —

"Information at my disposal, and my personal conviction warrant me in saying I am certain— just as certain as that I am standing before you —that during the coming year the enemy will be finally and completely routed."

JELLY ARTS.

When and How to Make This Best of All Bread Trimmings.

Jellies should be made in a porcelain lined kettle. Cut up the fruit and nearly cover with water. Cover the kettle and boil slowly until the fruit is broken into pieces. Put the fruit juice and all into a cheesecloth bag and let drip overnight. Do not be too economical about getting out every bit of juice, for the more you squeeze it the cloudier your jelly will be when finished. As a general rule allow equal measures of juice and sugar. Use the best granulated sugar. Put the juice on to the fire and after it begins to boil let it continue so for twenty minutes. Do not cover the juice and do not let it boil too hard. Skim frequently. At the same time you put the juice on place the sugar in a pan in the oven to heat. Stir up from the bottom, but if it browns a little on top it will not matter. When the time of boiling is up throw the sugar into the juice, stirring constantly. It will hiss as it falls in and melt at once. Have ready a heated pitcher with a piece of cheesecloth wet with hot water on top.

Put the jelly through this strainer. Have the jelly glasses standing in a pan of hot water, take out and drain, then turn jelly in from the pitcher. Fill the glasses full and set away to cool. Let jelly stand in the sun uncovered for a whole day. Never attempt to make jelly in damp or cloudy weather if firmness and clearness are desired. To test jelly drop a little in a saucer and set in a cool place. If it does not spread, but remains rounded and jells, it is finished. Before covering the glasses set on top of the jelly a round of white paper dipped in alcohol or brandy. If these rules are followed carefully no one need have poor or cloudy jelly.

OBITUARY

JOS. H. COBB IS DEAD AGED 80

LIVED ALL HIS LIFE HERE, FOR MANY YEARS AMONG FLOWERS.

On Saturday evening at 8.30, there passed away at his late residence, No. 7, Grand Central Apartments, Mr. Jos. H. Cobb, an old and very highly respected resident of Peterborough, in the 80th year of his age

Mr. Cobb was born and raised in the city and had filled the position of councillor for a number of years. He will be remembered by many for his business activities as florist on Aylmer St., a work that he took great delight in. He leaves to mourn his departure an aged widow, to whom much sympathy is extended by her many friends and acquaintances.

The funeral will take place from the late residence on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30. Service conducted by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., pastor of George St. Methodist Church, of which Mr. Cobb was a member. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

E. W. GOLLOP IS DEAD AT NORVAL

FATHER OF ROBERT AND JOHN R. GOLLOP OF THIS CITY.

Eli Westlake Gollop, father of Messrs. Robt. Gollop and John R. Gollop, of this city, died in Norval, Ont., on Saturday at the ripe old age of 85. He was born in Somersetshire, England, but when a small boy came to Canada and located with his parents at Norval. He started in the harness business for himself when a young man, and continued it until a few years ago.

He is survived by his wife and seven children: Mrs. (Dr.) Webster, Mrs. (Dr.) J. B. Black, Dr. Benjamin, of Norval, John R. and Robert Gollop, of Peterborough, Eli James Gollop, of Victoria, B. C., and George of North Bend, Neb.

The funeral will take place in Norval on Wednesday afternoon.

EDWARD HENRY, FORMER PETERBORO' RESIDENT PASSES AT BUFFALO.

The death occurred in Buffalo, N. Y., on Saturday, Jan. 20th, of Edward Henry, of that city, formerly of Peterborough. The deceased is survived by two sisters, Elizabeth and Ellen. The remains will arrive in this city on the 8.40 C. P. R. train this evening and the funeral will be held from the residence of Mr Henry Carveth, 220 Charlotte street, at 9 a.m. tomorrow to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

MRS. FRED W. SCOTT

Mary E. McEwen, daughter of the late James B. and Mrs. McEwen, of Smith township, and wife of Mr. Fred W. Scott, residing on the Chemong Road, died at Nicholls Hospital on Sunday. Mrs. Scott entered the hospital last Monday and underwent an operation on Tuesday from which she made a splendid rally, and high hopes for complete recovery were entertained On Saturday, however, the patient took a turn for the worse and the end came yesterday.

The late Mrs. Scott was well known and highly respected throughout the township. She was a faithful member and worker at Gilmour Memorial Church. Surviving, besides her husband, are three children, Jean, Ralph and Keith; three brothers, Edward of Smith, Sergt. Roy who enlisted at Prince Albert and is now in England, and Albert of this city. The funeral will be held from the family residence on Tuesday, Jan. 23, to Little Lake Cemetery. Service at the house at 1.30.

MRS. MARY CROWLEY.

Mrs. Mary Crowley died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. William Lynch, Cedar street, on Saturday evening. She was born in Peterborough sixty-one years ago and had lived here until a short time ago, when she went to Copper Cliff, where her son, Rev. T. J. Crowley, is parish priest.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. William Lynch, Peterborough, Mrs. Shea, Sudbury, and Miss Crowley, Copper Cliff, and two sons, William Crowley, who is in France with the engineers' corps, and Rev. Father T. J. Crowley, Copper Cliff.

The funeral took place this morning to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

At the cathedral Rev. Fr. Crowley celebrated Mass. Rev. Fr. Phelan was deacon and Rev. J. J. O'Brien subdeacon. Dean McColl, Rev. Fr. McHugh and Rev. Fr. Collins were in the sanctuary and Bishop O'Brien spoke of the useful and God-fearing life of the deceased.

JOHN H. WALTON.

John H. Walton died this morning at the family residence, 490 Sherbrooke street, after a short illness. He was born in Durham county and had lived in Peterborough for about four years. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Francis Perkins, of Douro, and Miss Pearl who lives at home. Mrs. J. Brown, of Port Hope, is a sister, and the three brothers are Thomas, of Saskatchewn, Ralph, of Michigan, and William, of Illinois.

The funeral will take place on Thursday morning at 10:30 to the G. T. R. station, when the remains will be sent to Port Hope. The funeral services will be conducted by Rev. R. B. Grobb.

EDWARD W. TRAILL.

The death is announced of Mr William Edward Traill, son of the late Thomas and Catharine Parr Traill, the authoress of Westove, Orkney, on Jan. 14, aged 72.

Deceased had spent many years in the employ of the Hudson Bay Co. He is survived by his widow and nine children.

The Dignified Course.

An army examiner once had a candidate before him who apparently was unable to answer the simplest question. At last the examiner lost his temper and, with sarcastic emphasis, lost on the youth before him, said:

"Suppose, sir, that you were a captain in command of a company of infantry; that in your rear was an impassable abyss; that on either side of you towered perpendicular rocks of untraversable height; that before you stood the enemy, a hundred men to each one of yours. What, sir, would you do in this emergency?"

"Sir," said the aspirant to military honors, "I should resign."—Pearson's Weekly.

MAN 150,000 YEARS OLD

Dr. Hans Reck, of the Geological Institute of Berlin University, has discovered at Oldoway, in the north of German East Africa, a human skeleton which he computes to be 150,000 years old. He brought the skull home with him among his linen for greater safety, while the rest of the skeleton and the animal remains found near it are still upon their way.

It is a wonderful skull, says the "Times" Berlin correspondent, and wonderfully preserved. It is long and narrow, with an unmistakably negroid jaw, and the back of the head finely developed and deep. The ribs and breast are akin to those of an ape, but the skull is unmistakably human.

There are indications that the muscles of the neck were enormously strong, and that the man did not walk quite upright. His thirty-six teeth are complete and beautifully preserved. There are marks upon them as if they had been filed. The formation of the eye-sockets and the bridge of the nose is akin to that of the primitive African bushman.

The man was found lying on his back with his head turned over to the right, his hands before his face, and his legs drawn up in a crouching position. Dr. Reck is almost certain that the position is not one of burial. On the spot where the man was found there was once a lake, and it is conjectured that the man was drowned. The body was gradually covered with deposits of sand and chalk, which in the course of centuries turned into the volcanic tufa in which the skeleton was found.

KILLING BEEF FASTER THAN PRODUCTION

CONSTANTLY INCREASING PRICES ARE PREDICTED.

The people of Canada and the United States face a meat famine if the present inroads on both countries' supply of cattle and hogs continues, according to a review of the livestock situation issued on Saturday by Clay, Robinson & Co., one of the world's largest livestock commission houses, in Chicago. The note is a strong alarm to the people and bears out the request of the Hon. Martin Burrill, minister of agriculture, that the farm[illegible] [illegible] [illegible]r cattle resources. Constantly increasing prices are predicted.

"There is no doubt that we are killing our beef faster than we are producing it," the report reads, "and it can have but one meaning—higher prices. Receipts are not running as high as a year ago, meaning that the available supplies are decreasing. The tendency is to send stock of indifferent flesh to market on account of high prices, and therefore the average beef animal does not carry as much actual meat as the average animal a year ago.

"Packers are taking anything that has any 'kill' to it at all. Demands upon our supplies from abroad continue heavily, with no diminution in home consumption. Serious inroads have been made upon our beef supplies, and our potential beef makers are daily being cut down in the steady sacrifice of cattle regardless of their condition.

Sunshine Through Clouds

We are apt to take cheerfulness rather as a matter of course, as a natural attribute of certain temperaments. We never know how hardly it may be attained nor through what sorrows it may struggle to the surface, compelled there so that you and I may not suffer too.

Electric Charwoman

Machinery has now invaded the field of the charwoman for an electric scrubbing machine has just come into use. It is a little push cart, supplied with electric power through a cable connected with a lamp socket.

The operator simply pushes it over the marble floor and controls its operations by levers on the cart handle. A set of brushes revolve on the floor, while a little stream of water trickles down through them from a tank.

Powdered soap is fed to the water in easily-regulated amounts. As the cart is pushed ahead the dirty water is swept up to a pipe and a little pump sucks it up from the floor.

To prevent milk from turning sour, drop into it a piece of loaf sugar.

BOYS OF Y.M.C.A. ENJOY SPORTS

TEA IN BUILDING AFTER FUN AT JACKSON PARK.

Saturday afternoon the members of the Junior Schoolboys Bible Club of the Y.M.C.A. held a most enjoyable outing to Jackson Park. A good program of sports was run off, consisting of snow shoe, ski and toboggan races. After the sports the boys had a scouting game through the woods, which they thoroughly enjoyed. At 5 o'clock the boys returned to the building, where a good supper was waiting for them, which had been provided by their parents. There are 56 boys on the Junior Bible Club roll and 48 were on hand when the signal was given for supper.

Tonight the Senior Employed Boys gymnasium class at 8. The attendance of this class has been very encouraging and every member is requested to be on hand at 8 p.m. sharp.

Wednesday night the Standard Efficiency Test program will consist of an exhibition of coins, stamps, minerals, different kinds of wood, and articles in their various stages of manufacture. The older boys of the Y are especially invited to be present and help to make the evening a success.

Wise is the chap who catches on at the proper time and lets go at the psychological moment.

Everybody wants something for nothing, yet very few people are satisfied with things they got that way.

What is the Difference?

When a man deserts his wife and children, leaving them without support, the world regards him with contempt.

What is the differnt between desertion and death, if the wife and children are left without support, in either case when the husband and father failed through negligence to provide for them?

The above may sound a little harsh; I guess it does; but it may not have struck you that way before, and if the husband is insurable, is there really any difference?

Answer this vital question now that your attention has been called to it, in a practical way, by writing, telephoning or calling on the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada as with its Eighty Odd Millions of Assets, the largest amount held by any Canadian company, there is no safer, sounder or more generous and faithful custodian to be found to administer your wishes with regard to your wife and children.

Value of Education.

"Every day spent in school the children earn $9."

This statement was made by Wisconsin's state superintendent, who bases his estimate on the official records of the bureau of education at Washington. Here is what he offers as proof of the statement:

"Uneducated laborers earn on the average $500 a year for forty years, a total of $20,000.

"High school graduates earn on an average $1,000 a year for forty years, a total of $40,000.

"This education requires twelve years of school of 180 days each, a total of 2,160 days. If 2,160 days at school add $20,000 to the income for life, then each day at school adds $9.02.

"Forceful as this summarization of earnings is," said the superintendent, "it tells but one side of the story—the money side. Back of this can be seen improved standards of living, more intelligent and progressive communities and a stronger national life."—Chicago Herald.

Icy Cold Winters.

In the winter of 1780 New York harbor was frozen over and teams passed from New York to Staten Island. New York bay was frozen over in the latter part of January, 1821, and sleighs passed over the Hudson river from Cortlandt street to Jersey City. On Feb. 3, 1844, Long Island sound was frozen over a few miles above New York. On Jan. 20, 1852, the East river was frozen over, and hundreds passed over both ways between Brooklyn and New York. On Feb. 10 and 11, 1856, the East river was frozen over so that the people passed over freely. On Jan. 23, 1867, the East river was bridged over with ice, and 5,000 persons passed over. On Feb. 12, 1875, the East river was completely bridged over for over three and one-half hours. During the blizzard of March 12, 1888, the East river was frozen over so completely for several hours that hundreds passed over both ways.—Magazine of American History.

Pants 100 Years Old.

Tailors say this is the 100th anniversary of the introduction of masculine attention to the prevalent style of trousers. The name of the inventor has been forgotten. Prior to 100 years ago getting into and out of a pair of breeches was something like getting into and out of a safe. Often a man, after laboriously inserting himself in his breeches, found he had them on backwards. They were uncomfortable, to say the least. The forgotten genius who figured out a style of pants that allowed free and uninterrupted ingress and egress by the wearer is estimated to have saved the men of the pants-wearing countries 1,675,-969 years 4 months and 16 days of time, since October 19, 1816.

JUPITER AND THE WHITE SWAN

By ANNE GAVEL

LITTLE Katheline was a great story-teller; you see she came from Ireland and over there they love to hear stories so much that nearly always somebody is telling one. Of course there are a great variety of good stories told but Katheline liked to tell fairy stories best.

When this little Irish girl came to live with her cousins in Canada she saw a great many things that were new and strange to her and she was filled with a great wonder, but after a time she learned that many things which she had seen and known in Ireland were strange to her Canadian cousins, so it was not so bad for her after all.

One thing she was surprised to learn and that was that they had never heard of Jupiter and the White Swan. Gladys, her eldest cousin, said that she had heard of a star called Jupiter but never a boy and as for swans, she had seen one or two in a zoo although they did not look at all like birds that would get to be the very best of friends with a boy.

But Katheline shook her head gravely and said, "Jupiter was a little prince who lived in a castle in the big forest and the little white swan was his mother whom the wicked witch had changed into a big, snow-white bird."

"Tell us about them, Kathie," begged the children and Katheline, pleased at being asked, smoothed down her apron and drawing the smallest of her cousins over against her knee, commenced:

"A long time ago, so long that nobody remembers when it all happened, there lived in a thick forest a wicked king who ruled over a big island. On this islands he had a great castle and in this castle lived a beautiful queen.

The queen's name was Snow-white, because she was so fair, and to her one morning was given a little son. She named him Jupiter because he was so bright and beautiful, but she kept him closely hidden because the King had said that if ever a son was born to him he would kill him, for the wicked king was afraid that he might grow up a good and true man and that his subjects would place him in his stead as ruler of the great kingdom.

"One day when the king chanced to be on a deer-hunt in the forest he met an old, old woman who leaned on a staff and muttered to herself as she hobbled along. 'Who are you?' he asked. 'I am the witch of Trollilver forest,' she replied. At this the king called his attendants and bade them take the old witch to the castle and burn her at the stake in the courtyard.

"At this command the old witch began to scream and declare that if she were burned to death the king would be sorry. 'Save me, O king,' she cried and I will tell you something that you do not know, spare my life and I will tell you who lives who will some day dispose you; let me live and I will help you save your kingdom.'

"At this the king held up his hand and the attendants released the old witch. 'Now, O king, come with me,' said the old woman, 'and I will show you your queen nursing the prince, who, if he lives, will some day be king of your domain.'

"'Lead on,' said the king, 'and if I find you speak true, I shall soon put him out of the way and you will be rewarded.'

"The old woman hobbled forward and the king followed, and after a time they came to an open spot in the forest wherein stood a big house of yellow glass. Through the glass the king saw his queen nursing a beautiful boy on her knees and singing to him. This was the song she sung:

"'Safely hidden from the eyes
Of the cruel king
You will grow to manhood,
You will rule the kingdom,
Little Jupiter.'

"When he heard this song the king was very angry. 'I shall kill both,' he said to the witch.

"'Nay, Sire,' she replied, 'if you do that their suffering is soon o'er. Change the boy into a white swan and he will weep because he has no mother and she will weep because she has no child.'

"'But how can I?' he asked.

"'I will do it,' she said; 'see, I have a little white powder here. I will make myself invisible and enter the glass house. I will drop the powder in the baby's drinking cup. When he cries for food the mother will let him drink from the cup. Then he will fly away through the window.'

"'Good,' said the king. 'Come to me to-morrow at the castle and tell me the prince is a swan, and the queen a broken-hearted mother, for I must away. But fail to do this thing you have promised and you will be burned at the stake.'

"When she was gone the witch made herself invisible and entered the glass house. She dropped the powder in the prince's drinking cup and came away.

"Now it chanced as the queen rocked her sleeping boy that she got very thirsty and noticing the cup close beside her she lifted it to her lips and drank a long draught from it.

"Then something happened. The beautiful queen changed into a great white swan and the prince slipped to the floor. Out through the window sailed the big bird with wings spread wide and on to where a blue lake nested in the very heart of the forest.

"When the prince woke up, he found his mother gone, and sitting down in a corner, he cried as though his heart would break.

"'Why do you cry, pretty boy?' spoke a small voice, and looking up, the prince saw the tiniest woman his eyes had ever beheld, standing before him.

"'My mother has gone away,' he answered; 'I am left alone and now my father, the king, will find me and put me to death.'

"'Never fear,' said the fairy—for of course the little woman was a fairy—'I have sent my sisters to him and they will cast a spell over him that will make him sleep. Take this red berry,' she commanded, handing the prince a little red ball about the size of a pea, 'and go to the blue lake in the centre of the forest. There you will see a great white swan. This is your mother. You must try and coax her to eat this berry. When she eats it she will change back into the beautiful queen again and you will have your mother.'

"The next moment she had vanished and the prince sat rubbing his eyes thinking he had dreamed until he found the berry tightly held in his hand. So up he got and journeyed through the deep forest until at last he saw the blue lake glimmering through the trees.

"Out on the bosom of the lake floated a big white swan. He called to it but it seemed frightened and made as though it would fly away but before it could rise from the water a voice spoke in the prince's ear and told him what to do. So he called:

"'Mother, mother, do not fly,
I am little Jupiter.'

"At the words the big swan settled down again and came slowly swimming in towards the shore on the edge of which the prince knelt waiting. When she was close in she stopped and again made as though she would fly away, but the prince, remembering the fairy's words, sang again:

"'Mother, mother, come to me,
I am little Jupiter.'

"He held out the little red berry and the swan, swimming close up, opened her red mouth and swallowed it. The next moment the prince's mother held her boy in her arms.

"As thus they stood, there came the tramp of horses' feet and a body of armed men from the castle rode up to them. The captain dismounted from his white horse and kneeling down before the queen delivered a message from the king.

"I was that he, the king, had promised the good fairies that he would withdraw from the throne and let the prince reign in his stead if the prince and queen would come back to the castle and live with him.

"This they were glad to do and the young prince was made ruler over the kingdom of Trollilver and all lived happily together ever afterward. As for the old witch, she was never heard of again."

Feminine Facts

In Berlin there is a novel store where the pictures of women who wish to become brides are exhibited.

England has many women employed in unique trades. For instance, there are 86 women plumbers there 221 blacksmiths, 56 carpenters and 14 masons.

Women's colleges in the United States are said to be better equipped than those of men.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

PURIFICATION OF WATER.

THE safest and cheapest form of water purification is Prevention. In selecting a water supply for any community the source should be well considered. Avoid any chance of pollution by human sewage.

The various means of purification of a polluted water supply are given as follows:

(1) Boiling. This is a certain method and most useful in the household where the water supply is not above suspicion.

(2) Chlorination. This is a very satisfactory and cheap means of emergency treatment. It is carried out by the use of hypochlorite of lime 30 lbs. to each million gallons of water or by the use of liquid chlorine. Its only disadvantage is the fact that it gives a disagreeable taste to some waters. It has no ill effect on the user.

In treating small quantities of water the following plan may be used: A level teaspoonful of chloride of lime should be rubbed into a teacupful of water. This solution should be diluted with three cupfuls of water, and a teaspoonful of the whole quantity added to each two-gallon pailful of drinking water. This will give .4 or .5 parts of free chlorine to a million parts of water, sufficient to destroy in ten minutes all typhoid and colon bacilli or other dysentery-producing organisms in the water. Moreover, all traces of the chlorine will rapidly disappear.

This method of purification has been tested with Toronto Bay water inoculated with millions of bacteria. Every germ has been destroyed, and it has been unnecessary to boil the water.

This method should be very valuable for miners, prospectors, campers, soldiers, and those living in summer resorts where the condition of the waters might not be above suspicion.

(3) Ozone. This form of water treatment is extensively used in Petrograd, Russia, and in Paris, France. The water is frequently filtered before being treated. The method when properly carried out gives satisfactory results, but is expensive.

(4) Ultra Violet Ray. In the use of this plan of treatment the water must first be filtered. It is a useful but somewhat expensive method of purification.

(5) Storage. Storage of water for a period of 30 days greatly improves its quality. A portion of the water supply of the City of London, England, is after filtration treated in this way with good results.

(6) Filtration. There are two plans of filtration. In the one called Slow Sand Filtration the water is passed slowly through beds of sand four to five feet thick to under drains which collect it. The bacteria and other impurities are removed by the top layers of sand. From time to time the sand is taken off, washed, and re-used.

In the other form of filtration known as the Rapid Sand type or Mechanical filtration the water is first treated with alum or sulphate of iron, in order to produce sedimentation of bacteria and impurities, and is afterwards passed rapidly through a layer of sand which when dirty is cleansed by a reverse flow of air and water.

Either plan of filtration will give satisfactory results with the waters to which they are respectively adapted. In a general way the Mechanical filter may be said to give better results with river water, while the Slow Sand filter operates more satisfactorily with lake water. The cost in either case is not excessive. In the case of a Slow Sand Filter the first cost is greater; a Mechanical filter, costing less initially, is more expensive in operation.

ROLL OF HONOR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the majority of them are now in Europe, bravely battling for Canada and the Empire.

DOLLAR DAY DOLLAR DAY DOLLAR DAY

Thursday Next JANUARY 25th Will be another of Peterborough's Wonderful DOLLAR DAY EVENTS

The one and only one day during the entire year when your Dollar purchases more than on any other opportunity. The preparations we have made to eclipse all past Dollar Day occasions are on a magnificent scale. Every department from basement to fourth storey of our big store is putting forth every effort to do its share to roll up the biggest Dollar Day we have ever undertaken on past Dollar Day events. Customers who bought generously from us were luckly enough to capture a large number of the big Cash Prizes a list of which and full explanations are set forth elsewhere in this evening's paper.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

PETERS—GENGE.

A very quiet wedding took place at the Trinity Methodist Church parsonage on Saturday afternoon, when the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, united in marriage Hazel Mary Genge, daughter of Mr. Charles Genge, to Thomas Harry Peters, son of Mr. James Peters, of Peterborough.

After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Peters will take up residence in this city.

Mrs. Henry M. Carver of Caledonia who was called to attend the funeral of her sister, Mrs. Hugh Mackey, is spending a few days with her niece, Miss Alice Carver, 592 Charlotte street.

Mrs. J. W. Rusling of Bay City, Mich., and Mrs. Griffin and Mr. Myles Fitzgerald of Hamilton have returned home after attending the funeral of their sister, Mrs. Hugh Mackey, of Otonabee

A reception will be held at the Central School this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock by the teachers' guild in honor of Miss Ada Ward, who is here on the invitation of the guild and will lecture at the Collegiate Institute hall tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. W. and Mr. Aird Flavelle of Lindsay were visitors to the city today.

Messrs. Robert and John Gollop have gone to Norval, Ont., to attend the funeral of their father, the late J. W. Gollop, who died Saturday night

Mrs. H. D. Robertson of Chentu, China, will deliver an address on missionary work at George St. Methodust Church tonight.

The annual meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held on Friday afternoon at 3.30 in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. A full attendance of members is requested.

Miss Emma Morrow is spending a week in Toronto.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre is spending a few days in Toronto.

Lieut. Hugh J. McLaughlin of Toronto, who is well known here, is unofficially reported to have been promoted to the rank of major at the front and to have been awarded the D.S.O.

Miss Carrie Cruikshanks entertained about twenty young people to a skating party at Jackson Park and afterwards at her home at 626 George St., a pleasant time being spent by all.

Mr. R. R. Hall is in Ottawa on business.

The King's Daughters held a successful tea at the Empress Hotel on Saturday afternoon, the hostesses being Mrs. Cameron, Mrs. Carruthers, Miss Munro and Miss Pearce, who were assisted by Mrs. Clarkson, Miss Cubbitt, Miss Aylmer, Miss Mather and Miss Spence.

Mr. Kenneth Crane has resigned his position with the Dominion Bank at Windsor with the intention of joining one of the military units.

The sock shower held at the residence of Mrs. G. H. Thompson on Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., was most successful. About 160 pairs were brought in and will be sent to the Secours National this week. The regent and members of the Chapter wish to offer their warmest thanks to all those who so kindly sent in socks. The number of contributors is too long to give in detail, but special mention must be made of a donation of the Progressive Club of 30 pairs and another from the Thursday Club of 19 pairs.

BRIGHT S.S. ANNIVERSARY AT GEORGE STREET CHURCH

Large Congregations Out to Hear Rev. E. A. Pearson.

George Street Methodist Church Sunday School and congregation gave Rev. A. A. Pearson, B.A., of Chatham, two large audience when he preached at the anniversary services on Sunday. In the morning the scholars and officers and Grace Sunday School met with the members of the parent school in the hall of the church and marched to the auditorium of the edifice, and, with many of the congregation, took part in an exceedingly bright service over which Dr. Middleton, superintendent, and Mr. A. F. Hagerman, assistant superintendent, presided. The Sunday School orchestra, under the direction of Mr. W. H. Cunningham, contributed to the musical part of the services. Miss R. McKee presided at the piano, and Mr. J. H. Renwick led in the singing and presided at the organ for the music by the choir, which included a solo, Beautiful Land of Heaven sung by Miss Rae Gallagher. Mildred and Hazel Trethervey, the two little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. A. Trethervey, sang The Children's Friend is Jesus, in clear and unfaltering voices. Mr. S. R. Armstrong read the morning lesson.

Rev. Mr. Pearsons' remarks were mainly for the young people. In opening he referred to his former associations with the church of seven years ago. The theme of his address was Follow Me, the golden text for the day. His divisions were: What is a Christian; How may I become a Christian; How early may I become a Christian; How may I know I am a Christian; and How may I continue to be a Christian. To make clear his points the preacher used a number of illustrations, and he was rewarded by receiving the rapt attention of the children.

In impressing upon the young people the need for watchfulness and prayer in order to always remain a Christian, Mr. Pearson pictured a foot race in which a contestant might be a good sprinter but would be unable to finish. He said he was a sport in his young days and he had three sons, all capital sports. Then, growing reminiscent, Mr. Pearson referred to the walking contests Gordon Matthews and the other boys used to hold on the streets when he was pastor here seven years ago.

dress and as an anniversary talk it

It was a cleverly constructed address could not have been improved on.

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Pearson discussed the book by Colson Cunningham, entitled, The Child, the Wise Man and the Devil, a book that pictures the world without Christ. The preacher drew a picture of the world in such a state and leading up to the war situation in the world today, made the point that because of that condition Christianity should not be thrown away. He said we are on the verge of a new discovery, and that is the need of Jesus Christ for the nations of the world. Christ will continue his rule until all his enemies are beneath His feet and His Kingdom has been established.

Mrs. J. H. Renwick took the solo of the anthem and also sang Jesus Lover of My Soul (Tours) as a solo. The orchestra was again present and played three selections.

The pastor, Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., was absent in Toronto, preaching sermons at Broadway Tabernacle of which Rev. W. R. Young, D.D., a former pastor of George Street Church, is in charge.

BRIG. MOREHEN HERE

Brig. Morehen of Montreal will conduct a special meeting at the S. A. Temple tonight at 8 o'clock. An enrollment of recruits will be the special feature.

The songster brigade will render some selections and an address by the brigadier will follow. He will also make final arrangements for the Young People's Day, to be conducted by Commissioner Richards next Sunday, to which delegates from Campbellford, Tweed, Lindsay and Belleville will attend.

REV. E. A. PEARSON, B.A.

Daddy Long-Legs in Popular Favor

COMEDY PROVIDES NUMEROUS PLEASANT LAUGHS.

"Daddy Long-Legs" is the sort of comedy that wears well with the public, says a Toronto criticism of the play which comes to the Grand next Saturday matinee and night. It wears well because its humor is pleasing and its sentiment wholesome. Other dramas that pique the curiosity may do better on the occasion of their first visit to a city, but they pass and are gone. They are not good for a second visit, but the play made from Jean Webster's little book continues to come season after season. That has been the experience of "Daddy Long Legs" in Toronto. It is back in the Grank Opera House this week for the third local engagement, having been the last play presented in the old Princess Theatre, and then a few months later one of the most successful offerings shown in the Grand last season. The appeal of the little comedy is the appeal of the most beloved of fairy tales. There is not a child anywhere whose heart is not moved to joy by the sight of the humble and persecuted being exalted and avenged. No Cinderella ever made a stronger bid for sympathy than Judy in the orphanage, treated as a drudge and maid of all work. Then there come the three acts of Judy triumphant—she triumphs in society, she triumphs in literature and she triumphs in love. What more could any young girl ask for her heroine? The comedy provides many pleasant laughs. The scene in the boarding school, where the irresponsible girls give a tea party is particularly good-humored and merry, but "Daddy Long-Legs" deserves its success as a whole because it provides delightful memories of a gentle and exhilarating evening at the play house. We have seen a succession of Judys, all of them very charming and satisfying. The first was Miss Rene Kelly, who played the role here with Mr. Miller in the spring of 1915. It was she who introduced Judy to London, where the play is enjoying considerable success at the Duke of York's Theatre, the British public apparently finding it an amiable antidote for war worries. Last season we saw Miss Ruth Chatterton who originated the role and who relinquished it to appear in "Come Out of the Kitchen," which has shaped into one of the big successes of the New York season. Her place is taken in the production seen here this week by Miss Eva Walton, a newcomer here, who will undoubtedly be well liked. She will fit the notions conceived of Judy by readers of Jean Webster's novel, and that must be the test of an actress playing in a dramatized story. Mr. Henry Miller is the manager presenting the play, which means that the cast surrounding Miss Walton has been carefully selected. "Daddy Long-Legs" is frail as drama, but as an entertainment it leaves a sweet taste behind it.

CANADIANS HOLD ASCENDENCY

CANADIANS' ASCENDENCY OVER THE GERMANS IS MOST MARKED

Continued Activity of Artillery and Infantry Weakens Morale of Enemy and Paves Way for Victories to Come

VIGOR AND PURPOSE TO TRAINING

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 23. — The following communication has been received from the Canadian War Records Office, London: "The past week has been one of normal trench warfare. Normal trench warfare of today, however, is very different from normal trench warfare of a year ago. Everyhwere the ascendancy of our troops over the enemy is most marked, the evidence of prisoners is a most eloquent testimony to the ascendancy of our patrols, while bombardments of the enemy's lines which a year ago would have merited detailed description as important operations, are today affairs of almost daily occurrence. This continual activity of our artillery and infantry has undoubtedly weakened the morale of the enemy and is paving the way for victories to come.

A great feature of the life of the men at the front is the training which they carry out when in reserve. There is vigor and purpose about this training which are quite remarkable. Men who have faced the enemy in battle appear to realize what training will mean to them, and by this training, the purpose of which is constantly in the minds of all, sure seeds of victory are being sown."

1220 PATIENTS TREATED AT NICHOLLS HOSPITAL INCREASE IN YEAR OF 297

Generrl Excellence of Institution Wins Approval of Inspector.

COMMITTEES

The annual meeting of the Nicholls Hospital Trust was held in the Dominion Bank Chambers yesterday afternoon.

There were present W. H. Hill, R. Fair, W. Madill, Thos. Brown, John McClelland, E. B. Fowler, Dr. Malcolm McCulloch and Wm. Aldridge.

In the absence of the chairman Mr. R. Hall, through illness, Mr. W. H. Hill was voted to the chair.

The chairman said in part: "The past year has been one of much activity at the Nicholls Hospital. During the year there were treated 1220 patients, being 297 over that of the previous year, and constituting the largest number treated in the history of the hospital The establishment here of the 93rd Batt. was in some measure responsible for the increase, but there is no doubt our people are becoming more and more appreciative of the advantages of a hospital in times of illness. We were also able to do considerable for the wives and dependents of those on active service, in which the medical staff contributed their services and assisted materially in the work.

Early in the year our lady superintendent, Miss Beamish, "heard the call," and enlisted for overseas service. Our last reports are that she is well and pursuing her work in the neighborhood of Saloniki. Miss Sanderson has carried on the superintendent's duties with much acceptance and at a time when the demands made upon her were heavy and of a trying nature. She has been

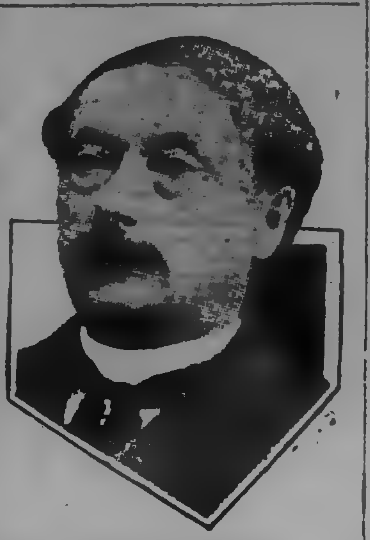
TWO GERMAN AIRPLANES ARE BROUGHT DOWN

ONE FELL INSIDE FRENCH LINES NEAR NAVARIN FARM.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 23.—(Official statement): Artillery fire was rather spirited between the Oise and Aisne. The night was calm over most of the front. One of our pilots yesterday brought down a German airplane, which fell in our lines near Navarin Farm. In the region of Montmedy another German machine, subjected to machine gun fire at close range by one of our airplanes, was crushed as it fell to the ground within the enemy lines near Amel.



SENATOR DAVIES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Jan. 23. —Senator Davis died early this morning after an illness of several weeks.

DEATH OF DR. MORROW AGED, 60

HAD PRACTISED DENTISTRY FOR THIRTY-TWO YEARS.

Dr. R. F. Morrow, who two weeks ago today was taken to the Nicholls Hospital, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis, died at the hospital late yesterday afternoon. Besides the attack of appendicitis, the patient suffered from pneumonia and after holding his own for nearly two weeks he took a turn for the worse yesterday end today Petebrough mourns the deaths of one of her most respected citizens.

The late Dr. Morrow was born in Fleetwood. Manvers township, on May 24, 1857. After completing his early education, he went to Toronto and entered the University of Toronto. later graduating as gold medalist and honor graduate of the Toronto School of Dentistry and also as an honor graduate of Toronto Uunivesity. In 1885 he came to Peterborough and opened a practice in offices above the China Hall, now the Dominion Bank, and there continued his practice until his recent illness. In his thirty-two years' residence here, Dr. Morrow made many friends who will long remember him for the many good qualities he possessed and for the practical expression which he gave to them.

Dr. Morrow was a Past Master of Peterborough Lodge No. 155, A. F. & A. M.; he had been accorded the highest honors in the gift of the Peterborough Lodge No. 111 Oddfellows and of Mount Hebron Encampment and he was also a member of the Ancient Order of Foresters. In religion he was a Methodist and a member of George Street Methodist Church.

He is survived by three sisters, Mrs. R. D. Preston, Midland; Mrs. D. Clarke, Hamilton; and Miss Fenny Morrow, of this city; and one brother, George, of Salt Lake City, Utah.

A public funeral service will be held at his late residence 176 Dalhousie St., on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, to be followed by a Masonic service at nine o'clock. On Thursday morning at 7.30 o'clock the funeral will be held to the G.T.R. station, the remains to be sent to Lindsay on the 8.20 train for interment.

DANISH STEAMER WITH SUSPICIOUS CARGO HELD

Attempted to Leave Harbor With Provisions and Probably Explosives From Interned German Vessels.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

RIO JANEIRO, Jan. 23.—The Danish steamer Hammershus, after secretly taking on board a quantity of provisions and probably explosives from interned German ships, attempted to leave the harbor last night, but was stopped by guns from the fort, and is now being kept under surveillance pending investigation.

WORK FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

Employers' Urged to Communicate With Patriotic Fund

An appeal is here made to employers of labor to redeem the promises made publicly if not privately, that work would be found for the men returned from service, especially those who served in France and who have had disablements.

Then there is the class of men who went to England, were discharged from service as medically unfit and who have come back pretty much as they were before enlistment. How far does the promise as noted above apply to these men. Not their fault that they were not on the lines.

Many men come into the office and complain that they are refused work, that is no places are open to them. Possibly some places open are not to their liking. One man complains, and this man saw service and was returned disabled, that where he was employed a girl was taken on in his place at $1.25 per day. He says he

MACKENSEN CROSSES AT DANUBE ARM

GERMANS MAINTAIN HOLD ON THE NORTH BANK AGAINST ATTACKS.

GENERAL ACTIVITY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 23. — An army Headquarters statement says:—

Western front— Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: North-east of Armentieres a reconnoitering detachment from Bavarian regiments entered hostile trenches and returned with some prisoners and machine guns. British detachments advancing against our position north-west of Fromelles were repulsed. Otherwise, haze, which lifted only occasionally, hampered artillery and air activities.

Eastern front—Front of Prince Leopold: Along the Dvina and north-west of Lutsk artillery fire temporarily increased. West of Dvinsk our trench troops drove off a Russian raiding detachment which at dawn had entered our first line.

Roumanian front—Front of Archduke Joseph: At some places in the wooded Carpathians and along the frontier mountains to Moldavia there were livelier artillery duels, the weather being frosty and bright. In engagements between advanced guards German and Austro-Hungarian troops took from the enemy between Salinc and Putna Valleys 100 prisoners and south of Kasino Valley drove back stronger hostile forces which were advancing.

Army group of Von Mackensen: On the Lower Putna outpost engagements resulted favorably to us. In Dobrudja Bulgarian troops crossed the southern arm of the mouth of the Danube near Tultcha and maintained themselves on the north bank against Russian attacks.

There is nothing important on the Macedonian front.

STRIKE IN SPAIN

IS ACCOMPANIED BY VIOLENCE AND INCENDIARISM.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan 23.—A general strike has broken out at Saragossa, Spain, accompanied by violence and incendiarism. Trade unions of Barcelona are threatening to participate.

Guelph and South (Wellington) Agricultural Society may not hold a fall fair this year. C. L. Lellee was elected president.

REEVE BROWN TAKES THE PLUSH SEAT OF COUNCIL

Asphodel Gets Wardenship of County

Reeve Brown of Asphodel is the warden of the County of Peterboro for 1917.

That was the first business done at the inaugural meeting of the County Council this afternoon after the roll call had been called by County Clerk Elliott.

The members present were:—

B. Squire, Norwood.
H. G. Fitzgerald, Lakefield
Wh.-Mathison, Havelock.
M. Brown, Asphodel
W. E. Griffith, Belmont
N. Lean, Burleigh
C. J. Darling, Dummer
M. Walsh, Douro
John Young, Ennismore
Jas. Clark, Galway
F. J. Bullied, Chandos
Jas. Ingram, Harvey
H. B. Rye, N. Monaghan
J H. Bell, N. Monaghan
W. A. Anderson, Otonabee
F Easson, Otonabee
F. McKee, Smith
Geo. Nichols, Smith.

When nominations for warden were called for, Reeve Anderson nominated Reeve Brown. This was seconded by Reeve McKee of Smith and as there was no other nomination Mr. Elliott declared Mr. Brown elected and he was escorted to the committee room, where he took the oath of office and donned his official robes.

When Warden Brown took the chair he thanked the members for the honor conferred on him and hoped with the united assistance of the members to be able to give good satisfaction to the ratepayers.

The council then went into committee of the whole to strike the standing committees for the year, with Reeve Fitzgerald of Lakefield in the chair.

The committees and chairman selected are:—

County Property—The whole council, with Mr. Anderson chairman.

Appointments— Messrs Rye, Ingram, McKee, Mathison, Walsh, Lean, Clark, Anderson, Griffith, Bullied, Mr. Mathison to be chairman.

Roads and Bridges— The whole council, with Mr. Bullied in the chair.

Schools—The whole council, with Mr. Griffith in the chair.

Petitions—Messrs. Mathison, Clark, Young, Lean, Eason, Walsh, Fitzgerald, Darling, Griffith, Nichols. Mr. Young to be chairman.

Printing—Messrs. Darling, Clark, Walsh, Squire, McKee, Rye, Ingram, Anderson, Nichols, Bullied. Mr. McKee to be chairman.

Equalization and Assessment.— All the members of the council, with Mr. Fitzgerald as chairman.

Joint—Messrs. Young, Rye, Eason, Ingram, Fitzgerald, Squire, Nichols. Griffith, Mathison, Bullied and Clark. Mr. Rye to be chairman.

Legislative and Railway.—Messrs. Ingram, Nichols, Darling, Squire, Bell, Bullied, Griffith, Rye. Mr. Lean to be chairman.

House of Refuge—Messrs. Easson, Walsh, and the Warden. Mr. Walsh to be chairman.

The New Warden

Warden Brown has served the township of Asphodel in municipal matters for over 12 years, the last five of which he has been a valued member of the County Council. He has been a valued member of the most important committees and was noted for his very regular attendance to all meetings. Last year he was the runner-up in the contest for the Wardenship.

PTE. McINTOSH DOING WELL

93RD SOLDIER WOUNDED ABOUT THE FACE.

Mrs. David McIntosh, 348 Stewart St., has received the following letter telling of the condition of her husband, a 93rd soldiers who was transferred to the 52nd Batt. and was wounded on Dec. 28:—

I met your husband in this hospital No. 6 Stationary Hospital, B.E.F., France. He has been wounded about the face. I have made inquiries about his case and I believe he will improve and be fit again after some time. He will be changed from here soon, so he will send you word himself the next time. Once he leaves here I shall be unable to send you news of him. I visit him every day and you will be glad to hear that he does not suffer much. I said Mass for his recovery the other morning and you, too, should pray with confidence for the same result.—Your truly.

MUD SPLASHES DAME FASHION

ALD. SMITH URGES A MUD GUARD AT HUNTER STREET BRIDGE.

Ald. Smith in casual conversation at the committee of the whole last night informed the mayor and aldermen that the ladies were complaining about automobiles going across Hunter Street bridge at a high rate of speed, causing the mud and slush to splash on pedestrians.

He thought that the council should have a splash board put on the bridge between the walkways and the main roadway.

This was a matter which will be considered by the Board of Works when re-planking the structure.

DEPUTATION TO OTTAWA

A deputation of city and county councillors will go to Ottawa tomorrow night to press on Premier Borden and his colleagues matters of great importance to this district.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1917.

STRENGTH THAT LIES IN UNION.

ABOUT TWENTY of the grocers in the city are united together in an Association not designed to hold up the public in the matter of prices, but really as a mutual benefit to dealer and patron. A meeting will be held in the Oriental Hotel on Wednesday night and further effort made to extend the membership.

Th grocers have united their energies so as to enable them to buy in large quantities directly from the wholesaler or manufacturer, and so do away with the profits of the middleman, the commission merchant either in Toronto or Peterborough. The goods that they purchase are all of standard brand from well-known manufacturers and are sold under the guarantee of the latter. The aim of the members of the association is to get every grocer in the city into the organization.

If a resident of Peterborough sends for goods to a mail order house in Toronto, he does not know what brand of goods he will get. These mail order houses buy goods in large quantities from the manufacturers and send them out as their own products. One Toronto mail order house advertised extensively a line of paint that was said to be made up of pure white lead and linseed oil. The inspectors appointed by the government analyzed samples and found that the ingredients were fish oil and whitening. For this imposition upon their customers the mail order firm was forced to pay a fine of $700. No such fraud would have been possible if the paint had been purchased bearing the guarantee of the maker.

By purchasing directly in large quantities, the local grocers are able to get the best articles at the lowest possible cost and to give their customers the benefit of this arrangment. Even if every dealer in the city becomes a member of the association, it would be impossible for them to combine in forcing up prices beyond a living profit. In such an organization there would always be a sufficient number of high-minded members who would refuse to have anything to do with such a plan.

IN NORTHWEST TORONTO.

THE RIDING of Northwest Toronto was rendered technically vacant by the appointment of the representative, Mr. W. D. McPherson, to the office of Provincial Secretary. In direct contravention of the advice of Liberal leaders, the Opposition decided to contest Mr. McPherson's re-election, and they persisted in doing so to their own discomfiture.

From the result of yesterday's election the Liberals will be even deprived of the scant solace afforded by a greatly reduced majority. Mr. McPherson, considrenig the light vote, has more than held his own. His election was so much of a foregone conclusion that his friends did not think it necessary to turn out to support him, while the Liberals resorted to every device to get out the faithful to the polls.

The election proves again that the Hearst Government is stronger than ever with the people. In a general provincial contest, in which the Opposition would not be able to concentrate their forces in a single constituency, the Administration would sweep Ontario from end to end. The nickel bubble has been burst and the temperance voters are beginning to realize that the prohibition issue, thrust deeper than ever into politics in North Perth and Southwest Toronto, cannot survive unless the friends of the Ontario Temperance Act rally to the support of the party that gave it effect.

The temperance question was brought squarely before the voters yesterday. The Committee of One Hundred, while deploring the spirit that precipitated the contest, called on the temperance element to support the Government candidate. Mr. Rowell and Mr. Dewart acted again their dual role, the one wooing the temperance people and the other placating the liquor party, but to no purpose. The public have no longer faith in a party that has nothing but a long list of broken pledges for a record. The government that acts without fear or favor is assured of the support of those to whose ideas it gave effect. The Opposition will meet the Legislature at the approaching session discouraged and dismayed.

PUTTING AN END TO SCANDAL.

LUCIEN CANNON, Liberal candidate in Dorchester against Mr. Sevigny, the new Minister of Inland Revenue, says that when the latter was elected in 1911 he promised to put an end to the scandals and corruption of the Laurier administration. "Has he put an end to scandals?" asks Mr. Cannon. "Did he put an end to the nickel, horses, drugs and other scandals?"

Mr. Cannon asks questions that are easily answered. Mr. Sevigny did not put an end to the nickel "scandal" for the very good reason that nothing of the kind had existence outside the imagination of such misguided and evil-minded partisans as Mr. Cannon and his friends.

A member of the Dominion Parliament who took advantage of his public position to enrich himself in the purchase of horses for war purposes was expelled from the House and promptly read out of the Conservative party.

Another member who resorted to sharp practice in the sale of drugs for military purposes met a similar fate.

A Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature who assumed the role of a David Harum in the purchase of horses saved himself from expulsion from the Legislature by resigning his seat and appealing for re-election. He faced his constituents again without one word of recommendation from the Provincial Government, and went down to complete and inglorious defeat.

The grafter will arise in any party. If he cannot be entirely suppressed, he can at least be meted out summary and drastic punishment when he is discovered.

NOT A WOBBLER.

THE EXAMINER refers to the chairman of the Committee of One Hundred as the Wobbling Warburton, and opines that he is losing his zeal in the temperance cause because he recommends the temperance party of Ontario to support the Hearst Government, the only administration that ever did anything for prohibition besides making promises.

Whatever he is, Mr. Warburton is not a "wobbler." He has been consistent ever since the committee was formed. In the North Perth election he was the only member of that committee to commend the Government candidate to the consideration of the prohibitionists. He took the same stand with regard to Mr. McPherson in Northwest Toronto, thereby displaying anything but the characteristics of a leader who "wobbles."

Outside of its own party, however, The Examiner can recognize no temperance principles, and the man who assumes to vote against Mr. Rowell and his followers is to all intents and purposes a trickster training for a government favor.

THE NEUTRALS IN DANGER.

GERMANY NOW THREATENS to extend the battle line by ignoring the laws of neutrality and invading Switzerland, Holland and Denmark. If this step is taken it will surprise no one. There is no course that Germany is not likely to adopt to attain her ends. No small nation is safe from the aggressions of the Empire that laid Belgium in ruins.

It may be, however, that Germany in the cases cited is simply indulging in an empty threat in order to enlist the co-operation of the neutrals in arranging satisfactory terms of peace with the Allies. If, however, these peace negotiations fail, the world can prepare itself to see further exhibitions of Teutonic barbarity and frightfulness that will throw into the shade the spectacles of those that have already been witnessed.

MR. WILSON'S NEW MOVE.

PRESIDENT WILSON shattered the precedent established by the custom of one hundred years when he personally appeared before the United States Senate as the treaty-making power of the nation and sought advice as to the attitude the country should assume when peace terms are debated.

When Washington retired from the presidency of the United States, he advised the statesmen then in charge of affairs to make no entangling alliances with European powers, who might thus draw them into an unsought conflict, but to preserve a policy of isolation so far as the Eastern Hemisphere was concerned. This advice has been religiously followed to the present day.

President Wilson concerns himself only with terms of peace. The war itself fails to interest him to the extent of enlisting his active participation. He is in a similar position as that of a man who consents to stand idly by while fire eats up a building, not raising his hand to check it, but making plans to replace the structure and prevent the recurrence of a similar calamity.

How can President Wilson hope to be given a voice in the peace plans of the Allies when he has done nothing either to make that peace possible or to hasten its achievement? The extension of the Monroe Doctrine which he proposes is all right in theory. An alliance of the present Entente Powerts and the United States would assure the world perpetual peace even if Germany persisted in her dream of universal conquest, but there is little chance that the United States Senate will be willing to break away from national tradition by joining any concert of European powers.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IF PETERBOROUGH is ever to get a senator, now is the time for a deputation to Ottawa.

• • • •

THE ELECTION in Northwest Toronto was too one-sided to excite more than a passing interest.

• • • •

WITH OUR CONTEMPORARY it's a man's politics rather than his principles that really matters.

• • • •

BUT IF WOMEN had the ballot they would be more likely to look upon voting as a stern duty than as a light pastime.

• • • •

NOW THAT "Ralph Connor" has acquired the cigarette habit, he is no longer a safe visitor in a munitions factory.

• • • •

IT IS EASY to put a Liberal in the field even in a Toronto riding, but electing him or even making a respectable showing, is an entirely different matter.

• • • •

THE ATTACKS made on the Government by the Opposition campaigners in Dorchester are about as effective as bludgeoning a man with a toy balloon.

• • • •

WHEN PREMIER BORDEN spoke of raising 500,000 men for military service he acted on the belief that every province in the Dominion would do its duty.

• • • •

THE BORDEN GOVERNMENT breaks all precedents when it appoints a labor man to the Senate, thus proving that the workingman's interests really concern the Administration.

• • • •

"WHAT IS THE DEVIL doing in Toronto?" was the suggestive title of a sermon. He is there probably because it is his policy to follow the line of least resistance.

• • • •

Mr. CANE, the defeated candidate in Northwest Toronto, deserves the gratitude of his party. He made a martyr of himself in order to demonstrate just how strong the Hearst Government is in Toronto.

• • • •

• • • •

HARTLEY DEWART says he reserves the right to support such amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act as appeal to him, in this way refusing to disclose the dimensions of the knife which he carries up his sleeve.

• • • •

THE AMERICAN munitions manufacturers combined to keep up the price of big shells for the navy, and the Government gave the contract to a British firm. American labor will suffer through the stupidity of the capitalists.

THE AUTOPED

Of late there has appeared on the streets of American cities a queer little vehicle which is neither a motor cycle nor motor skates. If anything, it is perhaps a compromise between skates and the motor cycle, and it would seem that the idea for this unique vehicle has been suggested by the "scooters" made by the youngsters from a soap-box, a few pieces of board, and a discarded pair of roller skates.

The new means of transportation is known as the autoped, and is propelled by a small, single-cylinder gasoline engine. It can attain a speed of 25 miles per hour on a level road. The control mechanism is centred in the handle, which is also used for steering. The autoped is distinctly up-to-date, for it is equipped with a self-starter for the engine.

Because of the small diameter of the wheels fitted to the autoped, it is obviously a vehicle for city streets and smooth highways. Its moderate first cost and low operating expenses should bring it within the reach of practically everyone.

Another effort is being made in Britain to have the embargo on Canadian cattle removed.

PROGRESS OF VASECTOMY

In line with the suggestion made in the letter of Mr. C. A. G. Spence, agent of the Children's Aid Society, which is published in another column, we quote the following from Dr Elizabeth Muncie's recent address to the American Association of Orificial Surgeons:

"It has been a long, hard journey, but the time is now ripe for the general acceptance and application of our principles by the laity, if not by the medical fraternity at large. It is too great a truth, too great a benefit to humanity, to be quickly adopted. Its final recognition will come quickly when there is raised up a true philanthropist who has the power first to see the application of orificial surgery to race betterment and then the financial ability to make such application possible. An illustration before us in this:

"Elizabeth Grannis of New York has for over thirty years been agitating the sterilization of the unfit, that the mentally and morally deficient classes should not propagate their kind, as they now are doing as 7.8 to 4 of normal. All these years, while physicians here and there were doing this work and incidentally getting wonderful therapeutical results, physicians in general have kicked against the measure.

"In the meantime, the scientific eugenists of England and America have been sawing wood, and now they come forth with their uncontrovertible statistics. But more than this—into their campaign comes Mrs Harriman, with all the earnestness of her philanthropic nature, plus her great means, to back the measure and to declare a sugical war on the fifteen millions of America's 'unfit.' The press in the meantime has lost its prudery, and its fear of medical, scientific terms, and is doing its part—as it always will if fairly dealt with.

"To the eleven states now possessed of a sterilization law must be added, the eugenists declare, all the states of the Union and a federal law as well. This, then, is the eugenists' measure for cutting off the propagation of the unfit, while the equal est they adopt every measure, so far as they know, that will make for clean lives, proper mating, permanent homes and a stalwart nation.

"It is just here, you will see, that the orificial surgeon has the missing link in the chain of curative and preventive measures. It becomes our duty, therefore, to give as wide a publicity to the method as possible until our eugenic friends everywhere shall see the necessity of surgical and vocational institutes, where every abnormal condition of the creative organs shall be recognized and removed by competent specialists. They must be shown that many of the unfit, and especially the juvenile offenders, if placed in a properly equipped institution will, after their physical emancipation, become fit for a vocation.

"In these institutes the sterilization also shall be done when deemed expedient. Just here, for the benefit of those not acquainted with sterilization and to whom it seems a drastic measure, the following case will be of interest: A deficient boy, 18 years of age, whose parents were also deficient, was sent to a state farm. He was rendered sterile by vasectomy. Result—no more nervous shocks through his unfortunate habits; he escaped the state farm, became 'fit' in four weeks, secured a position and has filled it acceptably nearly a year. Was it worth while for the boy? Was it worth while for the taxpayers?

"My object in going so at length into this matter is to call your attention first to twenty-five years ago as contrasted with now; the silence of then, the agitation of now."

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS.

In his amusing book, "The Happy Irish," Mr. Harold Begbie tells the following story which was related to him by a doctor in a small town in Ireland.

"I was rung up pretty late one night," said the doctor, "by a peasant from an outlying village fifteen miles away. It was in the days before I had a car. The wind was blowing horribly, the rain was sweeping against the house, and it was deadly cold.

"The peasant asked me, rather shamefacedly, if I would come and see his mother. I invited him to come in.

"'Patrick,' I said to him, 'your mother is a very old woman.'

"'I know that, doctor,' he admitted.

"'She's over eighty, Patrick.'

"'She's all that, doctor.'

"'And nothing that I could do tonight would be of the smallest use to her.'

"'Sure, doctor,' said he, 'I know very well it's the truth you are telling me, but me poor ould mother, do you see, would have me come and fetch you because she does not want to die a natural death.'"

I heard a good story recently about Lt. Prince George of Battenberg, R.N., who was married the other day.

It concerns the time, not so very long ago, when he was a midshipman on a man-o'-war.

During a cruise in colonial waters the warship put in at a small settlement and presently the governor came on board to visit the captain.

"I hear you have a relative of Queen Victoria among your officers," the governor remarked.

"Yes," replied the captain. "He is a son of the late Prince Henry of Battenberg, who, you know, married the Queen's daughter."

"Indeed,' said the governor, who, by the way, was a bit of a snob. "I should like to be introduced to him."

"Certainly," the captain agreed, and sent for the middy.

"By the way, what shall I call him?" asked the governor anxiously: Your Royal Highness, Your Serene Highness, or what?"

"Oh, you can please yourself about that!" remarked the captain; "we call him Sausage because he's such a round, podgy little chap."

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review: In your issue of Jan. 11 you had an editorial dealing with a subject that is becoming a grave national problem—the propagation of the unfit. I have been hoping to see some comment or criticism on your article, but in vain, and rather than see such a vital question consigned to oblivion I venture to make a passing reference to it in the hope that abler pens than mine may conduct a crusade against this menace to the national vitality.

When we are told that out of every 1,000 people in Canada, 3 to 5 are feeble-minded—that 80 per cent could be prevented—that feeble mindedness is increasing and that this is costing the country $12,000,000 yearly, surely we must recognize that some stringent measures should be adopted to counteract and check this evil.

Here is one example in Ontario, taken from the Report of Proceedings of the 15th Annual Meeting of the Canadian Conference of Charities and Correction, and we need not go outside the County of Peterborough to find others:

> One feeble-minded father and mother have produced ten feeble-minded children, 500 per cent. increase in one generation. The father has been in the penitentiary 6 years, the mother in the Mercer 2 1-2 years. One daughter has been in the Mercer 2 1-2 years; one son at Penetang 4 years; another daughter in the Mercer six months. Two daughters and one son are in industrial schools. Another daughter, not old enough to attend school, is feeble minded. The status of one is not yet determined; another child cannot be traced, and the tenth child is an infant.

That is not an exceptional case. What can be done to eliminate the increase of the degenerate and mentally deficient? You say in your editorial that "measures to prevent the marriage of diseased persons are all that is required." I question whether this would be in the slightest degree effective, as marriage is not considered at all a necessary adjunct to the raising of families by this class.

The only effective remedy to my mind is the sterilization of the unfit. Eleven of the United States already have a sterilization law and the sooner we adopt similar measures the better it will be for the nation.

I enclose an article published in Child Betterment and Social Welfare which you might perhaps utilize if public interest is awakened to any extent locally. The Government has already, I believe, been petitioned to take some action, but arguments must be backed by incontrovertible facts and figures.

MENDING TROUSERS

Two pastors wives were visiting together. One said: "I don't know what we will do—my husband is so discouraged. Somehow his people do not care to hear him preach, and our salary is far behind. My husband feels so blue that he does not like to visit the people and pray with them, and so he sits around at home nearly all the time."

The other sister said: "We are getting along fine. My husband spends much of his time visiting and the people like to have him kneel and pray with them in their homes. Our congregations are always good and our salary is paid up promptly."

While the two sisters were talking they were mending trousers. One was mending her husband's trousers at the seat; the other was mending her husbands' trousers at the knees.

There's nothing so gloriously uncertain as the law.

STRICKEN IN THE STREET
Completely Restored To Health By "Fruit-a-tives"
282 ST. VALIER ST., MONTREAL.
"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years, and my weight dropped from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Then several of my friends advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I began to improve almost with the first dose, and by using them, I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble—and all pain and Constipation were cured. Now I weigh 208 pounds. I cannot praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough". H. WHITMAN.

GERANIUMS VS. FERNS

Some Plants Need Much More Care Than Others

Geraniums are, perhaps, the best known and, on the whole, the easiest to keep of the various varieties of house plants. Give them as much sunshine as possible, for they will bloom in winter when all other flowers fail. Ferns, palms, rubber, and cacti plants require special care and handling. The same is true of begonias, fuchsias, ivy, umbrella plants, etc. Ferns require a strong light to do their best, but will grow fairly well with only a little sunlight. As we think of ferns growing in the woods, we are apt to think they require no sunlight, but it is not so with the different types which come from the florists. They are raised for indoor culture, and must receive sunlight and just enough water to keep them moist. If they are kept too wet, or allowed to go bone dry a few times, it will be the ruination of the fern, for they cannot thrive under such conditions.

GRAPEFRUIT MARMALADE

One orange, one lemon, one grape fruit. Shave the orange, the lemon and the grapefruit very thin, rejecting nothing but the seeds and cores. Measure the fruit, and add to it three times the quantity of water. Let it stand in an earthenware dish over night, and on the second morning add pint for pint of sugar, and boil steadily until it jellies. The product should have a lumpy appearance quite different from most marmalades, the strips of fruit being well defined in a clear pale jelly. To bring this about, stir as little as possible during the two hours or more of cooking which is required.

The proof of the political pudding lies in the plum distribution.

THE WILD CAT OF THE UPLANDS

AN ALGONQUIN PARK STORY

By Archie P. McKishnie

He turned and started to climb up the inside wall of the tree, then paused suddenly, short ears drawn back tightly against his head, short tail lashing furiously. Some other animal was coming slowly down that dark stairway. Noiselessly the big cat slipped to the floor again and tossing the fear-crazed kitten from his mouth, waited.

If the red-eyed weasel who had smelled out the home of the mother wild cat and sensing her departure had chosen this particular time to lay that home desolate, had but known what awaited him in that dark, musky-smelling interior, he would have lost no time in straightway climbing hurriedly out through its doorway again. But he did not know, so he continued on his way downward thinking of the warm blood which he would drink from the helpless things below. And thus it was he put an end to his skulking, robbing nights forever.

As he dropped softly to the floor and glided across to where the trembling kittens lay, the big cat reached out and hooked him on his long, needle-like claws. The weasel screamed and slashed downward with his fangs at his captor, but the cat throwing him high in air caught him as he fell and crushed the life from him with his strong teeth. Then he threw the carcase from him and picking up the kitten again swiftly sought the open.

There is no accounting for the vagaries of the wild things. What the big wild cat had intended to do was enter the den of his one-time mate, murder her small family and then take himself quickly away, instinctively knowing that without them she would very soon come seeking his companionship again. Why then, instead of allowing the blood-thirsty weasel to be his all too willing agent in this, he had defended the kittens against those knife-like tusks, the big cat could not have explained any more than he could explain his action now as he stood on the top of the buttonwood with one whimpering kitten dangling from his mouth.

Glancing quickly about him, he saw a dish-like hollow formed by four branches of the tree. In this little basin he dropped the kitten and was preparing to climb down the big trunk and seek the shady wilderness once more when he became aware that his one-time mate was coming home, and coming home as though she had guessed that all was not well there.

Across the moon-sheeted open something flashed like a grey streak, and on up the big bowl of the buttonwood. The male cat had flattened down on a branch of the tree but the mother saw him and sprang straight for him. Twisting about he dropped to a lower branch and launching himself in mid-air made a record leap to a shaggy topped pine. Then half climbing, half falling he found the earth again and shot like a bullet into the thicket.

The mother cat made no effort to follow. Instead she nosed carefully that little furry lump in the tree-pocket and finding it alive and unharmed lifted it up and carried it back into the home hollow again. Quickly she ascertained to her satisfaction that the other three kittens were safe, then creeping over to the dead weasel, she gingerly smelt of it. Then eyes darting fire and tail lashing her gray sides she gripped it in her teeth and carrying it to th top of the tree cast it far out from her. Then she returned to her babies. She had a big task to perform before morning.

THE faint mauve of dawn was in the eastern skies before the mother cat, her last baby safely carried and deposited in the cleft of the rock far remote from the buttonwood, stretched herself out beside her kittens and gathered them close to her. She had moved them from the tree home to a place of safety, a rocky plateau resting between the deep creek and the stunted firs of the tableland. Not until the last of them was safely hidden in this safe retreat did she feel satisfied. Now as she suckled them, she closed her eyes and purred softly.

In the new home, safe from interlopers she reared and mothered the kittens until their wee scars of eyes opened, until they grew big enough to play and maul and growl over the the birds and mice she brought in alive to them and until the sharp grinders breaking through their itching gums hurt as she nursed them so that she took to catching them more food and boxing their ears oftener.

By and by they took to hunting by themselves and the more venturesome of them to remaining outside the home all night and day. Then she became restless.

One night when the kittens were big enough to take care of themselves, as they fought together over a grey rabbit which one of them had captured, the mother cat slipped away from them, and went gliding away up the moon-painted sward to the deep timber beyond the rocky plateau. And as she slipped through the spicy blackness of the old-time forest she held her head high and her mouth half open. A grouse thundered up from the path almost at her feet but she did not strike. A half-grown rabbit loped across an open spot close beside her, but she did not give chase. She simply kept on her way until she reached a broad open patch in the forest then she sank down in the moonlight and with round head between her paws, waited.

Then from out the thicket ahead a round grey head protruded itself and the wild cat's mate crept into the open. Slowly he advanced towards her and as he reached her she half rose and touched his orange nose with her own. The big cat lifted his head and sent a hoarse yowling cry out on the night and when he backed into the thicket she seemed nothing loath to follow.

And so throughout that night, and many other glorious nights the grey wild cats of the wilderness roamed and hunted and played together. Many times during the late summer and early autumn the angler who had returned to the forest to fish for bass in its deep lakes heard their wild cries at night and swore anew that he would yet silence them.

But the angler never so much as caught one glimpse of the wild cats of the forest although, had he but known it, many and many a time as he passed slowly along the tree hedged shore of the lake in early morning or late twilight, they lay close above watching him from green, curious eyes.

Wit and Wisdom

The Barber—Your hair is thinning, sir. Every try our hair preparations?"

The Patron—No, I can't blame it on that."

Jobson—I know a nice girl, but I dont think she wants to marry. At least she refused me.

Jimson—By George, she must be a sensible girl. Introduce me, will you?

Nell—Oh, dear, I'm in such a quandary.

Bell—What is it?

Nell—Jack promises to stop drinking if I marry him and Tom threatens to begin if I don't.

"I've not seen old Mrs. Wiggins lately. How is she?"

"Dead, sir."

"What, joined the great majority?"

"Oh, no, sir. She was a good enough woman as far as I know."

Little Roy longed for a baby sister. His playmate, Tommy Smith, had a number of little sisters and a new one had just arrived. "If you want a baby sister so badly," said Roy's mother, "why don't you pray for one?"

"I have prayed," answered Roy disgustedly, "and every time I pray God leaves it at the Smith's."

"Who is your favorite composer?"

"Wagner," replied Mrs. Cumrox.

"You must be a student of music."

"No. I mention Wagner for the sake of relieving myself of conversational strain. If the other man does not like Wagner, he won't want to hear me say another word."

"And if he does?"

"He'll want to do all the talking himself."

WOMEN WRITERS

In Her book, "Woman's Place in the World of Letters," Alice Stopford Green points out that woman's work in letters is of very recent generations.

The author's citation of examples is limited, but with good judgment she praises "Charlotte Bronte with feeling set aflame by a burning imagination," and George Eliot, "in whom emotion is sustained by intellectual passion," but it may be doubted, she adds, "whether there is any woman save Christina Rossetti (and within her own limits Emily Bronte) whose sincerity has never faltered, and whose ardent soul has constantly scorned to wear the livery of any passion save its own."

Woman, this writer avers, is impelled by instinct and emotion rather than the great experiences of life, and she is constantly groping to find more language to express the subtle intimations that visit her. Though women stand high in poetry and have done something in history, theology, she has left on one side, philosophy and metaphysic she has skirted with precaution, and has done little with logic, law and ethics.

Miss Green goes over women's characteristics closely, and, feeling there is much yet to accomplish, sums up thus eloquently:

"If she is to deliver her message or to be the apostle of a new era, she must throw off the [illegible] of the stranger and the [illegible] of the anarchist. The history and philosophy of man must be the very alphabet of her studies, and she must speak the language of the world to which she is the highest ambassador, not as a barbarian or foreigner, but as a skilled and fine interpreter. From culture she must learn deeper lessons than 'Taste,' and the 'Reason' which is the last resort must give stability to the shadows projected by her instinct must be honorably reckoned with. While learning ripens these may cling to it some husks of pedantry, and knowledge may perhaps cause them to check the spontaneous message. But we have prophets enough of the message which cannot survive knowledge, and has no root in reason. No equipment of heart or brain can be too great for the pioneers that a suffering world sends forward to sink wells where the solid rock has till now promised no water, and open new horizons where man's vision has stopped short."

Dissolve a lump of soda in a little hot water and add it to the blue water. This prevents the blue from settling in the clothes, and makes them beautifully white.

In Leeds, England, over 25,000 women are employed in the manufacture of wool and worsted goods.

"You don't stay at home as much as you used to."

"No," replied Mr. Meekton. "Society has its rights as well as the individual. It seems rather selfish of me to linger around the fireside and monopolize the conversation of so able and erudite a woman as Henrietta."

A man isn't necessarily a failure because he has failed.

"Whom does the baby resemble?"

"Every other baby that I ever saw."

SERVICE—Prompt shipment, no substituting, refunding overpayments, immediate acknowledgement of all orders—these are the features of our service to which we give very special care.

DRAUGHT VERSUS BOTTLED LIQUORS

Liquors in sealed bottles in cases cost one-third more than in draught, and the quality is no better. Why one-third more? Because you are paying for the bottles and the labor of bottling, for the same goods.

Following are some draught liquors, especially "Balmoral" Scotch, which we can highly recommend:

GOOD ROADS LEADING TO AND FROM PETERBORO

Committee of Whole Council Discuss the Problem.

Mayor Duffus and all the aldermen met last evening in a committee of the whole council and considered the question of improving the roadways in and adjoining the city. The information before the committee was that the Provincial Government would seriously consider the encouragement of suburban roads and would give every assistance possible to the municipalities who might like to adopt a system of road building.

It was decided to find out what the County Council thought of the subject and with this in view Mayor Duffus was empowered to arrange a meeting with the county rulers.

It is understood that the Minister of Public Works, Hon. F. G. McDermond, whose department is in charge of such work, and Mr. McLean, Highways Commissioner desire to have a talk with the city and county board for the purpose of exciting the greatest possible interest in the matter.

The auto owners have already signified their willingness to do all that is in their power to boost good roads along; in fact they insist on them.

London City Council have already passed a resolution asking the Legislature to pay part of the cost of building the main thoroughfares in a town or city that would connect up the urban roads and the committee last night decided to send a deputation to Toronto in March to urge this action on the Government.

It would not cause a tremendous expenditure to place the roads leading into Peterborough in good shape as the foundation is splendid and the material right at hand.

HOUSE MAY VOTE CREDIT FOR WAR, THEN ADJOURN

Premier Borden to be Given Chance to Attend Imperial Conference---Debate on Address Begins.

OTTAWA, Jan. 23. — "When this war broke out and before my colleagues had assembled in Ottawa I took upon myself the responsibility of saying to the British Government that Canada would stand with Great Britain in this war. I was ready to stand or fall by that then, and I am ready to stand or fall by it now."

This declaration by Sir Robert Borden, coming at a time when opponents of the Government are stating that Canada should make no further sacrifices in the war, formed one of the striking passages in a notable speech delivered by the Prime Minister in the debate on the address in the House of Commons yesterday. It was received by the Conservative side of the House with an outburst of cheers.

The opening stage contained an offer from Sir Wilfrid Laurier somewhat along the lines of that made by the Conservative Opposition nine years ago, when the question of interrupting the session of Parliament to allow him to attend an Imperial Conference arose. Sir Wilfrid proposed that the war credits should be passed, together with such supply as would be necessary to carry on the business of the country temporarily, and that Parliament should adjourn for such time as Sir Robert Borden might be absent in London. Sir Robert Borden, referring to this proposal, stated that he saw no immediate objection to it, and would discuss it with his colleagues as well as with Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The Ross Rifle

The full correspondence between the Dominion Government and the British military authorities regarding the use of the Ross rifle was tabled in the House by Sir Robert Borden. It showed that, beginning nearly a year ago, the Canadian Government pressed persistently for a definite statement on the Ross rifle and enquired as to the possibility of securing a different arm. Sir Robert Borden stated his readiness to leave the matter to the commander-in-chief. He stated also that if the British Government had decided finally on a new rifle Canada would adopt it. He pointed out that no rifle was useful unless commanding the confidence of the men.

The Canadian Government, it will be recalled, on securing the Haig report, and upon being informed of the adoption of a new service rifle by the War Office, at once took steps to have the Canadian divisions armed with the new rifle.

HEAR LECTURE ON MISSIONS

MRS. H. D. ROBERTSON TALK ON LIFE IN CHINA.

Mrs. H. D. Robertson, whose husband has been a missionary to China for the past eleven years, representing the Methodist Church, and who now has charge of the College at Chenfu, in the Celestial Empire, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture on life in China at a meeting of the Epworth League of the George St. Methodist Church last night. Miss Belle Elliott, vice-president of the missionary branch, presided.

Mrs. Robertson spoke with a grace that held the attention of her audience from the start and her story of the troubles in China must have been a revelation to those who imagined that life in that country was one of uninterrupted peace. The members of the league who heard the lecture received new inspiration for the missionary work of the church with which they are identified.

Mr. Howard Armstrong moved and Miss Ethel Miller seconded a vote of thanks to Mrs. Robertson for her admirable address.

So great was the need that when five cars of coal reached Owen Sound yesterday immediate delivery to consumers was permitted.

UMBRELLA FOR TEACHER AT BAILIEBORO

PUPILS MAKE PRESENTATION TO MR. T. G. DAINARD.

The pupils of the school at Bailieboro recently presented to Mr. T. G. Dainard, their teacher, a silver-mounted umbrella. The presentation which followed the close of the day's recitations was wholly unexpected by Mr. Dainard, and therefore all the more pleasing.

The gift accompanied the following address:

Dear Mr. Dainard: We, your pupils, have assembled together this afternoon to show you in a small way our appreciation of the trouble you have always taken with us in our daily work, and of the high ideals you have always endeavored to place before us.

We therefore beg that you will accept this small token of our regard and that in the days to come it will give you some pleasure to use this mark of our esteem.

(Signed on behalf of the school)
Phoebe Massey, Tillia Johnston.

Mr. Dainard in a brief reply thanked the pupils for their gift and expressed the hope that the happy relationship between pupil and teacher would long continue.

EVOLUTION OF THE TELEPHONE

ALL SAINTS' SOCIETY WAS ADDRESSED BY E. J. REYNOLDS.

A meeting of All Saints' A.Y.P.A. was held in the Parish Hall last night, Mr. Frank Dalton, president, occupying the chair. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. G. O. Cameron, Mr. E. J. Reynolds of the Bell Telephone Co., gave an illustrated address on the evolution of the telephone. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Reynolds, Mr. Dalton and the other officers of the A.Y.P.A. for their kindness in providing the lecture. An excellent musical program was procided as follows: Instrumental solo, Mr. Barrie; vocal solo, Mr. Chandler; violin duet, Misses Gardiner; vocal solo, Miss Johnston, pianoforte duet, Misses Gardiner.

After a pleasant social session the meeting ended after the singing of the National Anthem.

George Clarkson, for 40 years in business in Woodstock, is dead, aged 74.

ROWELL-DEWART COMBINE AGAIN COMES TO GRIEF

W. D. McPherson Wins Over Liberal Candidate in Northwest Toronto by Increased Majority in Proportion to Vote Polled.

TORONTO, Jan. 23.—The electors of North-West Toronto handed another terrific jolt yesterday to the hopes of the Rowell-Dewart combination. Hon. W. D. McPherson goes back to Queen's Park to proceed with his new duties as Provincial Secretary with a majority of 1,878, or just thirteen votes short of his majority rolled up in the general election of 1914, when the total vote was fully 50 per cent. larger than that polled yesterday. The Provincial Secretary opposed a quiet personal campaign to every effort that the Liberals, led by Mr. Dewart and Mr. Rowell, could make in rehashing the nickel "disclosures" and bidding for the support of both the temperance and liquor interests. Mr. Dewart's frank appeal for liquor support, with his advocacy of compensation for the trade, had no perceptible effect on the Minister's support.

The extent of Mr. McPherson's victory is best realized by a comparison of the vote in the last general election and that yesterday. In June, 1914, when the excitement of a general election brought out a vote of 9,600, the North-West Toronto member had a majority of 1,891 over his opponent and James, the Socialist. His plurality over McTaggart alone was about 2,400. Yesterday's poll was only 6,488. Had public interest been displayed to the same extent as in 1914 Mr. McPherson's majority, based upon the relative difference in the votes of the candidates, would have been over 2,800.

A deputation representing the Cattle Breeders' Association of Canada waited on the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa to protest against the proposal to allow oleomargarine to be imported and sold in Canada, as injurious to the breeding and dairy interests.

W. H. Hill, Esq.,
Manager Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Sir.—I am in receipt of your favor of the 10th with policy No. 415000 for $1,000 and cheque for $557.25 covering policy No. 200807, which matured on the 1st of November last.

Allow me to thank you and your excellent company for this very prompt and entirely satisfactory settlement. I have before me as I write the illustration or estimate given me the time the policy was taken out 15 years ago, showing what might be expected under the various options at maturity, and these have in every case been exceeded by actual results. True, the excess is not large, but this merely goes to emphasize the wonderful efficiency with which the business of the company is conducted.

Yours very truly,
"Wm. Cross."

WORK FOR

would not work for that wage, so quit.

No we might just as well be plain about this matter. These men have a right to expect some consideration. Are they getting it? It is practically impossible to telephone to thirteen factories three or four times a day to see if there be vacancies. For the last two weeks not one employer has signified that there was employment to be given, that places would be made.

Employers should have consistency enough to instruct someone in the service to notify the Patriotic Fund Office of any opportunity to place men, and to do so without being stirred up. On the other hand, if we have reached the point in the city where there is no employment to be had, why not say so. Let us not go ahead on a fiction as at present.

This is an appeal to employers to wake up, so far as the returned man is concerned. Don't shove the duty off on to the other fellow. What about your shop? Any openings?—Then advise.

And it will be taken, and rightly so, that if no one says that men can be taken on, that there has ceased to be a want for men. Then the returned man can be told, as he will be told, that out of town for him. That is the only alternative.

Is there anything else we can do? And who will do it?

EARLY MORNING MOGULS ARE DELAYED BY STORM

The early morning trains on the C.P.R. were several hours late this morning owing to heavy snowstorms and drifts all along the extremt eastern portion of the line.

The 4.58 express did not arrive until shortly before 8 o'clock and the North Toronto train came in about half an hour later.

The delay in these trains affected the local from Tweed, which did not leave until nearly nine o'clock.

Some men seem to be happy when they have a grievance.

A SMOKER BILLED FOR ARMORIES

Ajax, the Strong Man, and Others Will Perform

The 247th Batt. are holding a smoker in the Armories on Thursday evening for the entertainment of their friends. A splendid and unique programme of boxing, wrestling, vocal, instrumental and band selections has been prepared for the occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested in the welfare of the boys in khaki. A silver collection will be taken up in aid of the athletic fund.

The program as so far arranged is as follows:—

1—Band.
2—Peers vs. DeLine, boxing.
3—Band.
4—Fagan-Dunnette, wrestling
5—Song
6—Kit Coats vs. Kit Pants, boxing.
7—Buck and Wing, dancing.
8—Dobbs vs. Welsh, boxing.
9—Song.
10—Warrell vs. Dallas, boxing.
11—Band.

The officers and men of the 247th Battalion are very enthusiastic over the prospects for a considerable addition to the strength of the battalion in the near future. From every section of the district many men are arranging to don the khaki. the clubs of 100 that have already been started are going along in fine shape.

Lieut. Iles of the 256th Railroad Construction Battalion has enlisted six men in the last two days. They are:

Pte. G. F. Johnston, 539 Waterford street.

Pte. Isaac Woodcock, 4 Gladstone avenue.

Pte. Sidney Spooner, 295 Lake street.

Pte. Fred. Coles, Peterborough.

Pte. Osborne Edwards, 25 Caddy street.

Pte. Chas. E. Sturgeon, 264 Wolfe street.

The men will be equipped at once and held in Peterborough until the order is given for the battalion to mobilize.

Lieut. S. J. Raymond of the 247th has been given permission to resign from his provisional appointment, according to the district orders just issued.

"ALADDIN AND HIS WONDERFUL LAMP."

F. Stuart Whyte's elaborate presentation of the famous English pantomime, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," will be given at the Grand on Monday, Jan. 29, just two weeks after their great success in Toronto.

Aladdin will have a musical setting worthy of its stage environment as the three composers have been credited with more pantomime and revue successes than any other trio of song writers in the Old Country.

The music in pantomime is a very important item because, in addition to the twenty-five regular song numbers the dialogue is all written in rhyme and talked to music.

The stage settings were designed by Mr. Whyte and built and painted under the direction of Edgar Mackie, formerly master artist at the Drury Lane Theatre in London.

No less than 280 individual costumes had to be fitted and made for the various members of the cast and chorus.

The company which will present "Aladdin" throughout Canada is headed by the charming comedienne, Miss Zara Clinto and includes those two star comedians Mr. Billy Oswald and Mr. Harry Hoyland.

S. J. Williams, president of the Kitchener branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, has resigned as a result of the recent civic elections.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

FAST TORONTO SENIORS HERE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

On Friday night at Brock street rink the fans who have been following the fortunes of the Soldiers will have the opportunity of comparing their favorites with the 227th Battalion senior O. H. A. seven of Toronto, Major O'Flynn having completed arrangements whereby the Toronto team will appear here.

The 227th have been playing fast hockey this season and in their game with St. Patrick's last night had the score 5 to 1 in their favor. They lost out in the final period by one goal. Three of their regular players are in the hospital, but will be in shape for the game here on Friday night.

FORMER CANADIAN LEAGUER SHOT AND KILLED IN TEXAS

Followers of the Canadian League here and elsewhere will remember Frank Schultz, the happy-go-lucky first baseman of the ill-starred Beavers, who represented Toronto in the Ontario circuit some years ago. Schultz secured his job with Knotty Lee's club on the recommendation of his brother Joe, the well known infielder, but he did not show much form, and was released before the season ended. But for all his lack of ability, he was a likeable fellow and, fans generally regret to hear that he was shot and killed while arresting a negro at El Paso, Texas. Schultz, who was a corporal with a Michigan regiment, enlisted on the outbreak of the truble with Mexico.

CURLING

CURLING .. UBC6dy. .$s&

The District Cup primary competition is being played in Lindsay today. The first draw started at eleven o'clock. The Lakefield and Peterborough rinks went to Lindsay at 8.30 this morning.

There was lots of interest taken in the curling games at the rink last night. Many interested citizens dropped in to talk over Peterboro's chances of winning the group for the District Cup. They were also able to see some good games played in the regular inter-rink schedule.

The games and scores were:—

ably assisted by Miss Harrison as assistant superintendent. The nursing staff throughout is efficient and capable.

The Medical Staff

The medical staff has, with commendable zeal, done much to further the efficiency of the hospital. The lectures and instruction to the nursing staff are highly important and are faithfully contributed without remuneration. The medical staff is doing much to make the hospital deservedly popular.

The board should, in the near future, look into the advisability of providing more adequate quarters for the nursing staff.

Instructions have been given to install fire hose permanently to the hydrant outside the hospital and every precaution is being taken to safeguard those intrusted to our care.

The provincial inspector on a recent visit spoke very highly of existing conditions and complimented all concerned on the general excellence of the institution.

The Committees

A committee composed of Dr. McCulloch, W. Madill, R. Fair, J. McClelland and E. B. Fowler was appointed to strike the standing committees for the year. The committee reported as follows, the report being adopted:

Supervision—B. F. Ackerman (chairman), R. Fair, W. Madill.

Finance—Dr. McCulloch (chairman), E. B. Fowler, Thos. Brown.

Property—W. Aldridge (chairman), J. McClelland, B. F. Ackerman.

Visiting.—Jan. and July, E. A. Peck and R. Fair; Feb. and Aug., G. A. Goheen, the Mayor. March and Sept., R. Neill, W. Aldridge; April and Oct., J. Green, T. Brown; May and Nov., W. Madill, E. B. Fowler; June and Dec., Dr. McCulloch, B. F. Ackerman.

On motion of Dr. McCulloch, seconded by R. Fair, the secretary was instructed to express to Mr. Hall, chairman of the board, the appreciation felt by the board for his many years of faithful service in the interests of the hospital, their regret at his inability to be present, and their hope that he would soon recover from his illness.

My Dearest Mother
So glad to receive your big box of splendid gifts to-day. They surely were more than appreciated your choice was fine. It makes a fellow feel good to think that we, over here are constantly in your thoughts. It isn't very cheerful in the trenches to say the least but knowing that everything is O.K. at home helps a whole lot. I hope you had an enjoyable Christmas. The one thing that gratifies me is that you will be looked after by the Canadian Patriotic Fund

The Letter Home

"I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink....... naked, and ye clothed me......."

Then shall they answer him, saying—"Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? ....or naked, and clothed thee?"

And the King shall answer.......
"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me".

Overseas, in ravaged Belgium, more than 3,000,000 of "the least of these" are hungry, thirsty, thinly clad—looking to us! Have you done what you could for any of them?

OBITUARY

MISS LORETTA MILLOY.

The funeral of the late Miss Loretta Milloy, who died at St. John's Hospital, Long Island, N. Y., which institution she entered as nurse-in-training, will be held from the family residence, 524 Parnell street, on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock to the Church of the Sacred Heart and St. Peter's cemetery. The remains arrived in the city last night.

The late Miss Milloy, who was 23 years of age, was a very popular young woman. She entered the hospital only a short time ago and later decided to undergo an operation for mastoid. Complications which followed brought to an end her promising young life.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Milloy, three sisters, Mrs. Sylvester Shaughnessy, Aileen, and Marie, and three brothers, John, of Syracuse, N. Y., James, of North Dakota, and Aloysius, at home.

MRS. MARGARET CARTER.

Margaret Carter, relict of the late Elijah Carter, passed away today, aged 80 years. She is survived by five sons and four daughters.

The funeral will be held on Thursday at 2:30 p. m. from the residence of her son, Mr. W. H. Carter, 15 Lisburn street, to Little Lake Cemetery.

SOLDIERS ENTERTAINED BEHIND FIRING LINES

Miss Ward's Lecture Took Audience to France.

Miss Ada L. Ward's lecture and blackboard drawings at the Collegiate Institute Hall last night, under the auspices of the Teachers' Guild, as something out of the ordinary channels, delighted everybody. The audience was taken from the comfortable hall to the rest stations in France, the convalescent homes and the hospitals and other places apart from the trenches where Tommy is to be found, and was given an insight into the splendid work carried on for the entertainment of the soldiers by concert companies and the one in particular of which Miss Ward was a member. Tommy was pictured in the light of the soldier in full health and high spirits and as the soldier broken and maimed as a result of his wounds received in the trenches.

She told story after story, with Tommy as the principal actor, many humorous, others full of pathos, all bringing out the wonderful qualities of the British soldier. The lecturer paid glowing tributes to Tommy, to the nurses, the medical staffs, the Y.M.C.A. and the men behind the lines, the veterinary corps, for instance, who give tender care to the wounded and broken horses.

Speaking of the treatment given to the wounded soldiers, Miss Ward said King George could not receive better treatment.

She told of the part the women in England are taking in the war; of how they are doing men's work in order to release the men for military service, and added that the women would be glad to return to their domestic duties after the end of the war.

The lecturer made an appeal for greater efforts by the people at home. To the knitters of socks, she emphasized the great need for socks at the front. "Go on" was her message for

There's a silver lining through the dark clouds shining;
Turn the dark clouds inside out till the boys come home.

Preceding the lecture, Dr. Park contributed a violin selection and Miss Maysie Armstrong sang. Dr. Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Board of Education, presided. A vote of thanks to the lecturer was moved by Mr. A. Mowat, seconded by Mr. M. Clarke and tendered to Miss Ward by the chairman.

DOLLAR DAY GUESSES COME IN AT OAK HALL.

The clock contest at Oak Hall promises to be a lively one from the way figures are coming in. No doubt the contest will be more keenly contested this year as the public has the experience of last year's clock tested out. The question is, will there be much if any difference in the time. Last year's clock was a $12 one. This year Oak Hall is giving a $17 clock. With their special January sale prices and Dollar Day bargains on the merchandise, Oak Hall offers, with the opportunity to win a $17 clock makes Oak Hall a magnet for Dollar Day. Bring your blanks filled out and deposit in the ballot box at the store.

COMMODORE JARVIS ASKS FOR RECRUITS FOR BRITISH NAVY

Canada Has Promised 5000 Men for Sea Service.

WHY THE NEED

England Now Has 4000 Ships of War on Duty.

The audience that filled the assembly hall at the Collegiate Institute last night, and over which Mayor Duffus presided, were disappointed when it was discovered that the large lantern was out of order and that the promised pictures of the British navy could not be shown on the screen. But this blank in the program was more than filled by the excellent address of Commodore Æmelius Jarvis, whose speech was at once a plea for recruits and an encomium upon the force that is so quietly and effectively protecting not only the Motherland, but every civilized neutral country in the world, besides guarding the highways of the seas.

Commodore Jarvis showed how, thanks to the British fleet, Canada has prospered since the war broke out, a national debt of three hundred and sixty millions being converted into a credit balance of four hundred millions, while the trade of this country is largely in excess, proportionately, than that of the United States. Canadian soldiers go to and from Europe in safety, only one life of a man in khaki having been lost, and letters pass between the men in the trenches and friends at home, thanks to the navy that keeps the German raiders off the seas.

Canada is receiving about 300 applications a month for naval service, but only about one-half of these applicants are able to pass the physical examination. The commodore explained fully the plan of operation. When a man is accepted in Peterborough he is sent to Toronto. If he stands the test there he is put in uniform and given a ten days' leave which he is expected to spend at home drumming up other recruits. He is then sent to England by way of Halifax. While in the navy he gets 30 cents a day and 80 cents a day is deposited to his credit at home. If he is a mechanic his services as such will be utilised during his term of enlistment.

The life is healthy, the discipline [illegible] and the associations all that could be desired. No mother or sweetheart need have any anxiety on this score.

An appeal was made for assistance for the British sailors, both in the mercantile and military branches, and Commodore Jarvis also stated that Lady Guiness would award a medal to every Canadian woman who secured a recruit for the navy.

When Commodore Jarvis had finished his address the lantern had been partially repaired and a few pictures were shown on the screen. First appeared a representation of the stately home of the British Admiralty, and next one of Gibraltar, the speaker giving an interesting account of a visit to that fortress a few years ago. The history of the evolution of the Union Jack was then told in picture story.

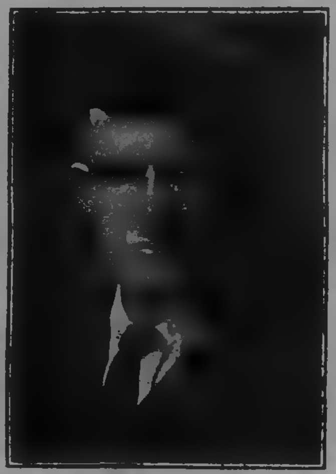
Patriotic solos were rendered by Mrs. J. H. Renwick and Mr. Douglas Carlysle.

Rev. J. R. Webb moved a vote of thanks to the speakers and singers. This was seconded by Mr. F. D. Kerr and enthusiastically adopted.

The singing of the National Anthem closed the entertainment.

BRITISH WARSHIPS.

When the war broke out Britain had 2,200 warships. She has over 4,000 now. She needs men to man the new vessels and Canada is asked to supply 5,000 recruits. These men were not required at the opening of hostilities, but the navy has grown out of all proportion to the number of available men in the British Isles. Canada has answered the call for soldiers. Will she heed the appeal for help to maintain the navy as the Empire's greatest safeguard?



REEVE F. J. BULLIED

Of Chandos, who has been paid a high compliment by the County Council in his appointment as chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee. Reeve Bullied is recognized as one of the bright and most progressive members of the council, having a splendid record of service to his credit. When he first took a seat on the council board three years ago he was given the chairmanship of the Committee on Appointments and last year was chairman of the House of Refuge Committee.

INJURIES TO FRANK O'BRIEN PROVE FATAL

PASSED AWAY IN CHICAGO FROM INJURIES SUSTAINED IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Word has been received here of the death in Chicago of Mr. Frank O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. John G. O'Brien, 501 Bolivar street, the result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident in Chicago on Thursday of last week. He was injured at the base of the skull and died in Mercy Hospital on Saturday. The late Mr. O'Brien left Peterborough six years ago.

He is survived by his widow in Chicago, two brothers, W. J., 212 Boswell avenue, Joseph, 501 Bolivar street, and five sisters, Mrs. Gooddale, 419 Cross street, Mrs. D. Byrne, Edmonton, Miss Martha O'Brien, graduate nurse, St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, Miss L. O'Brien, St. Joseph's Hospital, and Miss Veronica O'Brien, at home.

The funeral was held in Chicago. Numerous friends here will be sorry to learn of his death.

Those Absent Kinsmen

When Commodore Jarvis spoke on behalf of the Associated Kin of the Canadian Forces he asked all those in the audience who had friends in the navy or in the trenches to stand up. Fully ninety per cent. of those present at once rose.

BERLIN ADMIRALTY WON'T ADMIT LOSSES IN FIGHT

One Damaged Torpedo Boat Reached Ymuiden and All Others Return to Port With Slight Damage.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—In the course of an enterprise undertaken by a portion of our destroyer forces, the German admiralty announces, an engagement occurred early on Tuesday with British naval forces. An enemy destroyer was sunk during the fighting. After an engagement a second destroyer was observed by our airplanes to be in a sinking condition.

One of our torpedo boats, which was in distress owing to damage sustained, according to news received, has arrived at Ymuiden. All other boats returned with slight damage.

BERLIN STATEMENT.

The text of the British official announcement regarding the naval fight says:

"While our light forces were patrolling the North Sea not far from the Dutch coast, they met a division of enemy torpedo-boat destroyers. A short engagement took place, during which one of the enemy torpedo-boat destroyers was sunk and the rest scattered, having suffered considerable punishment. Darkness prevented the full results of the action from being observed.

"During last night there was also a short, sharp engagement between enemy torpedo-boat destroyers and our own destroyers in the vicinity of Schouwen Bank. During this engagement one of our torpedo-boat destroyers was struck by a torpedo, the explosion killing three officers and forty-four of the crew. She was sunk subsequently by our own ships. Relatives of the victims have been informed. Our ships suffered no other casualties."

Other unofficial reports give the German losses at from three to seven destroyers.

SUB. MENACE MOST SERIOUS TO ENGLAND

NAVAL CRITIC SAYS 470 SHIPS LOST IN THREE MONTHS.

187 BRITISH.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 24.—The Daily News naval critic comments today on the progress of the submarine menace, which he holds is three times worse than it was eighteen months ago. During ninety days 470 ships were sunk, 187 of them British, and the sinking even of neutrals means the loss of British goods.

"We are confronted with the most serious menace that ever threatened us," the writer says.

AERIAL ENGAGEMENTS ON WESTERN FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—The war office report says:

Western Front: The weather was frosty and exceptionally bright yesterday. Over most of the front the fighting was moderately active. Aviators took advantage of favorable conditions for observation. In the course of numerous aerial engagements and as the result of our defensive fire, the enemy lost six airplanes.

Eastern Front, Front of Prince Leopold: On both sides of the River Aa and south of Riga engagements developed which took a course favorable to us.

Roumanian Front, Front of Archduke Joseph: During the severe cold prevailing there have been only local lively artillery and advance guard engagements.

Von Mackensen's Front: The north bank of the southern arm of the Danube north of Tulicha has again been abandoned.

The situation on the Macedonian front is unchanged.

BRITISH SUCCESS

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The British made a successful raid near Neuville St. Vaast and effectively repulsed further German raids near Armentieres.

INSPECTOR LEES' REPORT ON EAST PETERBORO SCHOOLS

Irregular Attendance Great Hindrance to Efficiency.

Teachers Change.

The County Council re-assembled this morning and at once went into committee on schools.

Mr. R. Lees, county school inspector, presented the reports for himself and his colleague, Inspector Broderick, who is ill. Mr. Lees' report covering the inspectorate of Peterborough East follows:—

During the first half year there were in operation 70 rural schools with 73 teachers, 3 village schools with 17 teachers, and one suburban school with 5 teachers, making a total of 95 public school teachers. During the fall term there were two fewer, one having been dropped from the staff at Lakefield and No. 4 Otonabee (Keene) having become a one-teacher school. In the performance of my duties I made 122 half-day visits besides several of shorter duration.

Qualification of Teachers

In dealing with the qualification of the teachers, it has been my custom to make note of the progress from year to year. This time I shall make a comparison of conditions last term with those that prevailed five years before. In the statement of Jan., 1912, speaking of the fall term of 1911, there is the following: "Of 75 teachers in the rural schools, 30 had normal training, 12 had been trained in Model schools and 2 had taken courses at summer training schools. The remaining 20 had received no professional training." Last term there were 72 teachers in purely rural schools, 46 of whom had Normal training, 8 had attended Fall Model Schools and 11 Summer Schools. Only 7 had no training. There need not have been more than one or two of these had it not been for the carelessness or incapacity of trustees. The other 21 teachers were all Normal trained and holders of Second Class Certificates. According to my grading, 57 teachers were doing work that might be classed as average or better, 30 were below average and 5 were poor.

Salaries

As indicating the advance in salaries, a comparison is here also made with five years ago. The amount given in each case being the average for the township based on the rate of salary being paid during the fall term. In this connection it ought to be noted that while a substantial advance has been made, the salaries are really lower now than in 1911 if we take into account that, as has been calculated, the purchasing power of a dollar then was equal to a dollar and sixty-seven cents now.

Following is the statement:—

	Av. 1911	Av. 1916	Inc.
Asphodel	$491	$571	$80
Belmont and Methuen	391	515	124
Burleigh and Anstruther	332	471	139

POSITIONS OPEN FOR SOLDIERS

If returned men will call at the Patriotic Fund office they can hear of several places required to be filled.

Man wanted to look after some records, answer phone and assist in business. Should have some knowledge of general business.

Man wanted for general work on machinery. Nothing very difficult. Who can handle the place?

Man wanted as driver of delivery rig. Good place and with a good employer. Better catch on while the place is open.

Good place open for competent man. Can't tell particulars here. Come to the office.

Other places will be announced.

RUSSIANS DESTROYED BULGARIAN BATTALION

But Are Pushed Back Mile and a Half West of Riga, by Germans.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 24— (Official statement.)—"On the Danube, opposite Tulicha a battalion of Bulgarians crossed the Georgieff branch under cover of a fog, in a night surprise attack. Our detachment destroyed the detachment which was crossing, capturing 337 prisoners and four machine guns, with a loss to us of only one killed and forty-two wounded.

The statement says that west of Riga Russians have been pushed back a mile and a half by German attacks.

BRIG. GENERAL HEMMING HERE ON BRIEF VISIT

NO RECRUITING MEETING FOR NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT.

THREE MEN ATTESTED.

Brig.-Gen. Hemming, officer commanding No. 3 Military District, paid an official visit to the Armories this afternoon and was much pleased with the reports from this district regarding the recruiting for the 247th Batt. Gen. Hemming is on his way to Lindsay.

Three recruits were attested today —Ptes. Henry C. Lord and Chas. A. Richards from Millbrook and Pte. John Martin from Ormsby. A few others who were ready to sign up were waiting for their medical examination.

There will be no Sunday night recruiting meeting this week.

Battalion Orders

By Lt.-Col. Ackerman, O.C., 274th Battn. Jan. 24, 1917.

Leave of Absence—

Lieut. R. G. Johnston, Headquarters, is granted leave of absence from Jan. 26 until noon, Jan. 27.

Garrison Board—

A garrison board will assemble at headquarters of this unit on Tuesday, Jan. 30, at 9 a.m. for the purpose of examining and reporting upon the condition of clothing of members of the band.

Two officers will be detailed to act on this board.

Subsistance—

N.C.O.'s and men on recruiting duty, either in or outside of city cannot exceed 60c per day for subsistance, this being the authorised rate. Any rate beyond this will not be recognized by the Paymaster.

Duties—

Next for duty—Lieut. J. F. Strickland.

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lieut.,
Adjutant.

"I do not expect the present methods of recruiting to last more than three months longer," was the significant statement made by Major Campbell, chief recruiting officer of the Third Military Division, in the course of a recruiting address at Belleville on Sunday night.

In a statement to The Warder, Lindsay, Lt.-Col. Glass of the 252nd Batt., said:

"I have not sent in my resignation, but from the way recruiting has been going on I am not inclined to hold the position when I find results cannot be produced. The people of

$36,000 FROM THE COUNTY

As Contribution to the Patriotic Fund.

$4000 for Sailors

The Peterborough County Council voted a grant to the Canadian Patriotic Fund of $3000 per month for the balance of 1917. The January payment of $3000 was voted at the December meeting of last year's council. This grant will make the total grant for the year from the county $36,000. Last January the council granted $1650 per month, which they raised to $2000 a month at the June session.

The money will be raised by this year's levy.

When the motion was moved by Reeve Mathison of Havelock and seconded by Deputy-reeve Eason, it seemed to meet the unanimous approval of the members generally, and it carried with hearty applause.

Mayor Duffus introduced the deputation, which consisted of Aldermen W. H. Taylor, A. McIntyre, A. Weir, F. H. Dobbin, Edgar Worth, Adjt. McElhiney, Messrs. C. Pennefather, W. Buller, R. R. Hall, F. D. Kerr, R. Harstone, B. F. Ackerman, V. Eastwood, W. H. Dunsford, and Judge Huycke.

The speakers on behalf of the grant were Mayor Duffus, W. Buller, F. H. Dobbin, R. R. Hall and Adjt. McElhiney.

The British Sailors' Relief Fund was granted $4000. The resolution was adopted by a standing vote.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1917.

THE NEW WARDEN.

MR. M. BROWN, who has reached the pinnacle of honor which is the ambition of every member of the County Council, merits the congratulations of his friends in a double sense. He has not only been elected warden of the county, but has been placed in the position without any opposition on the part of his colleagues, a distinction which is seldom accorded any candidate for the office. A long period of distinguished service has fitted the new warden for his duties, and his election is fully justified by his public record.

Merit was recognized in another member of the county legislature when Councillor Bullied was chosen chairman of the important committee of roads and bridges, one of the most influential of the subdivisions of the council. Councillor Anderson of Otonabee was also fortunate when the honors for the year were distributed. He has been appointed chairman of the property committee, which this year will consist of every member of the council, and, as such, will be the chief guiding spirit in the important work of repairing the Court House, so badly damaged by fire.

THE ROSS RIFLE.

THE ROSS RIFLE was adopted as the weapon of the Canadian militia when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in power. There were objections to it at that time on the score of efficiency, but these were overruled. The rifle was always regarded as a modern weapon, and Canadians armed with it won honors in the target contests in England.

When the present war broke out, Canadian soldiers were sent to Europe armed with the Ross rifle. Complaints were soon heard that it was not as effective as the Lee-Enfield, with which the British army was fitted out. This was due, not to any defects in the Ross rifle, but was entirely owing to a difference in the ammunition furnished.

Sir Robert Borden appealed to the British military authorities as experts to settle the dispute, promising to govern himself by their verdict. Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief, reported adversely on the weapon, and the Canadian Administration at once proceeded to replace it. What more could any government do under the circumstances?

No firearm is effective unless furnished with the ammunition designed for it. A gun captured from the enemy is useless in the hands of its new possessors just as soon as any ammunition that may have been taken with it is exhausted. The Ross rifle, whatever may be its future fate, is not likely to become what the Opposition would make of it—a weapon to be employed against the Government that received it as a legacy from their predecessors in office.

THE NOBEL INSTITUTE AND PEACE.

IN VIEW OF THE INTEREST roused by the latest German peace proposals, the following articles from the Norwegian Dagbladet have a special interest. The articles are by J. S. Worm-Miller, a distinguished Norwegian lawyer and historian, who takes up the cudgels in defence of the secretary of the Nobel Institute. This gentleman had publicly stated in a speech in Paris that, in his opinion, it was essential for the war to go on until the victory of certain principles—those for which the Allies were fighting—had been won. The intermediate article is a leader from The Dagbladet and is as follows:

"The violent attacks which the (Norwegian) papers have directed against the secretary of the Nobel Institute for his speech in Paris clearly show that so far as the peace movement is concerned there is 'something rotten in Norway.' They show that the dominating Norwegian opinion is that the great object is to put an end to the war and the shedding of blood, even if the destruction of right and justice be entailed; what is simply immoral and despicable, as demonstrated by The Morgenbladet, that it is a question of keeping as much in the background as may be.

"Secretary Moe has acted courageously and in a praiseworthy way in asserting that the question of justice should be the dominating principle in the efforts towards peace, and it is obviously as a consequence of this, his point of view, that he now combats 'an untimely and unjust peace.'

"It must be the object of all friends of peace that the peace, when it is concluded, shall be not a peace of Amiens but a Vienna Congress peace; that it shall be not an armistice, but a true peace founded on right. To this end peace must be based on justice. The monstrous outrages of International Law must be fully expiated and prevented for the future, and the object which primarily led to the war—the deliverance of oppressed nationalities—must be attained. Such a peace can only come through the victory of the Allies. It is quite clear, from the peace speeches which have emanated from all parties in Germany, that that country, now, as before, is the great obstacle in the way of the world's peace, and that peace negotiations, at the present time, would lead nowhere. For this reason Secretary Moe is absolutely right when he, as a friend of peace, maintains that it is the duty of the Allies to carry the war against war to a finish and to fight on for those aims which make this war—insane as it appears to be—the most reasonable of all wars.

It is precisely with this end in view that M. Moe can, quite justifiably, oppose attempts at mediation by the neutral countries. For what right have those States to mediate who have only considered and expounded their own interests and have not raised a voice to protest against the outrages on Belgium and Luxemburg, against the sinking of the Lusitania, against the deportation of French and Belgian workmen, against the wiping out of the Americans, and against the latest injustice perpetrated upon Poland? And how can they put forward proposals for mediation when they fail to demand, as a basis, that International Law, which bears a fundamental relation to the peace movement, shall be respected?

Consequently, it is no war speech which Secretary Moe has made. It is in every respect, both from the ethical and legal point of view, a manly plea for a permanent peace, and he is fully justified in taking this step, both as secretary of an institute whose aims are a permanent peace and justice between nations, and as a free citizen of a country which, whatever else may happen, will never countenance injustice. As a matter of fact, there is only one institution which, in this respect, has to maintain reserve, and that is the government of our country. It is, therefore, a serious mistake, the importance of which has been demonstrated on this occasion, and which, when opportunity occurs, should be corrected, that the chairman of the Nobel Committee is a member of the present government.

"This interpretation would be right if it were the Allies who were now inside Germany's frontiers, and refused peace offers, demanding annexations of German territoy. Then you would be justified in speaking about Joffre on the smouldering ruins of Berlin. But M. Moe's words must be interpreted in accordance with the actual war situation. It is Germany who has wanted to crush. It is Germany which has crushed Belgium, Luxemburg, North France, Poland, Lithuania, Courland, Serbia, and Montenegro, and it is German which is crushing Roumania.

THE CONSENT OF THE GOVERNED.

JUST AS PRESIDENT WILSON claims in his now famous address to the United States Senate, the small nations of the earth must be protected. Human experience has proved that there can be no stable government without the consent of the majority of the governed. The inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine in forty years never became reconciled to Germon domination. Poland, partitioned among three of her neighbors a century ago, has not accepted the conditions that were thrust upon her. While there is unrest in a community there is always danger of a revolt, and peace can never be assured.

Without autonomy the British dominions would never have remained peaceful adjuncts of the Empire; they would not be found fighting side by side with the Motherland in the present war. South Africa would not be the loyal and powerful ally of the Entente Powers that she is today if she had been humiliated and enslaved at the close of the South African war. Any nation, any race that possesses the qualifications for self-government should be given that right, if a majority of the community demand it.

President Wilson's propaganda may be sound in theory, but, under the circumstances, his recommendations and suggestions are likely to fail of their purpose. His own continent, his own country, is not entirely free from the conditions of which he complains. The South set up a government of its own, but was bayoneted into submission. Peace did not come in that case until victory was assured.

Ex-President Roosevelt assumes to criticize the suggestions of President Wilson. The Colonel's peace record is not altogether blameless. He could, if he chose, tell something interesting on the subject of how, for example, the United States, while he was President, secured the territory required for the construction of the Panama Canal, when one nation was set against another and the Americans grabbed up everything in sight in the way of spoils.

THE HIGH PRICE OF SHOES.

THERE IS ONE REASON why the price of shoes is so high, a reason that cannot be ascribed to the war and the prevailing scarcity of leather. The market for shoes is constantly widening. The work of the church missionary in heathen lands is having its effect. Japs and Chinese are coming more and more to adopt the footwear of civilisation. And now a new selling place for boots and shoes has been found in the Hawaiian Islands, the natives of which are no longer satisfied with the old style sandal. Occidental manufacturers are not equal to the task of meeting the demand for footwear at home and abroad.

A SHEER WASTE OF TIME.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER wasted the time of Parliament and burned up columns of space in Hansard and in his party newspapers with an address criticising the Administration, an address in which there is neither a single new idea or a new charge. Everything he said in Parliament the other day he had already said on the public platform at the various political meetings he addressed in defiance of his agreement to observe a truce during the war. Every charge he made was one that lacked even the scant interest of novelty. These charges had already been sprung and fully discussed in the press on both sides.

Sir Wilfrid's address in Parliament necessitates a long reply by the Premier, who meets every criticism. The trouble with the former Minister of Militia is made much of by the Opposition. Sir Robert Borden has plainly stated that when Gen. Sir Sam Hughes was in that position he was practically given a free hand, and that in every question of difficulty that arose he was loyally supported not only by the Premier himself, but by every member of the Cabinet. Sir Sam Hughes' services to the country are fully appreciated by his old-time Cabinet associates. That troubles arose that called for his resignation is a matter that has occasioned universal regret, but no Cabinet could survive in a time like this if complete harmony was lacking.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

IF HARTLEY DEWART ever dreamed that his own snatch victory could be duplicated, then he has indeed had a rude awakening.

Wit and Wisdom

So you are going into the automobile business?

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. About the only way you can feel sure that you can afford to run a car is to get into the business.

The man who flatters himself that he understands women continues to live in his delusion until he marries one of them, and then he finds out that he doesn't. If nature had intended that we should understand them she would have created them differently, and then there wouldn't have been so much in the world to keep us guessing. The Sphinx is a riddle because she never says anything. A woman is also a riddle, but not for the same reason. A man shouldn't write about women not only because he doesn't understand them, but because it is superfluous. A woman can speak for herself.

Nine persons, Italians and other foreigners, were committed for trial at Sydney Mines, N.S., for the murder of John Ramello, who was shot in a house and his body carried out and left on the street.

TO THOSE WHO STILL HESITATE

The war is not yet over.
The end is far from being in sight.
The power of the enemy is still unbroken.
The sternest part of the struggle is still to come.
In a tug of war the last pull on the rope decides the result.
All now depends upon our keeping up our fighting strength
Unless our armies are maintained in numbers, all is lost.

The number of men daily put out of action is enormous. Their places must be filled.

If there are not men to take these places, our efforts will be fruitless, our brave boys will have suffered and died in vain. We shall have brought upon ourselves defeat, destruction and disgrace.

Every available man is needed—urgently, imperatively, immediately needed.

Every man who loves his country, who values his honor, who is not a coward and a shirker, is called to go.

Go now. Don't hesitate, or falter, or shrink!
Act the man! Do your duty! Go now!

GOD SAVE THE KING

ANECDOTES OF THE FAMOUS

General Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in France—Man behind the Great Push! "Duggy" Haig, beloved of every man Jack in a khaki uniform.

And why? How long since is it that he became known to us all? For a few short months General Sir Douglas has achieved sufficient popularity to have become plain "Duggy" among men from whom such a familiarity is a rare compliment. The man who holds the fortunes of our armies in his care has become an amazing magnetic force which has attracted and held the faith and trust in Tommy and Jean alike, from divisional general downwards.

Consider what this means. Look what it is achieving in the Great Push. As brilliant and as far reaching as, say, Brusiloff's victories in the East; as epoch-making as Sarrail's offensive in the Balkans, what greater satisfaction can be had than a smashing up of the Germans in the West? Observe the methods of the great general. None of your attacks en masse before the artillery had completely destroyed the enemy defence.

No! a victory to Gen. Haig must be achieved at the minumum of cost. What does the expenditure of a few more shells matter when even one life of a British Tommy can be saved? "Duggy" Haig therefore, prefers the Joffre process of "nibbling" in which munitions rather than men are sacrificed. Hats off to "Duggy."

The man in the street is only just beginning to know more about the Man behind the Big Push. In the past Sir Douglas Haig simply stood for the general officer who sent periodical reports of victory to London. But go to France—on however cursory a visit—and the remarkable away of the man becomes at once apparent.

The man who is a descendant of the Haigs who fought with glory at Bannockburn six centures ago has become a vital power along the entire Western front.

As Wellington was of yesterday so Haig is today. If Hindenburg wants to shorten his line, Haig will do it for him very thoroughly.

Needless to say he is a Scotsman. A man of grit, endurance and taciturnity, he possesses all the characteristics one expects from one of the granite race. And yet there is an anomalous streak in him. You look and see the blue eyes, firm chin and finely chiselled features, you mark well the imperturbality of the Fifer and admit their consistency in the sinewy and alert figure. But then you look again and notice a suspicion of merriment hiding behind the big frank eyes.

There is nothing sumptuous about the general headquarters of the commander-in-chief. For a long time they were situated in a modest house which in part was still occupied by the owners. Here the head of an army ten times more gigantic than that of the Great Duke would meet his staff at breakfast at half-past eight each morning.

Let us hope that the Push will necessitate a removal of these headquarters further on towards the German frontier! Perhaps it already has. Ask any Tommy if he was surprised at the staggering Push he gave the Germans, and he'll reply. "Why, Duggy's got a lot more like that up his sleeve!" And those who have had the privilege of an informal chat with the great man, think the same.

FIRST GLIMPSE OF FLORIDA

At this season of the year the annual migration from Peterborough to the South begins, and those who obtain their first, and often only glimpse of Florida through the fashionable medium, of Palm Beach will be interested in the very different impression which John Muir received of the State which to him was the Promised Land. In the journal of his "Thousand Mile Walk to the Gulf," he wrote under date of Oct. 15 1867: "Today, at last, I reached Florida, the so-called 'Land of Flowers,' that I had so long waited for, wondering if, after all, my belongings and prayers would be in vain, and I should die without a glimpse of the flowery Canaan. But here it is, at the distance of a few yards!—a flat, watery, reedy coast with clumps of mangrove and forests of moss-dressed, strange trees, appearing low in the distance. The steamer finds her way among the reedy islands like a duck, and I step on a rickety wharf. A few steps more take me to a rickety town, Fernandina.

"In visiting Florida in dreams, of either day or night, I always came suddenly on a close forest of trees, every one in flower, and bent down and entangled to network by luxuriant, bright-blooming vines, and over all a flood of bright sunlight. But such was not the gate by which I entered the promised land. Salt marshes, belonging more to the sea than to the land; with groves here and there, green and unflowered, sunk to the shoulders in sedges and rushes; with trees farther back, ill defined in their boundary, and instead of rising in hilly waves and swellings, stretching inland in low water-like levels."

The township of North Monaghan has been omitted from this statement for the reason that during the years covered changes have taken place of such a character as to make a comparison of no value in showing the tendency of rural school population.

It will be observed that while the enrolment continued to fall off, the average for 1915 was considerably higher than for 1910. This is encouraging and is, no doubt, to be attributed chiefly to the improvement in the schools themselves. It will also be observed that if the pupils could have been distributed equally among the 70 teachers concerned in 1915, each would have had 30 on the roll with an average of about 17. Could the pupils have been brought together in suitable groups, 40 teachers instead of 70 could have done the work more efficiently. A continuation of the present tendency will make the consolidated school imperative.

Hindrances to Progress

Notwithstanding progress that has been made, the fact still remains that irregularity of attendance is the greatest hindrance to efficiency. So far as my experience goes, the present Truancy Act has had little lasting beneficial effect. Replies to notices are frequently abusive and disrespectful. Those that are not so, often show wonderful ingenuity in making excuses and reckless extravagance in making promises, most of which are fulfilled for a week or two only, if at all. Truant officers, with power to enforce the provisions of the Act, should be appointed in each municipality.

Another fruitful source of waste and inefficiency is the constant changing of teachers. At the time of my last visit to the schools, I found 20 of 72 teachers filling the same positions in the rurals schools that they had filled at the visit a year before. During that same period there were 64 changes. One township with 15 teachers had 23 changes. Only 6 of the 72 teachers above referred to had held their positions for more than two year, and two had been in their present positions for five years. For this condition both teachers and people are to blame. Teachers are lacking in a sense of the importance of their work and the greatness of their opportunities and responsibilities. The people have little appreciation of the value of a good school, and are often antagonistic to the teacher rather than sympathetic or helpful. They are influenced by local jealousies and ill feeling that often make the position of the teacher difficult and unpleasant.

Grants

The grants for last year were liberal. They are now arranged on such a plan that no school need lack the services of a good teacher on account of inability to pay a reasonable salary. All that is necessary is for the people to have the enterprise necessary to secure a qualified and competent teacher and the grants will do the rest. Many instances could be cited of schools that have, within the last four or five years, nearly doubled their rate of salary and the sections are not paying any more now than before. While there are others that cannot be convinced that it will cost them no more to get a qualified teacher at $550 or $600 than one with no certificate at $300 or $350. In regard to the grants from the Assisted Schools Fund, it is now distinctly understood that it is to be applied only to aiding schools that secure qualified teachers. The total grants for the year were as follows: Rural Schools—

Fixed grant, $803; certificates, $479.50; salaries, $5868.80; accommodation and equipment, $814.32; assisted schools, $1825; libraries, $209.80; total, $10018.42

Village schools, $555.34.

Continuation schools, $1012.02.

Total—$11,585.78.

Teaching of Agriculture

Regular instruction in Agriculture under the special regulations of the Department of Education, is being given in three schools of the inspectorate. There are others in which the teachers are anxious to undertake the work but in some cases the trustees are opposed and in others the schools are so small that it has not been thought wise to attempt it.

I wish again to express my appreciation of the work that is being done by the representatives of the Department of Agriculture in connection with the home gardens and the rural school fairs. During last year the township of Belmont was added to the territory formerly covered and a very successful fair was held at Havelock.

No Extra Grants

The school committee decided not to make any extra grants to the municipalities that had continuation schools. Last year the council granted an extra 25 per cent. over the Government grant.

Reeves Fitzgerald and Young made a strenuous appeal to the members to continue the grant but the majority thought that extra fees should be charged to the pupils that attended the continuation classes.

The usual grants for expenses were made to the school inspectors.

Lost the Bet

"I'll bet you anything you like," said Jones to Brown, "that you can't spell three simple words I'll give you within twenty seconds."

"I'll take it on. What are they?" said Brown.

"Well, here goes. Believe.

"B e l i e v e."

"Receive."

"R e c e i v e."

"Wrong!" said Jones

"What," exclaimed Brown. "I've spelt the two words you gave me correctly. I'm certain I'm not——"

"Time's up!" Jones said, triumphantly. "Why didnt you spell the third word—w r o n g?"

Fire in the loading department of Renfrew Shell Factory did $2,000 damage.

IF MAN COULD ONLY HIBERNATE

"We have evoluted from the lower animals," observed the professor to his fellow boarders, as they gathered round the supper table. "We have reached out and enlarged our field of activity and gained in wisdom through the ages, discarding wings and tails when they were no longer useful to us, until we have reached a point where our ends can be gained with a degree of ease and comfort——"

"Oh, I dont know," interrupted the argumentative boarder. "I think we discarded a lot of things by evolution that we should have held on to I have always been sore at my progenitors for not holding on to their hibernating traits. That hibernating should become a forgotten art is one of the greatest losses in human history.

"If a fellow could crawl into some place just ahead of the first snow and not come back until after the slush had gone he would be a lot better off."

"He could dodge a lot of coal, light and gas bills," sighed the landlady.

"He could do away with a lot of food, clothing and other luxuries," insisted the argumentative boarder. "He could dodge Christmas and New Year's, two most expensive institutions. He could avoid all this getting up at night and dressing by yellow candle light, an exercise no one really cares for."

"I should not care to hibernate until after Christmas," declared the pretty teacher. "I love Christmas but I wouldn't mind sleeping through January, February and March."

"I wouldn't come out in March," continued the argumentative boarder. "I would wait till strawberries were ripe."

"I am in favor of the hibernating idea," said Stews, "but I never was much on going to bed early. I would stay up and enjoy a good long sleigh ride and a Christmas punch before I retired. I think I'd go to bed about Jan. 2 unless there were too many good people sitting up. And I'd sleep till cherry time. I'd want to get up when cherries were ripe, although I wouldn't mind a peep at the cherry blossoms if I could simply look out and then go back to sleep. Of course I wouldn't go out if it was muddy."

"I'd retire about Dec. 27," suggested the landlady's daughter. "That would give me time to get all my presents in and go to bed before the time to acknowledge them came."

DISTRICT CUP WIN AT LINDSAY BY TWO SHOTS

Kay's Rink Ahead by Three Shots and Campbell Four One Down.

Congratulations were showered on Skips Kay and Campbell when they landed at the curling rink last night with the District Cup, which goes each year to the winner of Group 2. The honor fell to Peterborough yesterday, when they defeated Lindsay in one of the hardest fought curling battles ever witnessed in Scugogville, and some good ones have been played there.

It was a steady grind from start to finish, both sides having their ups and downs. Skip Alex. Kay and his rink finished 3 up, while Skip Curley of Lindsay had Skip W. Campbell 1 down.

The rinks and scores were:—

Peterborough	Lindsay
J. H. Mcgheral	F. W. Moynes
P. Fitzgerald	G. A. Robson
E. G. Patterson	E. Gregory
Alex. Kay	G. Best

W. Campbell	W. Carley
(Skip)—18	(Skip)—19
Total........36	Total....34

This is the second year in succession that Peterborough rinks have had the honor of winning the group cup. Since the start the honor roll, according to the name shields of the winners, has been won 6 times by Lindsay, 5 times by Peterborough, 3 times by Keene, 2 by Campbellford and once each by Orillia and Barrie. The honor roll is—

1900—Campbellford
1901—Campbellford
1902—Keene
1903—Keene
1904—Barrie

Games Tonight

Matthews vs. McDermid
Dela Fosse vs. Taylor
Waddell vs. Giroux
J. H. Ferguson vs. Campbell
Foote vs. Dr. Wightman

-- SPORT PARAGRAPHS --

In the Pacific Coast League last night Vancouver defeated Spokane by 8 goals to 5.

◆ ◆ ◆

A new scale of prices, 30, 40 and 50 cents, covering the war tax, will prevail at the rink Friday night when the Soldiers meet the 228th Battalion senior O. H. A. team. These prices are for Friday night's game only.

◆ ◆ ◆

◆ ◆ ◆

The fans are assured of plenty of hockey. Major O'Flynn is trying to make arrangements for the Parry Sounders, who defeated the Soldiers in the first game of the season, to play a return game here. And if all goes well the 227th Battalion team from Hamilton will journey this way.

◆ ◆ ◆

The fate of the Lindsay sporting clubs is not pleasant. They were beaten out in hockey, lost in the Tankard games here, and were defeated on home ice in the District Cup competition.

◆ ◆ ◆

The weekly brace of Church Hockey League games will be played at the rink tomorrow night. Having survived the ordeal of the first night the teams should provide interesting hockey.

◆ ◆ ◆

A combination of G. N. W. Telegraph and G. T. R. Employes will play a game of hockey with the C. P. R. employes at the Brock street rink tonight.

LIBERALS IN HOUSE FILE DEMAND FOR ELECTION

Hon. Frank Oliver Says People Have Right to be Heard From---Capt. Burnham Corrects Opposition Speakers.

OTTAWA, Jan. 24. — "Has my honorable friends ever endeavored to find out from any of our boys themselves whether they had any complaints to make of their medical treatment? I can tell him that there has not been a complaint of any kind," said Capt. Burnham of West Peterborough, in reply to a statement made by E. M. Macdonald of Pictou, who, in continuing the debate on the address, referred to Gen. Sir Sam Hughes's asertion that while in England he found that first year medical men were operating on wounded Canadians.

Mr. Macdonald: "All I say in reply is to refer the honorable member to the statements made by Dr. Bruce."

Hon. Frank Oliver, in a lengthy speech, demanded conscription and said the people of the country should be given a chance to declare themselves by the holding of a general election. He objected to the breaking up of battalions in England, and was told by Capt. Burnham that when the call for reinforcements came it was possible to send only men who had completed their training and were fit for the front. He also objected to the censorship, which, he said, had done an injury to recruiting. The people had a right to know the truth.

The present Parliament and Government, he said, had been elected under peace conditions.

"We have a peace administration in office when we should have a war administration," he continued. "We must go back to the people and get their mandate as their mind is today."

"Canada wanted a free government, not a dictatorship, to win the war such as obtained in Great Britain.

"I am at a loss to know," he concluded, "why the people of Canada are not considered to be the best judges of the welfare of Canada."

Mr. D. D. Mackenzie of North Cape Breton and Victoria adjourned the debate.

CHERNIAVSKY TRIO TO GIVE RECITAL IN CITY.

Mr. John Allan has great pleasure in announcing that the above world-famous Russian Trio will give one of their splendid recitals in the Conservatory Hall on Monday evening, Feb 12.

Each member of this wonderful trio plays with all the brilliance, power and technique of the virtuoso, combined with the passion, abandon and warmth typical of the music of the Slav race. Russia, of all the nations engaged in the present awful warfare, will at its conclusion surprise the world in regard to its music and literature.

It is going to forge ahead and come into its own along these lines, and musically will lead the world.

All the real lovers of music who heard this wonderful musical combination on their former visit to the city will need no reminder to keep Feb. 12 free, but to those who did not, and especially would we advise all students of music, whether vocal or instrumental, to avail themselves of hearing this trio and profiting thereby, for the educational effect of such a recital is great, apart altogether from the pure enjoyment it affords the hearers.

Correspondence regarding the calling of the Imperial war conference discloses that no date had yet been decided upon when the conference will assemble.

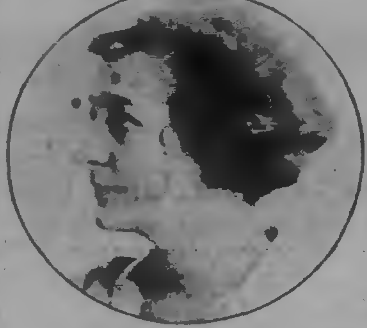
REEVE W. MATHISON

Chairman of Committee on Appointments of County Council and representing Havelock.

"ALADDIN AND HIS WONDERFUL LAMP."

In preparing the famous English pantomime, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," for the Canadian tour, F. Stuart Whyte has been careful to preserve all of the traditional settings and "business" of the old country show. The scenes are laid in China and the Cave of Jewels, Willow Pattern Palace, etc., have been reproduced for this production exactly as they are staged in the Drury Lane Theatre in London.

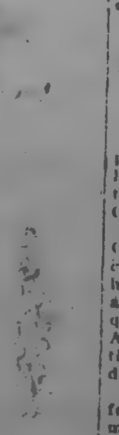
"Aladdin" was given its initial eastern presentation at The Grand, Toronto, on Monday evening, January 8th, and played to the biggest week's business of the season.



EDNA HATTON

As "Judy," the orphan waif, in "Daddy Long Legs."

An avalanche of mail orders and reiterated requests over the telephone for seats for "Daddy Long Legs," at The Grand Opera House on Saturday next, matinee and night, show that theatregoers of this city are extraordinarily interested in the impending appearance of Jean Webster's fascinating comedy. In view of the fact that "Daddy Long Legs" has been for nearly two years the biggest dramatic hit on the American stage, it would not be surprising to observe a rush for seats. But the demand for reservations that have reached the box office at The Grand is almost unprecedented in the history of the house, and indicates that the play is as eagerly awaited here as it was in New York, Chicago and San Francisco last year, where in each city it broke house records for big business. The seat sale will open tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.



How to Get Well

Your brain generates MIND ENERGY

This mind energy flows from your brain in currents out through your NERVES to all the various organs and parts of your body, to each and all their life and power to function.

Perfect currents to all parts mean perfect health. Imperfect currents to any part mean imperfect health, weakness and disease of that part.

In order that these currents may be perfect—normal in volume—your NERVES and NERVE CENTRES must be free from the SLIGHTEST PRESSURE.

To avoid pressure on these highly sensitive centres the joints of your spine must be kept FULLY OPEN—the spinal bones must be kept to their normal distance apart and true to each other laterally.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

The annual meeting of the Local Council of Women, which will be held on Friday afternoon in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., is open to everybody and a large attendance is expected.

Every affiliated society doing patriotic work is asked to report such work and the standing committees which have been doing active work will report.

Officers will be elected and the work outlined for the coming year. Watch tomorrow's paper for program.

Satisfactory Reports

Very satisfactory reports on the progress of the Sunday School were received at the annual meeting of officers and teachers of George St. Church last night.

WHO WILL GET THAT CLOCK AT OAK HALL?

Tomorrow, Dollar Day, is the last day to make your guess when the clock will stop. Fill out coupon with date, hour and minute, be sure to state whether a.m. or p.m., and deposit in ballot box at Oak Hall store. For the convenience of the workingman the store will be open until 7 p.m.

We cannot put any more seconds in a minute, or minutes in an hour, or tell you when the clock will stop. No one can. All have an equal chance.

One thing we can do, and will do, in fact have done it. We have put more cents in a dollar bill than you thought. You will show more sense with your dollars by bringing them to Oak Hall and your dollar bill will have more cents and a chance to win a $17 clock free for you.

FOR FOOT SUFFERERS.

BRIG. GENERAL

this community do not seem to take the matter seriously and very little assistance has been given the 252nd. Only $270 has been received since I took command. Another matter which I wish to make clear is this, when I was placed in charge of the 252nd Sir Sam Hughes permitted me getting recruits anywhere in Victoria County, Haliburton, Muskoka or New Ontario, but since his resignation my territory has been confined to Victoria and Haliburnto. This has so hampered me that I find it impossible to raise a battalion in a territory that has been drained of its men by the 109th and other battalions. I was not impressed with the trend of recruiting early in the fall, but I remained on hoping an improvement might take place in January, but my hopes have not been realised. December, January and February should have been the best months for recruiting.

"After all our endeavors, the officers and myself included, we have only signed up 150 men. Those have cost the country about $100 each, and had I put on all the officers that a free hand permitted me doing, they would have cost the country $200 each. I do not wish to be a party to useless expenditure, and I made as good a showing as any other recruiting officer in Ontario since I started, but I feel that the results do not justify the expenditure and therefore will ask to be relieved of the duty of lieut.-colonel.

TEACH WOMEN TO MAKE SHELLS

MANY REGISTRATIONS AT TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

WINNIPEG, Jan 24.—Sixty women registered at Kelvin and St. John's Technical High schools for preliminary instruction in shellmaking. Forty-eight registered at Kelvin and 12 at St. John's.

There is room for 37 more women to register in the St. John's Technical classes and four in the Kelvin classes. Eighteen can be accommodated in each class.

The technical schools do not provide for teaching munitions making directly. The machinery necessary for such lessons is not installed in the schools. The handling of metal-working machinery is all that can be learned. This will prepare the women to enter the factories when the factories are opend to them.

Miss Hannah Black, who has come to Winnipeg from Glasgow, Scotland where she was in a munitions factory for a year, will be present at the first classes.

G. A. Warburton Retires From Chairmanship

DOES NOT WISH TO BE INVOLVED IN POLITICAL CONTROVERSY.

TORONTO, Jan. 24.—Mr. George A. Warburton has announced his retirement from the position of chairman of the Dominion prohibition movement. The reasons for this move he explains in the following statement:

"The pressure of other duties, the length of time likely to be required, and the undesirability of my becoming involved in political controversy are among the reasons which led me to withdraw from the Dominion prohibition campaign. It seems to me that for the present at least any work for Dominion prohibition must be undertaken by those who can devote their whole time to it, and this I am not in a position to do. My primary responsibility is to the Toronto Young Men's Christian Association."

KNITTERS OF SOCKS.

The members of St. Peter's Patriotic Club are requested to do their shopping on Thursday morning, so that they may be able to come to the club rooms to work in the afternoon. All those who are knitting for the club are asked to bring in as many pairs of socks as possible, as all the socks on hand Thursday will be sent to the Secours Nationale. The tea-room will be in charge of Mrs. W. A. Haslam and Miss Eva Tangney, and an invitation is extended to all the Dollar Day shoppers to come to the T. A. S. rooms tomorrow afternoon and have tea with St. Peter's Patriotic Club. There will also be a guessing contest. Come and have a guess and help us procure more yarn, as we don't want the boys at the front to have cold feet.

WILLIAM B. STEWART

William B. Stewart, who died at his late residence, 136 Bedford Rd., Toronto, on Monday, Jan. 22, was a native of Peterborough, being the eldest son of Frank T. Stewart and Joan Brown and grandson of the late Hon. Thomas A. Stewart, of Auburn Co. of Peterborough. Wm. B. Stewart received his education in the schools here, afterwards taking up his business career in Toronto in the early seventies. He was for some years in the employ of Thompson & Burns Hardware Co., after which he was in business for himself in Uxbridge, Ont. Trenton, N.J., and Toronto. More than a year ago his health began to give way and he was obliged to place his business in the hands of his sons, whom he had trained.

Mr. Stewart had many relatives and friends in Peterborough. His family consisted of his wife, who is a daughter of the late Benton Hutchinson of Montreal, four sons and three daughters. His second son, Capt. Alan Stewart, is at present on active service in France.

PRES. WILSON MAY HAVE INSIDE INFORMATION

From Germany Not Given Out to Allies.

LONDON, Jan. 24. — President Wilson's speech in the Senate yesterday on participation by the U.S. in a league of peace maintained its position as the chief news event in the evening papers here, which devote their front pages to the text and comment from the morning papers of London and Paris under headings such as "President Wilson's Millenium" and "The Washington Sensation."

The Westminster Gazette asks whether, if President Wilson had suffered what the Eenteute Allies have, he would patiently have listened to a third party telling him he must be content to end the war without winning it and to forego penalties against the enemy who had sprung the war, torn up treaties and committed "unheard of crimes against humanity," and says: "We see no reply to these vetors."

The Gazette refers President Wilson for Germany's reply to Emperor William's letter to the King of Wurttemburg, in which the German Emperor appealed to the German people, saying, "Hold on with blood and treasure until the arrogance of our enemies is shattered by our unshakeable will to victory," and the newspaper adds: "Thus, so far as we are concerned, we have no cognisance of any willingness on our enemies' part to accept peace without victory."

The Gazette says it is a reasonable inference from the President's mention of the German intentions that "he knows something that we don't know," and concludes:

"Mr. Wilson has something further in view than rhetoric," and suggests that "his most practical step is to tell us what the German terms are, or if he does not know, to induce the Germans to disclose them. We shall then be able to attach a definite meaning to words and phrases that are now quite vague, and to discover whether the suggested 'peace without victory' is a peace which would leave our necessary objects unaccomplished, or merely a peae which stops short of 'crushing' the enemy in the same sense of inflicting on him political extinction which we disavow.

"The ideals which President Wilson sets before us are so remote from Prussian militarism that their realization necessarily carries with it extinction of German tyranny. His general idea of a world at peace with a reign of law established and all nationalities, great and small, living in freedom and security is such that he can only get what he wants if we at the same time get what we want.

"We frankly do not know what he means by 'freedom of the seas,' but in all other respects his aims are our aims and his ideals are our ideals. No man who is interested in these aims and ideals can be disinterested in the terms of peace, and no peace can secure them which does not, in our opinion, carry with it the defeat of our enemy."

H.M.S IRON DUKE, "SOMEWHERE ON THE LOOKOUT."

CITY AND COUNTY COMMITTEE IS FORMED FOR ASSOCIATED KIN OF CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES

Objects Are to Secure Recruits, to Assist in Promoting the Efficiency of the Service, to Protect the Soldiers' Home Interests, to Secure Employment for Returned Men, Assist in Detection of Fraudulent Claims and to Pray Each Day for Success of Allied Arms.

In a heart-to-heart talk with the business men of the city and county yesterday afternoon, Commodore Æmelius Jarvis, chief naval recruiting officer, explained in a very concise way what Canada owed to the Royal Navy. He also formed a branch of the Associated Kin of Canadian Expeditionary Forces and thoroughly explained the objects and duties of its members

The meeting, which was held in the City Council chamber, was well attended. Mayor Duffus presided. There were present Messrs. H. B. Rye, Norman Lean, W. H. Taylor, W. E. Griffith, M. Walsh, J. H. Bell, W. Mathison, W. Anderson, C. J. Darling, M. Brown, F. J. Bullied, B. Squire, W. Stocker, John Young, Ed. Elliot, Alex. Gibson, Robt Fair, A. Weir, Roland Denne, A. McIntyre, D. Easson, G. H. Logie, T. F. Matthews, C. C. Abbott, F. D Kerr, W. H. Dunsford, Edgar Worts and Fred McKee

What We Owe the Navy

Commodore Jarvis stated that the object of his visit to Peterborough was to get the people generally interested in the work of the Royal Navy and he had concluded that the best and surest way to accomplish this result was to have the matter taken up by a committee of citizens and business men. In his tour of the province he was endeavoring to visit each county at the time the County Councils were in session and by that means get the organization extended to the outlying districts. He also drew attention to the fact that the needs of the army had been thoroughly explained to them by recruiters time after time and while all were proud of Britain and her navy, very few of the Canadian people had attempted anything towards helping it. At the outbreak of the war the Canadian Government had offered to furnish men for the army and navy, but were told by the Home Office to devote their attention to the army and leave the navy to them.

Since that time a change had taken place and a call had been made on Canada to supply 5,000 men for the navy. This was necessary owing to a great many of the patrol boats, trawlers and mine sweepers requiring experienced seamen, while the new recruits could take their places on large battleships where a short training made them very efficient. The men who enlisted in any municipality were equipped at Toronto, sent back home in their uniform for a short leave and told to try and add another recruit. The pay was the same as in the Canadian overseas forces and the same separation allowances and Patriotic Fund assistance to the dependants.

What Canada Owes

The Royal Navy was not asking for financial assistance of any kind but looking to the representive men to co-operate in getting young men to sign up for service on the high seas. Canada owed its very existence to the protection that had been given it by the navy.

The army was the first that struck the blow, but the navy was the arm that drove the fist. He appealed to all present to use their best endeavors to getting men for the period of the war. About 1,000 of the 5,000 had already signed up and he had every confidence that when his organization had been perfected that no trouble would be found in getting men to fill the gaps in the very interesting and instructive work.

Canada had a small patrol fleet of its own which they were adding to all the time. One of them had brought 30 prizes into Halifax harbor. These boats patrolled the Atlantic from Newfoundland as far south as Nantucket.

The chief recruiting officer, in conclusion, explained the desirability of forming a branch of the "Associated Kin" in Peterborough. Any person who has or had any kin overseas or in the navy could become a member and it was the duty of the association to assist the men in getting all that was due them or their dependents, to assist in getting returned men employment and incidentally help to keep the forces supplied with men. One object was to prevent frauds being accomplished in the granting of pensions and patriotic assistance.

After answering a few questions from some of those present, Commodore Jarvis concluded his very interesting address.

It was decided, on a motion of Messrs. Dunsford and Logie to follow the suggestion and the following were appointed an organization committee:—

From the city—Messrs. Dunsford, Logie, Abbott, Kerr, Stocker, Fair, Gibson. From the townships—Messrs Rye, Squire, Fitzgerald, Mathison, Brown, Griffith, Lean, Darling, Bullied, Walsh, Young, Bell, Clark, Ingram, Anderson, Easson, McKee and Nicholls.

At a later meeting it was suggested that Mr. Walter Stocker be the convenor of the committee.

A London cable says that W. T. R. Preston, formerly emigration commissioner for Canada, is now a prominent official with the National Service Commission of Great Britain.

INSULTING THE UNIFORM

Scotland Yard Keeps close Watch on "Bogus Heroes"

Scotland Yard organized a special staff to round up bogus "heroes." The King's uniform has been abused to a greater extent than has been supposed. The military authorities saw the danger and made an effort themselves to deal with it, but the assistance of Scotland Yard was found to be desirable, and a strict look-out is kept for adventurers in military guise. Impostors trying to take advantage of public generosity find it very difficult in Britain to pursue their methods.

Sugar Cookies

Cream, two cups of sugar and one cup of butter or butter substitute, add three eggs one at a time and beat thoroughly before adding another. Add one cup of sour milk, into which you have stirred one teaspoon of soda, a pinch of salt and a dash of cinnamon and half a teaspoon of vanilla. Stir in two cups of flour. Now take a cupful of the dough out of the molding board and add as little flour as possible to keep from sticking to hands and board. Cut into shape, place in greased pan and sprinkle granulated sugar on top.

These cookies may be dropped from a teaspoon instead of being rolled.

Place them about three inches apart and press into cookie shape.

They must be baked in what is termed a "quick oven."

FOOD AND FOOD VALUES

Fish an Important Item in the Menu—Mutton Most Nourishing

There is hope of establishing in all important cities of the country a permanent exhibit of relative food values, to which the public may go as to a reference library, and find out exactly the fuel value of every article of diet. This will be of inestimable value to the housekeeper. The value of a food must be determined by various tests. It should be first palatable in order to stimulate the appetite, then digestible. It should provide the nutritious elements demanded by nature in the proper proportions, and it should be cheap enough to be available for the majority.

During the past ten years the ever increasing agitation over the high cost of living has caused continual investigation, and as a result there are now available tables of relative food values which are immensely helpful, and if it were only possible to give them country-wide publicity, as would be done by the creation of the exhibit referred to above, an immense amount of good would be achieved.

Fish Equal to Beef

Is fish as nutritious as meat? What are the relative values? We study the tables and we find the following information: Fish is essentially a nitro-generous food. In this it resembles meat. The place of fish in the diet is the same as meat, if judged by its composition—that is, it supplements cereals and other vegetables, the most of which, as wheat, rye, maize, rice, potatoes, etc., are deficient in protein, the chief nutrient in the flesh of fish. From the standpoint of both nutritive value and palatability fish, according to a recent German investigator, is an important food product and, as shown by his experiments, equal to beef as a source of energy in the diet. It produces the same sensation of satiety, and this persists for as long a time. It was found that fish caused the excretion of a smaller amount of uric acid than meat.

Fish usually contains less fat than is found in meat. There is, however, much difference in the fat contents of the various kinds of fish. They may indeed be roughly divided into three classes: The first class, those containing over 5 per cent. fat, would include such fish as salmon, shad, herring, Spanish mackerel, and butterfish; the second, those containing between 2 and 5 per cent., are whitefish, mackerel, mullet, halibut, and porgy; the third, those containing less than 2 per cent., are smelts, black bass, bluefish, white perch, weakfish, brook trout, hake, flounder, yellow perch, pike, pickerel, sea bass, cod, and haddock.

Now let us make a little table comparing the entire fuel value of these various fish with other foods. The comparison will be taken upon the fuel value per pound, for lack of space prevents our going into the comparative value of protein, carbohydrates, and fats.

Kind of food.	Fuel value per pound.
Beef, side, medium fat	998
Chicken	744
Milk	313
Mutton, side	1,307
Turkey	1,034
Mackerel, salted	1,167
Shad	581

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

PERFECT WOMEN

Measurements of Ancient Works of Art Used as Standard

If any woman wishes to know if she is a perfect specimen of her sex she has only to apply to the rules laid down for ascertaining the fact, and figure out the results.

First as to height, tastes differ, but the Medicean Venus is 5 feet 5 inches in height, and this is held by many sculptors and artists to be the most admirable stature. For a woman of 5 feet 5 inches, 138 pounds is the proper weight, and if she be well formed she can stand another 16 pounds without greatly showing it.

When the arms are extended she should measure from tip of middle finger just 5 feet 5 inches, exactly her own height. The length of her hand should be just a tenth of that, of her foot just a seventh, and the diameter of her chest a fifth. From the thighs to the ground she should measure just what she measures from the thighs to the top of the head. The knee should be exactly midway between the thigh and the heel.

The distance from the elbow to the middle finger should be the same as the distance from the elbow to the middle of the chest. From the top of the head to the chin should be just the same as the length of the foot, and there should be the same distance between the chin and the armpits. A woman of this height should measure 24 inches about the waist and 30 inches about the bust if measured under the arms and 43 inches if [illegible].

The upper arm should be 12 inches round and the wrist 6 inches. The calf of the leg should be 14½ inches, round the thigh 25 inches, and the ankle 8 inches. There is another system of measurements which says that the distance twice around the thumb should be once round the wrist; twice round the wrist once round the throat; twice round the throat once round the waist, and so on; but the foot/are the standards used by sculptors, who have gained them by measurements of the Greek statues.

Quick Potato Peeling

Instead of peeling potatoes for steaming or boiling, simply cut a narrow strip entirely round the centre of each one. After being cooked, drained, and dried, in the ordinary way, the potatoes slip easily from the skins when the opposite ends are pressed between the thumb and forefinger.

Horse Radish Sauce For Fish

Four tablespoons of vinegar, blended with the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs until all is a smooth, even paste. Add one-half teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of sugar, one ounce of freshly grated horse radish. Beat all until creamy. Add one tablespoon of heavy cream. Stir a minute and serve.

Preparing Horse Radish

When purchasing the prepared horseradish we pay for grated turnip, cabbage stalks and hearts and khol and rabi. So it is far better to buy the root and get your money's worth. It may be grated and bottled and keeps well in cool place.

FOR WORKERS' WELFARE

Suffering and Poverty of Women Munition Producers Prevented

There are many ways in which welfare supervision in a munitions plant where women work is invaluable. In order that we may keep in touch with our own staff without appearing to interfere with their private lives, we have under the welfare supervisor a social secretary, writes an English woman. She studies the lists of women and girls absentees, and finds out if certificates of illness have been sent. If the women are living in lodgings they are visited, and in this way many cases of serious illness have been discovered, and possibly long and painful periods of suffering prevented.

This social secretary keeps in touch with the house doctor and dentist, and where necessary advises the management when a grant for some special surgical instrument or an unusually large dental bill beyond the means of the individual is necessary. This work coincides with that of a factory welfare supervisor.

What is the Difference?

What is the differnt between desertion and death, if the wife and children are left without support, in either case when the husband and father failed through negligence to provide for them?

The above may sound a little harsh; I guess it does; but it may not have struck you that way before! and if the husband is insurable, is there really any difference?

Answer this vital question now that your attention has been called to it, in a practical way, by writing, telephoning or calling on the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canad.a as with its Eighty Odd Millions of Assets, the largest amount held by any Canadian company, there is no safer, sounder or more generous and faithful custodian to be found to administer your wishes with regard to your wife and children.

Lloyd-George's Frankness

Rev. Dr. C. F. Aked, writing of Lloyd-George, said: "Really, his frank speech has been a part of his strength. It is not Welsh; it is English. His intellect is swift. It pounces on a fact like a hawk on its prey. And this is not Welsh, either. But the directness of speech, the demand for an honest avowal of conviction, the relentless candor which offers and which compels straightforwardness are all typically English. And they have expressed themselves through the medium of this indescribable Welsh eloquence, with its pathos and pleading and persuasiveness, and guilelessly guileful sweet reasonableness."

Application to Parliament

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Corporation of the City of Peterborough will apply to the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario at the next Session thereof, for an Act for the following purposes:—

1.—To authorize the Council of the City of Peterborough to purchase Motor Driven Fire Apparatus, with the necessary equipment, and to issue Debentures to pay for the same to an amount not exceeding $10,000.

2.—To amend Section 9 of Chapter 83 of the Statutes of 1907, so as to provide for the more expeditious collection of the special rates therein referred to.

3.—To authorize the Council or the Peterborough Utilities Commission to instal sanitary conveniences in any building, the owner of which is unable to pay the expense of same at once, or who has neglected to instal same and to make the necessary connections therefrom to the sewage and water works system and to pay the cost thereof and collect the same including interest, in equal quarterly instalments from the owner of such building, and to provide that such cost shall be a charge on the said building and the land on which the same is situated until fully paid and that if any of said instalments are not paid they may be collected by action against the owner or added to the Collector's roll and collected in like manner as Municipal taxes with authority to the said Council to issue Debentures to meet the cost of said work.

4.—In the event of the City acquiring the plant, property and business of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, that the Peterborough Utilities Commission shall have the control and management thereof with power to maintain, operate, extend and renew the same and that the said Peterborough Radial Railway shall when acquired be a public utility within the meaning of The Public Utilities Act and the provisions of the said Act, and of section 3 of Chapter 65 of the Acts passed in the year 1915 shall apply to said Railway and to the said Peterborough Utilities Commission, and their duties, authorities and powers in connection with the same, and that the said Peterborough Utilities Commission, with the consent of the Council shall have authority to borrow money for the purposes of the railway and shall have such other powers in connection with the management and maintenance of the Railway as the Council may by By Laws confer.

5.—To authorize the Council, without the assent of the Electors, to borrow such sums not exceeding $10,000 or in addition to such amounts already provided or authorized, which may be required or needed to satisfy the amount of the award, costs, expenses and disbursements created or incurred by reason of the arbitration between the City of Peterborough and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, and the litigation resulting therefrom, and also the costs of the purchase of such property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, as was a part of the plant of the said Company, outside of the City of Peterborough and adjacent thereto, and to authorize the issue of Debentures of the Corporation therefor.

6.—The amount of the rateable property of the Municipality is the sum of $11,664,230.00 and the existing Debenture debt exclusive of local improvement debts payable by local special rates is the sum of $1,928,250.59 of which the following are the particulars: Waterworks $600,000.00, Electric Lighting and Power Plant $175,000.00, Local Improvements $344,278.28, Public Schools $282,650.00, Collegiate Institute $72,225.21, Protestant Home $10,000.00, General City Debentures $537,100.00.

MAIDS OF HONOR ATTEND QUEEN

Clever Girls of Noble Birth Eligible for the Position.

Dating back to the end of the sixteenth century, when James I. appointed four "damsels of clear birth and good breeding" to attend on his Consort, under the direction of a "dowager of discretion"—a personage often called "the Mother of the Maids," a post long since abolished—the position of Maid of Honor to Britain's Queen is a much-coveted one.

The privileges and advantages attached to the position are many, but a Maid of Honor must of necessity be an exceedingly accomplished young woman. In the first place she must be a granddaughter of a peer, if not nearer in blood; for, unless some special provision is made, the office cannot be held by anyone below that rank. Secondly, she must be a good linguist, not only because of the foreigners she will meet at Court, but because she will be called upon to deal with some of Her Majesty's private correspondence.

A Model of Discretion

Her conversational powers must be considerably above the average, brightness and vivacity, too, being a distinct recommendation. A talent for music and singing, and an ability to read aloud with clearness and expression, are also qualities which are taken into account in appointing a Maid of Honor.

Above all, however, a candidate must be a model of discretion and tact, who avoids gossip as she would the plague. To a Maid of Honor Court secrets are a closed book. It is a rule that she must not keep a diary, which recalls the witty reply of one Maid, who, when a female acquaintance remarked that if she were a Maid of Honor she would keep a secret diary, promptly said:

"Then you would no longer be a Maid of Honor."

One of the curious privileges of the post of Maid of Honor when in waiting is that of being allowed to wear a charming miniature of the Queen set in diamonds on the left shoulder. This ornament, which bears the date of the Coronation at the back, is surmounted by a flat bow of red and white ribbon, and when the owner is in waiting is worn on the left side of the corsage, like a decoration. But at other times it can be worn as a brooch or a pendant.

Courtesy Title

A Maid of Honor is not expected to give up her badge when she marries or if she resigns her post, but may retain it to the end of her life, and would wear it on any future occasion when she happened to find herself in the presence of their Majesties.

The courtesy title of "Honorable" is also hers, whether single or married, until the end of her existence. Everyone may not know that a Maid of Honor is expected to have a home of her own in London when the Court is at Buckingham Palace. A Royal carriage is, however, sent every morning to convey her to the scene of her duties.

The usual rule is for a Maid of Honor to be in close attendance upon the Queen from ten or eleven o'clock in the morning until for or five in the afternoon, and again in the evening every day for two months in the year, the position carrying with it an allowance of $2,000 per annum. The late Queen Victoria had eight Maids, but the number was reduced to four by Queen Alexandra, and is maintained by Queen Mary.

Rhubarb Pie

Peel and cut into one-half inch pieces two cups of rhubarb. Over this sprinkle two level tablespoons of flour, mix until all the flour adheres to the rhubarb. Beat one egg with one cup of sugar and a pinch of salt. Put the rhubarb into the egg and sugar mixture. Stir up well. Turn into pie pan lined with rich pie-crust, cover with upper crust and bake twenty minutes and insert a piece of macaroni about three inches long and allow it to remain in while baking. Then the pie will not "run out."

Old-time Surgery

Writing on the old methods of surgery, a medical man says that even the torture of the rack could not have been much worse than the old method of reducing a dislocated shoulder. Less than 200 years ago the way of surgeons with a man who had put his shoulder out was to hang him by the armpit over the top rung of a ladder, and let strong men pull at his arm whilst others pulled at his feet. It was always said in those days that men soon lost their power to feel, and modern physiology confirms the idea that intense pain brings its own anodyne.

WHEN HUNS FLITTED IN DEAD OF NIGHT

Dramatic Episode at Courcelette before Canadian Position—Canadians Rejoiced

When the Canadians were at Courcelette one of the most dramatic incidents in the campaign happened, writes Stanley Rutledge, of Fort William, Ont. The flanks had been driving hard for three days, the result being that the German centre was shoved up into the apex of a triangle so to speak. The pressure was constant but the Huns held on. We were opposite them, and by reason of their precarious position a vigilant watch was kept in order that we might make any retirement costly. When night came on the flares were being shot as usual. The enemy was nervous, but their centre still held. Green lights, red lights, white lights spiralled into the gloom.

Fled in the Night

But in the morning the scouts and snipers, who do the greater part of the close observation, reported a "great calm." There were no signs of Fritz. Not a head appeared above the top row of sand bags. We were on guard against a surprise, yet every report said: "There is no movement, the trench seems to be unoccupied." About 12, noon, a party of bombers went up an old trench that led into the German line; they took the precaution of throwing bombs but no reply was made. Our men went on and on.

The thing became contagious. Our boys climbed over the parapet and wandered at will over "no man's land." Where was Fritz? It was as if peace had come! Canadians were everywhere gathering souvenirs, taking up new lines, bringing in German wounded from shell holes. "Just like a bloomin' picnic at home," remarked one chap. Never have I felt so buoyant. Men laughed, joked, shook hands and became again as children. Those who were there will never forget that afternoon.

Located a Mile Away

Of course, the Germans had gone back to a new line of defence—a mile back. They were busy consolidating and that accounted for the quietness of the scene. We found them at night when our patrols were out. Such happenings give relief to the great tension and an insight into the compelling force applied to the enemy by France and Britain on the Somme.

GERMAN SURPRISE ATTACK NEAR BERRY CHECKED BY FRENCH.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Jan. 25. — The war office has announced a German surprise attack south of Berry-au-Bac last night was checked by the French. There is no change in the situation on the front.

Lieut.Guynemer has brought down his twenty-seventh aeroplane.

BERLIN, Jan. 5. — Considerable activity by artillery and a continuation of patrol engagements on the Franco-Belgian front are reported by army headquarters today.

In reconnoitering operation Hanoverian troops overwhelmed a French post three times their own force and brought them back prisoners.

THREE TO ONE AGAINST AN IMMEDIATE PEACE OFFER

Labor Party Demand Conscription of Accumulated Wealth to Lighten Financial Burdens'

Tax Unearned Incomes 15 S. in the Pound.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MANCHESTER, Jan. 25.—Immediate conscription of accumulated wealth to lighten the financial burdens of the war is demanded in a resolution adopted unanimously today at the annual meeting of the Labor Party. The resolution calls for taxation of not less than fifteen shillings in the pound on unearned incomes, direct taxation of land and nationalization of the banking system.

In introducing the resolution, Ramsay Macdonald, Labor member of the House of Commons from Leicester, said that after the war the country would be left with a debt of twenty billion dollars, with an annual fixed charge of more than one billion dollars.

The conference this afternoon rejected by a vote of more than three to one, a resolution favoring an immediate offer of peace proposals.

BROTHER OF MRS. W. A. HOWARD PASSES AWAY

Mr. W. J. Morrison, a brother-in-law of Fire Chief Howard, died in Toronto last night. Mrs. Howard is in Toronto and the Chief will leave this afternoon to attend the funeral.

REEVE W. A. ANDERSON

Chairman of the County Property Committee, who will have charge of the reconstruction of the Court House.

MANY GAMES OF HOCKEY ON THE OPEN AIR RINKS

BOYS MUST NOT MONOPOLIZE THE ICE AS THEY HAVE BEEN DOING.

Boys who play hockey on the municipal rinks must not monopolize the ice The youngsters have been in the habit of playing hockey whenever the spirit moved them and other children have been forced to give up skating. Some rude boys have acted in a manner that has brought forth the displeasure of parents living in the neighborhood of the rinks as it has frequently been the case that little girls and smaller boys have been treated unfairly by the hockeyists.

Cards are being put up at the rinks setting forth the hours during which hockey may be played and when the rinks are for skating only. The hockey players had better obey the regulations.

Incidentally, it should be stated that Mr. Harry Evans is giving much time to the rinks and the youngsters can thank him for the good ice which is provided.

GERMAN RAIDER

Captured Steamers Fitted Out for Raiding.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTEVIDEO, Jan. 25. —It is reported here that the German raider in South Atlantic waters is the Cap Ortegal, a Hamburg-South American liner of 8,000 tons, which left a German port disguised and evaded British cruisers, and, capturing two British steamers which had sailed from the River Plate, took them to the West coast of Africa, armed them and started them out raiding in the South Atlantic.

TRAGEDY ON TRAIN

Detective Shot and Instantly Killed by Prisoner.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

DETROIT, Jan. 25. — Provincial Detective Jackson of Winnipeg was shot and instantly killed this morning on a train two miles east of Windsor by "Sheenie" Anderson, whom he was bringing to Battle Creek to answer to a charge of robbery.

Anderson stunned the officer with a blow from his manacled wrists, seized his pistol, shot him, and then jumped from the train and escaped.

PTE. HAROLD HATCHER OF OF 93RD KILLED IN ACTION

Yesterday two letters were received from Pte. Harold Hatcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas F. Hatcher, 139 Stewart St., in which the writer wrote that he was well and feeling fine. This morning an official message conveyed to the parents the news that their son was killed in action on Jan. 17.

Pte. Hatcher, who was 21 years old, enlisted here in the 93rd Batt. He had been in the trenches only a short time when he met his death. A brother, Pte. Walter Hatcher, is at West Sandling Camp, England, having gone overseas with the 39th Batt.

Medals Presented

At Lindsay medals were presented to Miss Tilly Mann, graduate of the Ross Memorial Hospital, who has recently returned from service overseas, and six returned soldiers: Ptes L. Hepburn, J. Turner, P. Brown, A. Olemett, W. H. Moyes and S. Ingle.

Pte. Muir, formerly of Peterborough, was on the platform when the presentations were made in the Academy of Music. The chairman, Mr. C. E. Weeks, said that the S. A. C. were sorry they could not present him with a medal also, but the rules of the commission do not permit them to act outside the counties of Victoria and Haliburton.

Reinforce the Second

An infantry draft for the purpose of reinforcing the ~~2nd~~ Batt., C.E.F., now at the front, is being organized at present in No. 3 Military District. Capt. S. N. Dancey, late of the 207th Batt., is in command, and will mobilize his men at Kingston. The draft will proceed overseas early in March and the greater part of the training will be carried out in England.

Corporal O. R. Brooks of Young's Point has been awarded the Military Medal for bravery. He is the son of Mr. Wm. Brooks.

Brig.-Gen. Hemming left for Kingston last night after spending the afternoon having a look over the men, equipment and records of the 247th Batt. He was much pleased with Lt.-Col. Ackerman's recruiting campaign and complimented him on his past endeavors. He granted permission to the local battalion to open a recruiting office in Port Hope and an officer will be sent down at once to start a campaign.

Capt. Thomson, Paymaster of the 247th, requests all persons having board bills against the men of the battalion to present them tomorrow and not later than Saturday as all returns must be made by that date. Failure to attend to this will cause delay in payment.

Three recruits were added to the strength of the 247th last night and this morning Pte. John Ed. Brady, Peterborough, Pte. W. Alphonso Primeau, Peterborough, and Pte. Patrick J. L. Gould of Havelock attested.

The smoker to be given this evening at the Armories promises to be a great success. Lt.-Col. Ackerman has given instructions that his men are not to do any recruiting whatever and young men who attend will not be embarrassed by questions or recruiting talk in any way. It is the whole and only desire of the officers that everyone who attends will enjoy a thoroughly good social evening. The band will contribute and the boxing and wrestling bouts will be good ones.

Lt.-Col. Gillespie, Inspector of Cadet Corps, was in the city last night. He came from Lakefield, where he inspected the cadets of that village.

Lt. Iles, who has been very successful in recruiting here for the 256th (Railroad Construction) Batt., will go to Cobourg on Monday to open an office there. The recruiting office here will be in charge of Sergt. Stanley.

Battalion Orders

By Lt.-Col. Ackerman, O.C. 247th Batt., C.E.F. Thursday, Jan. 25:

Garrison Board—

Major E. D. O'Flynn and Capt. M. G. Hamilton are detailed as members of the Garrison Board on Tuesday, Jan. 30.

Duties—

Next for duty—Lieut. T. W. Quinn

A. E. BRITTAIN, Lt.
Adjutant.

Pte. A. E. Brooks of Bobcaygeon, previously reported missing, is now reported killed in action.

URGE NECESSITY OF OPENING UP CANAL

Deputation From This City and Along Route Have Conference With Hon. Frank Cochrane at Ottawa---Encouraging Reply Received.

(Special to The Review.)

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—A very large and representative deputation from Peterborough city and county, accompanied by the members of Parliament along the route of the Trent Canal, was received by the Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. Frank Cochrane, this morning. The delegation, who were introduced by Capt. J. H. Burnham and J. E. Sexsmith, M.P., of East Peterborough, urged the necessity for the immediate opening of the canal to Lake Ontario.

Addresses were made by Capt. Burnham and Mr. Sexsmith, Mayor Duffus, T. F. Matthews, W. T. Denham of the Quaker Oats Co., and by W. H. Bennett, M.P. of East Simcoe, H. J. Walker, M.P. of East Northumberland, and C. A. Munson, M.P., of West Northumberland.

Mr. Cochrane gave the delegates a very encouraging reply and sent them away hopeful that this city will have connection by boat with Lake Ontario during the coming season.

Handsome Stone Church on Central Park is Live Institution, Place of Endeavor and Accomplishment.

The year's work at Murray St. Baptist Church was reviewed last night when, at the annual meeting, reports of fifteen different departments were presented and adopted. the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, occupied the chair and read his annual letter to the church. This showed a year of great activity and of splendid achievement in the face of the unusual conditions caused by the war. The report of the clerk, Mr. A. J. Raddon, B.A., gave encouraging numerical statistics and those given by other officers showed that the well earned reputation of this church has been well sustained during the year 1916. During the year an increased number of young men from Murray St. have been engaged in serving their country at the front and while this has to a great extent depleted the young men's organizations, it has been a cause for rejoicing that they have been willing to make the sacrifice.

The treasurer, Mr. F. M. Somerville, B.A., presented his report, which showed splendid giving on the part of the congregation. In fact all reports showed that the stone church on Central Park is a live institution, a place of endeavor and accomplishment.

The report of Mr. T. F. Matthews, the treasurer of the building and interest fund, showed that besides paying the interest on the debt the principal had been reduced by $1500. The Sunday School continues to flourish under the direction of Mr. Jos. Wearing, M.A., who is ably assisted by Messrs. W. G. Shiner and C. B. Routley. The Young People's Union has as its president Mr. C. S. Browne, B.A.

The following sums have been contributed by the different organizations of the church: For current expenses $4030.55; from weekly envelopes for missions, $1384 40; special collection for last year's overdraft, $929; interest fund, $715; paid on building debt, $1500; raised by women's Mission Circle, $422 92; for Indian Fund, $20; given by Sunday School, $519 89; fellowship fund $140 17; Ladies' Aid Society, $487.26. Young Ladies' Mission Circle, $61.75; Young People's Society, $8; contribution of church to Temple Fund, $329; Men's Association, $18; collection for Dominion Alliance, $51.50; Baby Band $2.30; Pennant Club, $18.75; offering for Soldiers' Christmas Fund, $71; total gifts for 1916, $10,719.49.

During the evening one new deacon was elected. Mr. Vincent Eastwood nominated Dr. J. B. Mann and this met with the hearty approval of the entire church.

The finance committee for the new year will consist of Messrs. R. Harding, L. J. Pettit, B.A., S. Cottingham, R. C. Read, T. F. Matthews, W. R. Breyfogle, V. Eastwood, D. Thompson, Dr. W. D. Scott, James Lewis.

The reception committee will consist of Messrs. Hughson Johnston, Harold Foster, George Harwicke, W. Boyce, Mr. Robinson, and J. C. Ellis.

Two new ushers were elected — Messrs. Stanley Gillespie and Garfield Anderson

The following were made assistants to the financial secretary: W. Browett, W. Shiner and T. Distin.

The other offices are filled as last year.

The high esteem in which the pastor and his labors in this church and community are held was most enthusiastically expressed by the meeting.

MANY GAMES OF HOCKEY ON THE OPEN AIR RINKS

BOYS MUST NOT MONOPOLIZE THE ICE AS THEY HAVE BEEN DOING.

Boys who play hockey on the municipal rinks must not monopolize the ice. The youngsters have been in the habit of playing hockey whenever the spirit moved them and other children have been forced to give up skating. Some rude boys have acted in a manner that has brought forth the displeasure of parents living in the neighborhood of the rinks as it has frequently been the case that little girls and smaller boys have been treated unfairly by the hockeyists.

Cards are being put up at the rinks setting forth the hours during which hockey may be played and when the rinks are for skating only. The hockey players had better obey the regulations.

Incidentally, it should be stated that Mr. Harry Evans is giving much time to the rinks and the youngsters can thank him for the good ice which is provided.

Tax Unearned Incomes 15 S. in the Pound.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MANCHESTER, Jan. 25.—Immediate conscription of accumulated wealth to lighten the financial burdens of the war is demanded in a resolution adopted unanimously today at the annual meeting of the Labor Party. The resolution calls for taxation of not less than fifteen shillings in the pound on unearned incomes, direct taxation of land and nationalization of the banking system.

In introducing the resolution. Ramsay Macdonald, Labor member of the House of Commons from Leicester, said that after the war the country would be left with a debt of twenty billion dollars, with an annual fixed charge of more than one billion dollars.

The conference this afternoon rejected by a vote of more than three to one, a resolution favoring an immediate offer of peace proposals.

TRAGEDY ON TRAIN

Detective Shot and Instantly Killed by Prisoner.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

DETROIT, Jan. 25. — Provincial Detective Jackson of Winnipeg was shot and instantly killed this morning on a train two miles east of Windsor by "Sheenie" Anderson, whom he was bringing to Battle Creek to answer to a charge of robbery.

Anderson stunned the officer with a blow from his manacled wrists, seized his pistol, shot him, and then jumped from the train and escaped.

PTE. HAROLD HATCHER OF OF 93RD KILLED IN ACTION

Yesterday two letters were received from Pte. Harold Hatcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas F. Hatcher, 139 Stewart St., in which the writer wrote that he was well and feeling fine. This morning an official message conveyed to the parents the news that their son was killed in action on Jan. 17.

Pte. Hatcher, who was 21 years old, enlisted here in the 93rd Batt. He had been in the trenches only a short time when he met his death. A brother, Pte. Walter Hatcher, is at West Sandling Camp, England, having gone overseas with the 39th Batt.

Medals Presented

At Lindsay medals were presented to Miss Tilly Mann, a graduate of the Ross Memorial Hospital, who has recently returned from service overseas, and six returned soldiers: Ptes. L. Hepburn, J. Turner, P. Brown, A. Clemett, W. H. Moyes and S. Ingle.

Pte. Muir, formerly of Peterborough, was on the platform when the presentations were made in the Academy of Music. The chairman, Mr. C. E. Weeks, said that the S. A. C. were sorry they could not present him with a medal also, but the rules of the commission do not permit them to act outside the counties of Victoria and Haliburton.

Reinforce the Second

An infantry draft for the purpose of reinforcing the 2nd Batt., C.E.F., now at the front, is being organized at present in No. 3 Military District. Capt. S. N. Dancey, late of the 207th Batt., is in command, and will mobilize his men at Kingston. The draft will proceed overseas early in March and the greater part of the training will be carried out in England.

Corporal O. R. Brooks of Young's Point has been awarded the Military Medal for bravery. He is the son of Mr. Wm. Brooks.

Brig.-Gen. Hemming left for Kingston last night after spending the afternoon having a look over the men, equipment and records of the 247th Batt. He was much pleased with Lt.-Col Ackerman's recruiting campaign and complimented him on his past endeavors. He granted permission to the local battalion to open a recruiting office in Port Hope and an officer will be sent down at once to start a campaign.

Capt. Thomson, Paymaster of the 247th, requests all persons having board bills against the men of the battalion to present them tomorrow and not later than Saturday as all returns must be made by that date. Failure to attend to this will cause delay in payment.

Three recruits were added to the strength of the 247th last night and this morning Pte. John Ed. Brady, Peterborough, Pte. W Alphonso Primeau, Peterborough, and Pte. Patrick J. L. Gould of Havelock attested.

The smoker to be given this evening at the Armories promises to be a great success. Lt.-Col. Ackerman has given instructions that his men are not to do any recruiting whatever and young men who attend will not be embarrassed by questions or recruiting talk in any way. It is the whole and only desire of the officers that everyone who attends will enjoy a thoroughly good social evening. The band will contribute and the boxing and wrestling bouts will be good ones.

Lt.-Col. Gillespie, Inspector of Cadet Corps, was in the city last night. He came from Lakefield, where he inspected the cadets of that village.

Lt. Iles, who has been very successful in recruiting here for the 256th (Railroad Construction) Batt., will go to Cobourg on Monday to open an office there. The recruiting office here will be in charge of Sergt. Stanley.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1917.

CAPT. BURNHAM IN THE HOUSE.

CAPT. BURNHAM'S first-hand knowledge of military affairs in England and that gathered on his visit to the trenches stood him in good stead in Parliament by enabling him to silence the criticism offered by Mr. E. M. Macdonald in the conduct of the war and the care of wounded Canadians.

Mr. Macdonald asserted the soldiers from this country were being cared for in hospitals in some cases by first year medical students instead of by fully qualified physicians. Capt. Burnham, who had been among the sick and wounded, was able to testify to the provision that is made for the patients, and to add that he had never heard one word of complaint from the men in hospitals.

Mr. Oliver also objected to the breaking up of Canadian battalions when they reach England, an objection that is based on sentimental rather than on practical grounds. Here again Capt. Burnham was ready with an answer. The wastage at the front must be made up promptly. Only those men whose training has been completed are fit for active service, and no others are sent to France.

The men in a battalion in Canada and their friends at home would like to see every such battalion go to the trenches as a unit, but this is clearly impossible in the stress of war. The places in the ranks made vacant by sickness, wounds or death must be filled, and any criticism of the methods adopted by the military authorities is ill-judged and without warrant.

BUYING AT HOME.

A READER OF The Review in North Monaghan takes exception to an editorial which appeared in these columns recently and in which reference was made to the case of a farmer who sent a large order for goods to Toronto instead of purchasing them in this city. The reader in question maintains that there should be no discrimination in these matters and that the city residents should be criticised on this score as they, rather than the farmers, are the chief offenders, if patronizing outside firms can be regarded as an offence.

The Review has certainly never discriminated in this matter, as a reference to its files would show. It has [illegible] recognized a tendency on the part of a certain class of city residents to either send their money outside or to go to Toronto to make purchases. Peterborough is really impoverished by the amount of these purchases, because the money so spent is removed from circulation in this vicinity, and those who pay it out can never hope to have it in their possession again.

The prosperity of the city depends upon the farmers to a large extent, and the value of every farm in Peterborough County is set by its distance from the local market. Farmers and urbanites will flourish in proportion as they work together for the common good. If the former have developed a habit of patronizing mail order houses, they are certainly doing no more than are the residents of the city themselves.

The merchants of Peterborough can certainly hold their own with any dealers in the country, and their prices are regulated by the keen competition that exists everywhere. Any man who imagins that he can buy cheaper goods—the grades to be considered always—in Toronto than in Peterborough, is under a delusion which will be dispelled if a careful investigation into the matter is made.

OUR RURAL SCHOOLS.

THERE IS CERTAINLY something radically wrong with the county schools, as shown by the report which Inspector Lees has submitted to the County Council, even though some degree of progress has been noted during the past few years. The attendance is not satisfactory when it is compared with the number of children of school age on the roll. Although the certified standing of the teachers has improved in recent years, the frequent changes of instructors in the rural sections is still a drawback to the education of the pupils in those communities.

This changing of teachers is easily explained. In the first place the compensation which they generally receive is not large enough to induce them to remain. The difficulty of securing proper boarding places is another reason. The advantages and conveniences of urban life remain as an inducement to tempt them to forsake their places in the country.

While the attendance at the rural schools is irregular and the changes in teachers frequent, the children in the country will always be backward in their educational equipments. The annual examination for entrance to the High Schools will surely tell the story when about ninety per cent. of the candidates from city schools are successful, and fully fifty per cent. of those from the country fail to pass. That was the record at the examinations last summer, and it is one that is likely to be repeated year after year.

There is nothing to prevent the establishing and maintenance of schools in the country that will be just as well equipped and efficient as those in the city, schools at which the attendance will be regular and in which properly qualified teachers will remain year after year.

The consolidated school, as recommended by Inspector Lees, [illegible] the solution of the problem. [illegible] longer an experiment, as the system has been tried out with success in other places. The original cost of making the change may be heavy, but this is a matter that will soon regulate itself. There are now too many teachers engaged in Peterborough county for the number of pupils on the roll. A vast amount of energy is going to waste, energy that could be conserved and employed to some purpose by a proper system of centralization.

The county legislator who will take this matter up can render the rising generation a real service besides making a record for himself.

SIR WILFRID AS A NATIONALIST.

IN A SPEECH in Parliament in 1892, according to the records of Hansard, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said:

> "I have again and again repeated that the goal of my aspiration is the independence of Canada, to see Canada an independent nation in due course of time."

Again, in an interview in The Toronto Globe, during the South African war, with regard to sending troops to help the British army, Sir Wilfrid said:

> "There is no menace to Canada, and, although we may be willing to contribute troops, I do not see how we can do so."

Has Sir Wilfrid Laurier lost sight of what he once declared to be "the goal of my aspiration"?

Thrown out of office after another effort to bind the Dominion by commercial ties to the United States, he became more bitterly resolved and more openly active in his war on the British connection. When the Borden Government, aware of great danger threatening the Empire from Germany, and, after consultation with the Admiralty, offered three Canadian dreadnoughts to increase the effective naval forces of the Empire, Laurier engaged in a struggle which every Canadian will long remember.

He scoffed at the Admiralty memorandum.

He ridiculed the idea of an emergency.

He fought the Naval Aid Bill through every stage in the House of Commons.

He caused his partisan majority in the Senate to kill it.

He encouraged Germany.

He forced the Admiralty to supply the additional ships which Canada was to have given.

Look again at Laurier's record: Opposed Confederation; endorsed the rebellion of Riel; was a party to the annexationist commercial union policy of 1891; advocated separation from Britain in the United States in 1891 and in Parliament in 1892; attempted to block Canada's assistance to the Empire during the South African war; opposed any naval aid in 1902 and 1907; his naval policy of 1910 was a separatist policy; his trade policy of 1911 was an annexationist policy; his naval opposition of 1912 was a deliberate attempt to break away from the Empire; he refused to co-operate with Sir Robert Borden in appealing for recruits; has hampered the Government's prosecution of the war by petty, carping criticism; and finally, and worst of all, endorsed an anti-British, anti-war candidate in Dorchester to embarrass the Administration and enfeeble Canada's war effort.

And this is the man who seeks to be made Prime Minister of Canada, entrusted with the destinies of the Dominion, when the Empire is battling for its life.

What would the election of Lucien Cannon, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's candidate in Dorchester, mean? Simply that the people of that constituency are of the opinion that Canada should make no more sacrifices in the present war. Cannon's election could be regarded as nothing less than a public misfortune.

"Yes, it is a good idea, all right," agreed the man who wore the ulster. "but like all other ideas, it doesn't work out well until the employes learn how to handle it.

"[illegible] there was my boss. He decided that owing to the high cost of living and everything he would hand out $150 extra to his boys. His plan was to give them $75 now and $75 next summer. That sounded mighty good at first, but after the fellows got to thinking it over $75 didn't seem to be so much, after all. When they figured it out with their wives they found that there was $750 worth of things they wanted to do with that $75. Besides, they wondered why the boss couldn't have given the $150 all at once, instead of waiting six months for the next instalment."

"They shouldn't have told their wives anything about it," said the customer in the pink necktie.

"Guess you don't know much about wives," observed the cynical auditor.

"Yes," said the pink necktie person, "the boys in my office got a bonus like that and tried to keep the news from their better halves. They had an awful time. You see if only one man told his wife that would be enough to spread the news among all the wives. The boys had to get every man to swear he wouldn't mention it to his wife.

"Then they were afraid the wives would read about it in the newspapers. The men arranged to devise ways and means of keeping the papers ayay from their wives. 'Get up early, grab the morning paper and take it away with you,' was one plan. 'Send your wife to the picture show and meet the paper when it comes in the vening,' was another plan. 'Stop the paper for a few days,' was a third.

"One nervous man persisted in the inquiry. 'But suppose she does find out?' He made all the fellows so uncomfortable that he had to be bribed with cigars to keep silent. A man who kept saying 'It's all right for you fellows, but you don't know Mary!' had to be threatened, and a young chap just married, a sentimental fool, had to be jollied and cajoled into the right frame of mind. It was all very wearing. Several fellows who talk in their sleep had to take dope that would keep them awake. In the end it yas decided that they would have to tell, anyway, fork over the $50 and take chances on being able to explain why there wasn't more."

"They might have known better in the first place," declared the proprietor.

CIRCUMVENTING THE BOOK AGENT

"Well," he began, "how did things go today?"

"Fred," Mrs. Pringle returned, you never fail to ask that question. But, honestly, I did have the funniest experience this morning.

"About half-past ten the nicest looking young man came to the front door and wanted to know if he was speaking to Mrs. Frederick Pringle. I told him 'yes,' and then he asked if I had a boy George and a girl Madeline in the Central school. He seemed to think it couldn't be possible that I should have two children old enough to go to school and seemed so pleased that I couldn't help feeling pleased, too. So when he said he was from the board of education I was so surprised I let him right in.

"After he sat down he began to ask me questions about the children; wanted to know what grades they were in and how they were doing and seemed so interested I thought the board must pick out fine young men as its employes.

"Then he began to talk about parents' co-operating with the teachers. He seemed to think the best way was to furnish the children with books at home, so that they could employ their evenings to advantage.

"Then he reached inside his coat and brought out a reference book, with all sorts of facts and figures in it. He wanted to sell the book and wanted me to sign a contract to pay $1 down and $1 a week for nine weeks."

"Book agent, eh?" exclaimed Pringle, with a chuckle. "and he took you in. A woman falls for that sly stuff every time. I suppose he sold you the book and then took orders for a set telling you how to mow the lawn, paint china and build Mary Ann furniture. Well, where's the book?"

"He did nothing of the kind," retorted Mrs. Pringle. "I simply took him at his word and let him ramble on. I seemed just as interested as he did. Then I asked him again if the school board had sent him. Without actually saying that it had, he contrived to answer as if the board was responsible for the book and for his coming, and as if it wanted everybody to have the book.

"So then I passed a lot of compliments about the board and asked him if he knew Mr. Rummer. I knew his name and business because Sadie Hartman tried to get him to help her get a teacher's place, and I went with her to call on him. The nice young man said he was well acquainted with Mr. Rummer.

"Then I went to the telephone, right behind where the young man sat, and while I held down the receiver hook I pretended I was calling up Mr. Rummer. I made believe I got Mr. Rummer and then I said that I happened to have not a dollar and since I was such a friend of his couldn't I have the book without paying the dollar and without signing anything. Then I pretended that he said I could. I asked the young man if he didn't want to talk to Mr. [illegible] Of course, he didn't want to talk. He was most polite and said that would be all right. But he said he couldn't leave the book because he carried that for a sample, but that he would be right back with another copy for me. And he left. He hasn't been back yet.

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Pringle, surveying his wife through his glasses with undisguised admiration.

EXCITEMENT IN FLIGHTS OVER LINES OF GERMANS

Shells Bursting All About Belleville Boy's Machine.

R. J. Elliott, a Belleville representative in the Royal Flying Corps, writes:—

France, Dec. 20, 1916.

Dear Mother: I have the pleasant job of orderly officer today, which necessitates my staying in the orderly room tonight, so I might as well write a few letters.

Today has been the best day we have had since coming out here, so naturally we made the most of it. The clouds are very high and the sun shining, quite a surprise for this time of year.

I started out with an observer to take some photographs of Hun land and it being my first time really over the lines I was quite excited about it. We got across all right and were about five miles over the lines and nobody bothered us at all. I was quite happy and thought aerial work wasn't nearly as bad as it is painted so I cruised around for about half an hour and did my work and then decided to return home. I had no sooner turned when, bing! and a shell burst about 50 yards on my left and exactly the same height and others followed. For the next ten minutes until I had crossed the lines I had the most excitement I have had yet in my life. The shells were bursting all around us and the noise was horrible. Why they didn't hit me, God alone knows. I kept swerving the machine sideways, up and down and doing things I should not have dreamed of ordinarily, and to make matters worse, a Hun machine turned up from nowhere and took a few shots at me. Luckily my observer saw him, for I didn't. It was a great relief, I can tell you, when I got back to the lines and they stopped firing. I think I will soon get used to it as there is a fighting squadron in our aerdrome and they get fired at continually when in the air and never seem to mind it. One of our new machines was hit today and another got into a fight with a Hun and no mishaps, so we are all very pleased with our first day of it.

Since the above was written Lieut. Elliott has made with safety several successful flights over the German lines.

THE LOST YEARS

By Edna Deane Merriam

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman)

"You can't do better. I've handled dozens of men in your fix. Look here, you owe society a grudge. The world has robbed you of name, fortune, the best years of your life. Pay them back. I offer you the chance."

"Thank you, no," said John Thurston, simply and turned on his heel.

The tempter, a man who financed criminals and made them his slaves, sneered decidedly. John Thurston went on his way, dejected, unhappy, hopeless.

A month to a day he had been released from the penitentiary after serving a five-year sentence. The man he had just left had sought him out, had tried to induce him to join his colony of burglars and petty thieves whose services he would repay with money and protection.

It was the injustice of his punishment, that had galled the proud spirit of John Thurston, clerk in a country bank, all but engaged to sweet Alice Lisle, life all before him, the abstraction of a package of money had been laid to his charge. He had been arrested and sentenced.

When he came out of prison he found that a relative had left him a small legacy. He secured this and came to the city to begin life all over again. He had learned that Alice Lisle had long since left the little village where they had once both resided. Of course she had forgotten him. Even if not, what would she have to do with a convicted thief?

And now, wherever he had applied for work his record had come to the front. Even the criminals had tolerated him and strove to influence him as one of their hateful guild.

"I am a marked man!" breathed Thurston bitterly. "I give up the struggle."

Dark thoughts came into his mind and they ended in the resolve of suicide. He reached a pawnshop and viewed with grimness its array of weapons. A veiled woman was bartering at the counter inside. He waited until she had left. Then he entered the place.

"Thank you, no," said John Thurston simply, and turned on his heels.

Thurston was about to state his intended purchase of a revolver, when he happened to notice the article upon which the pawnbroker had just made a loan. He started. His whole being thrilled.

It was a locket. It bore two portraits. One was himself, the other of the only woman he had ever loved. Six years since he had given that keepsake to Alice Lisle.

The pawnbroker started strangely as he noticed his emotion, for Thurston had reached out and had seized the locket and was inspecting the initials upon its outer case.

"Tell me," he spoke, his voice in a tremor, "did the woman I noticed just leave this here?"

"She did," responded the pawnbroker. "What is your interest in knowing?"

"Because—because—did you see her face? It is not curiosity. It is vital that I should know."

"Yes, I noticed that she resembles her picture there. Mine is a hard business, my friend, but we money leeches, as they call us, have a heart—sometimes. I pitied the poor girl, for she looked poor and sad, and she kissed the locket at leaving, weeping and begging of me not to sell it if she could not redeem it soon."

"Did you get her address?"

"I always ask that. You are interested and you look straight. There it is."

Hurriedly John Thurston copied the name and address on the pawn-ticket, "Miss Lisle." Then she had not married! He thanked the pawnbroker, forgetting all about suicide now, and hastened from the place.

The address he had received led him to a poor tenement building about a mile distant. He made cautious inquiries to learn that Miss Lisle and a lady friend occupied a rear attic at the top of the building. Five minutes later, standing on a roof stairway, Thurston looked through an open transom into a wretched room. A fire was burning, evidently just started, and some parcels on a table indicated that they had just been purchased, probably with the proceeds of the loan made from the pawnbroker.

Upon a bed lay the wasted form of a woman. She was weeping, while her hands were outstretched in love and gratitude towards Alice Lisle, who was bustling about the room and cheerily making it more comfortable.

"Oh, you are breaking my heart, you are so good to me!" sobbed the woman on the bed. "Here for a month you have cared for me, a stranger, half-starving yourself, and at last parting with a lost love memento, the locket—"

"Better times will come, dear," interrupted Alice comfortingly. "I shall surely get work, and you, too, when you are well. We shall redeem my poor cherished token of a happy past," she added sadly, "for I would not lose it for anything. Be brave, dear, there will yet come to your patient soul showers of blessings."
